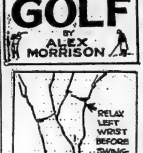
Two team trophies are up for competition, the Sir Arthur Currie Trophy for the team gaining the most points in high school or collegiate competition, and the Gleason Trophy for the team with most points in all divisions.



With the latter trophy goes recognition as Canadian school track and field champion.

Only one senior champion, Ted Rock, Ottawa's high-leaping specialist, is defending his title. He heads the contingent from Ottawa Glebe Collegiate which last year won the Currie Cup with 37 points.

Toronto Central Technical School, four points behind Ottawa a year ago in the Currie competition is defending the Gleason Cup.

In a properly made swing the left wrist becomes the pilot. By following the action of this member you can tell just what is happening in the rest of the swing.

Very often a player senses that the swing is jagged, that he doesn't have the full free use of it, and he can't find out why. He will go over his swing carefully and find no cause for the tension.

He fails to look into the preliminary moves he makes in gripping the club and addressing the ball. The left wrist, when it locks, invariably does so before the swing proper is started. If you find that your wrist is tight, by all means give some attention to the way you place your left hand on that club. After placing the hand on the club so that you can see only the back of it, waggle the club back and forth slowly. During this waggle, move your wrist until it is relaxed. It'll do much to improve your whole swing.

SPEED, AGILITY SEEN IN CARD

Sam Wilkins Will Oppose Danny McDonald in Main Bout

Interspersing speed and agility with science the light-heavyweight wrestling will return to the Belleville Arena on Tuesday night featuring, in the ninth bout, Danny McDonald, the Canadian middleweight champion, who will defend his crown against Sam Wilkins, the Michigan wildcat at 180 pounds. Two weeks ago McDonald and Lefty Priestly of Toronto semi the fans away from the local arena when they grabbed each other in a scientific wrestling coupled with some fancy gymnastics to hold the patrons spell-bound. McDonald demonstrated his legitimate wrestling holds and his ability to evade his opponent's punishing holds, than ever shown locally before by any one wrestler and his ability to repeat his feats of yesterday slightly at Wilkins out-weighs the champ some ten pounds.

Interesting match between these two Canadian middleweight champions

The semi-final scrap is nothing short of a continuation of a draw bout fought in Belleville last fall when the detested Red Devil, a behind guy who wears a red mask wrestled for 45 minutes to a draw with Bill Handley, the Toledo flash. When these boys clashed their rough and tumble bout that saw no quarter asked or given last autumn and it resulted in a draw fight with neither had gaining a fall after 45 minutes of strenuous wrestling, the local management has been continually after these two devil to finish their scrap of six months ago and only recently were they able to sign both men at the same time. There is no love lost between these two middleweights, both of whom are recognized as top-notchers in their respective class. A preliminary will open the show.

The local team held a splendid practice last night and will taper off this afternoon with a batting practice, leaving only the arrangements of the opening ceremonies until Monday. Weather permitting, it is estimated that an overflow crowd will attend Monday morning's game just to see the local "home brews" display their wares. If the kids put on an average game a monster baseball parade, headed by the Belleville Municipal Band will push off from the upper bridge and all citizens are requested to be there. Following the parade with the teams, City Council, Parks Board members and members of the baseball executive and all will join the strains of "Take Me Out To The Ball Game" when the first ball is left to make the day a huge success. Prayer over the Parks on Monday a.m.

Up around St. Michael's Academy and the Collegiate Institute the athletes are busy these days preparing for their annual field day and track meet. The C.I. will be holding their field day at the Fair Grounds on Tuesday afternoon, while the Catholics will hold their athletic meet on June 4th, just two days before the annual interscholastic meet in Napanee. The usual events will be included in both programs and members of the Collegiate will have the more lengthy, owing to the greater number of boys participating athletes. Physical Instructor Eddie Schrieber of St. Mike's, announced today that his safter-athletic program would be confined to Tuesday afternoon's field and track sprints and field events will comprise Tuesday's program.

Golf, tennis and lawn bowling will hold the pronineence on Monday. Up at the Belleville Golf Club, York Mitchell, the club pro, informs us the greens are in splendid condition for Monday's tournaments which include, competitions in the morning and two ball mixed foursomes in the afternoon. Tournaments are also the order of the day at the Bay of Quinte Country Club, where the Bay of Quinte tennis Club will also hold a day's tournament. The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club will officially open its doors with scrub games, draws to be made at the Clubhouse at 1.30 p.m. For those not taking an active part in sporting activities there will be the usual sailing races off Victoria Park, sponsored by the Rotary Club with all the trimmings of a gala day of sports and all that is needed to make the Queen's jubilee a break in the weather. Fair and warm would be quite acceptable by us.

Directly reviewing the holiday activities the light-heavyweight wrestler will hold the spot-light at the Arena, with three good bouts. Danny McDonald, the Canadian middle-weight title-holder, will defend his crown against Sam Wilkins, the Michigan Wildcat. The semi-final bout sees Bill Handley, of Toledo, meet the Red Devil. After these two boys fought to a draw in the last bout, a return is their return engagement should be "Keep 'em Rolling Pass.

Until certain arrangements are completed, the local Industrial softball teams will not play over on the Coleman Plan. Rumors are afloat in Kiwanis Juniors are putting forth efforts to have a diamond built on Coleman's property, but until these plans are completed the boys will not be seen in action on the Coleman Plain. Tuesday night, Class at Optical Industrial League will be played as per the Coleman Plaid. Mr. Lee intimated today that it would be perfectly satisfactory to him and his boys to allow the Industrialists to play on the Kiwanis diamond. "As this diamond, up a mond, up a becomes a reality later.

Exactly three weeks after the Coronation Day sports of the C.O.R.I., the umpires' free will be in Belleville once out to tell the world the story of the wonderful time that will be enjoyed in the C.O.R.I. Coronation Day and a lot of other information that will be in the hands of Belleville, Oshawa and Peterboro fans before that time. The Kingston pressure boys are not invited. The Queen's Jubilee was signed by Newton Thompson and we go on to intimate that the head of the C.O.R.I. will be the present system of umpires upon the C.O.R.I. Circuit. That's a boy coming from the "City" of the (Kingston), How the Kingston scribe got over the Kingston delegation should be able to make such broad statements. But he is a typical human comprehension, he never was present during the better part of the meeting held on May 2nd, instead of being on hand he busied himself with Vice-President Art Casserson and the entire Kingston delegation in the crowd seeing, or something, along the local main drag and did not hear a word of the discussions and voting taken.

x x x

Why Kingston should object to the present system of umpires in the C.O.R.I., we cannot for a moment imagine. The Belleville delegation gave a reasible and lengthy argument on the advantages of employing neutral umpires in 1936 with Kingston objecting strenuously. Maybe they have a few more Buster Hastings and Art Vargas they want to pass off on the other clubs in the C.O.R.I. That's an old trick in Kingston.

Hillyard "Speedy" St. Louis personally asked Manager Weir and Coach Roy Fox to be allowed the honour of pitching the opening game on Monday versus his old teammates, the Kingston Ponies Naturally St. Louis is quite anxious to turn his old teammates back which always seems to be the ambition of all pitchers, when they catch on with a second club in the same league. The fact that St. Louis was not promised the starting pitching assignment dominated it is expected he will be granted his request, however. Naturally, Speedy will be in uniform in readiness for Daley and the Ponies, if for no other reason than the fact that he allowed him to pick out of Kingston.

Mystery still surrounds the Preston case, however, and no one is to just who will hurl in Belleville is available. If the Kingston management preserved Jack Williams' transfer from Belleville, then you can wager all of the box that the "Chief" will pitch the opening game in Belleville, if he or other reason than the same thought that prevails in St. Louis' case. If Jack's transfer has not been applied for, however, then it will be Jamieson versus St. Louis with Hewitt Smith and Chuck Fournier in the ball park. Manager Fox and Frank Smith, Johnnie Bawden and Vinny Utzenti to fall back on for relief.

OGRODOWSKI — ST. LOUIS CARDS

Brusie Ogrodowski . . . Cards' No. 2 man

It's 1932. He's with Greensboro, N.C. 1934. He's with Houston. It's 1936. He's with Columbus. And it's 1936 and he's with the St. Louis Cardinals. Yes, it took Brusie Cardinals. Yes it took Brusie twister, from Elmira, N.Y., just four years to rise to major league callers, each year advancing a step to a faster league.

Brusie today is No. 2 mask man in the Cardinal farms. He's fire-ginger catcher when Virgil Davis isn't in there.

On All-Star Team

Ogrodowski is 23 years old. He came to the Cards from the American association after he hit .329 in 130 games last year. He caught 104 consecutive games for Columbus without a day away fishing. He was so good in that league that he was signed on the all-star team.

The Cardinals through one of their scouts, picked him up when he was playing semi-pro baseball at Elmira, N.Y. He was hustled down to Greensboro and then to Houston and to Columbus.

From The Mountains

A right-handed hitter and tosser, Brusie is one of the best catching prospects to come up in the big leagues for some time. He is five feet 11 inches tall and weighs 176 pounds. He was born in the mountainous countryside around Hoytville, Pa. Of course he's Polish.

The Cardinal management needed a boy to replace the injured Bill Delancey. Brusie was temporarily retired. Brusie was given a chance and during the spring session he showed up so well he has become a fixture on the squad.

COUNTY LEAGUE TO OPEN MONDAY

Secretary Releases Schedule For South Hastings League

Foxboro, May 23 (Special)—The schedule of the South Hastings Baseball League was released today by Mr. G. Walker of Melrose and Monday, May 25, is chosen as opening date. At the annual meeting, Foxboro drew a bye in the draw for starting date, so Latta and Melrose will pay off the bill at Foxboro on the holiday. Immediately after the game Cannifton and Shannonville will begin hostilities as the second half of the twin bill.

According to pre-season rumors floating around all the teams in the league are to be strengthened considerably, especially Cannifton, Latta and Shannonville. Cannifton, it is reported, have on their lineup Bud Wilkins, Bill Hammell, Dowdy and about three unknown players, all from Belleville, while Latta have persuaded Carl Casey of Tweed to turn out with them along with numerous players from Tweed who are reported to be real classy ball tossers. Shannonville have gone to Point Anne for their recruits and have enticed Sonny Green and company to turn out and help bolster their club. Melrose is an unknown quantity but it is reported they have numerous new faces on their line-up and are mostly from Belleville.

Such wholesale importation of players as this is bound to destroy local support, in the belief of many fans in this district who prefer to see local boys doing their stuff. But on the other hand it will certainly improve the class of ball played and the teams will be more evenly matched than formerly.

Following the regular schedule the second and third teams will play a two out of three series, the winner meeting the first team also in a two-out of three game series for the right to hold the Tunnacan Trophy of which the Latta club are the proud possessors having taken it from Foxboro in a hectic five game series last fall.

The 1936 schedule:

May 25—Melrose at Latta; Shannonville at Cannifton.

May 26—Latta at Shannonville; Cannifton at Foxboro.

June 1—Shannonville at Melrose; Foxboro at Latta.

June 5—Melrose at Shannonville; Foxboro at Cannifton.

June 10—Latta at Foxboro; Cannifton at Melrose.

June 13—Melrose at Cannifton; Shannonville at Latta.

June 17—Foxboro at Melrose; Cannifton at Shannonville.

June 19—Melrose at Foxboro; Latta at Cannifton.

June 24—Foxboro at Shannonville; Cannifton at Latta.

June 26—Latta at Melrose; Shannonville at Foxboro.

Parkwood Stable Public Choice to Win King's Plate

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—The field in the seventy-seventh running of the King's Plate today was cut to fourteen when the Mountain Rose Stable scratched Rough Timber.

Withdrawal of the five-year-old horse was not unexpected. He was a surprise entry yesterday. He has never faced the barrier and had not been given an outside chance.

Winner of the historic mile and a furlong event receives 50 Guineas, donated by the King, and the major portion of a $6,000 added purse.

The track, dried out by two days of bright, clear weather, was lightning fast, favoring all but one or two of the King's Plate field. More than 18,000 persons are expected to jam the stands and the spacious lawns of the track, nestled on Lake Ontario shores.

Gaining overnight favor, top-weighted Epicurus and Spearman, Parkwood Stable's color bearers, are expected to rule public choices when Starter "Nipper" Rowe sends the horses away about 4:15 p.m. E.D.T. It was not expected any will be scratched, although rain before post time might force one or two withdrawals.

Epicurus, making his second attempt to win the historic event, will carry 132 pounds, four more than R. O. Vanderbuilt's nine-year-old maiden, Hurry Fox. The colt, by Ethnard out of Sally Bay was the best of the Parkwood Stable's three horse entry last year, but he was unable to threaten the winner, Sally Fuller, a maiden filly owned by E. P. Seagram of Waterloo, Ont.

Spearman a Threat.

Spearman, assigned 117 pounds, is favored by the stable to cause the greater threat. As a juvenile, the gelding out of Wishing Well, bought from Seagram when in foal to Chicaman, started four times and won twice. During the training grind, he showed willingness to run when put under pressure and stood up well when tested over the nine furlongs journey.

Only two fillies will start. H. C. Hatch, second in 1935 with Chickpea, picked Sweepouch, a granddaughter of Pennant, sire of Equipoise, to run with Monaweep, a gelding, and J. E. Smadman of London selected Lady Much by Not Much—Lady Floyd.

Of the fifteen, Sweepouch has the best two-year-old record. The daughter of Sweepster-Mattouche started seven times and won four, including the Coronation Stakes. Dorothy Brammer, one of the best jockeys on the continent will ride her. His contract was bought recently by Hatch and he arrived in Canada a week or so ago.

Jimmy Hunter of Vancouver, another top flight United States rider, will have the mount on Samoan, Seagram's threat to duplicate last year's triumph. The unsound son of Pharos—Samoa can run. He left no doubt as to that when he won the first two starts of his career. He tailed off, however, and in four other attempts the best he could offer was a second. He pulled up lame in the early fall and was fired and retired. Judge Pool will be a runner-up.

Glanford Tallied Off.

After withdrawing Glanford, winner last year, G. M. Hendrie of Hamilton relied on Stormblown and Rock Sure. Stormblown, rated as the better, did not win in seven starts as a juvenile. He warned, however, that long races are more suited for he was just beginning to reach his stride during the stretch drive.

Mrs. R. E. Webster's Chatsy offers the best of the balance. The gelding by Challenger 3rd-Ugo 2nd was sluggish last year. Under the capable hands of Trainer Willie Walsh this fault was cured.

Albany Senators, who were losing games at an amazing clip a few weeks ago, have executed a very effective about-face and appear on their way to becoming the terror of the International League's second division clubs.

They went through 16 consecutive games without getting anything other than one tie in drop from an early third place to the league's cellar. Since the end of that string of defeats, 11 of the Senators have won nine games and lost only three. Incidentally, the only first division team they have faced in that time was Hersey's Bears, who are tied with Buffalo for the lead.

The Senators still are in seventh place, but they looked quite impressive in trimming the collar-dwelling Syracuse Chiefs 4 to 4 and reducing Toronto's sixth-place margin to two points.

Maple Leafs absorbed an 8 to 2 drubbing from Montreal Royals, who broke a five-game losing streak in the afternoon. Meanwhile Newark and Buffalo turned in Sunday triumphs to remain deadlocked for the lead. By Sunday night, Albany had unravelled Baltimore pitching for 21 hits and a 10 to 7 victory. At night the Bisons, who had been winning streak was shattered by Rochester Thursday, gained revenge on the Red Wings by pounding out a 13 to 6 decision.

Burke Shelley Out.

Starting with Alan Strange's homer in the first, Albany shelled Stewart Bowers out in less than three innings.

Ted Norris treated Lefty Bob Weiland, one of the League's leading hurlers, to a rude fashion. They belted him out of the box in the fifth inning and continued against Les Munns for ten runs in one frame. The big show was Johnny Dickshot's homer with the corners crammed. Truett Sewell set the Wings down with five hits.

Guy Sturdy, Baltimore manager, was chased from the field by Umpire Donnelly in an eighth-inning dispute over a matter of interference at the plate by Baltimore Harvey but it was a bit too late to make much difference as the Bears had piled up an early lead.

Si Johnson, former major leaguer, had little trouble in his first start for Toronto. He went out in the fourth after giving the Royals ten hits and seven runs.

SYNOPSIS

Sailing from France to America aboard the S. S. Navarre, Michael Lanyard, reformed "Lone Wolf" erstwhile master crook, meets the wealthy Fay Crosier, one of his antipathies aboard ship, and Lenore, daughter Fenno. Mrs. Crosier shows Lanyard her famous Mahogany necklace which she bought secretly to avoid payment of duty. Lanyard's experienced eye discovers that counterfeits have been substituted for the jewels. He promises to try and retrieve the emeralds. Lanyard smokes with Fay Crosier, a youthful fellow-passenger, who appears deeply interested in Fenno. The evening's dance between Lanyard and Marjorie causes the former to wonder if they are not in a trifle too familiar with two card sharks, Maurice Jose benefit. Lanyard thinks the gambler as Parry's partner, catches their suspicious dealing and threatens to expose them unless Maurice's loss is called off. Later, Lanyard tells the appreciative Marjorie he has to repay him by returning Mrs. Crosier's jewels. Parry's youth mounts the top of his cane only to find that Lanyard has taken it from him and had replaced the stolen emeralds with the stones (false, fenni). A struggle ensues for the Lanyard's son when the latter believed killed during the war. Very happy at the reunion, Lanyard is disappointed to learn that Marjorie explains he was forced to steal since boyhood in order to exist. Lanyard learns that Parry and Fenno will continue, for the boy's own good. Mrs. Crosier, whom Lanyard knew from his "Lone Wolf" days, warns him that the two gamblers he met are "Slick-Knife" Anderson and "English Archie" gangsters, and Lanyard believes. Later, while Fenno is speaking with Lanyard, a shot rings out, which he adds to say the liner's captain requests his presence in Fay cabin.

CHAPTER XI

A CRY of incredulous expostulation perhaps natural enough under the circumstances, but one to be regarded as unfortunate in the extreme as it woke cynical glints in the revolver at the end of Fay's stiffen the Captain's animus as well.

"How is that 'impossible,' monsieur? Here is Fay Crosier dead, and yourself, knew where the emeralds were to be found—"

"The emeralds, monsieur? But they are here, in my pocket—"

"What makes you assert that?"

"Madame promised—"

"I was not present last night to keep my promise."—Fay Crosier struck a pose of quite profound scorn. "So I put it off till today; and I had just taken the jewels from my trunk in there, meaning to go downstairs and give it to the purser myself, when I was shot!"

Her voice began to climb to a hysterical pitch. Lanyard's de la Rousse softened Madame not to exclude herself; and the Captain of the Captain to round out the account.

"Madame—was coming, through the barber shop door when I heard the gunshot, who must have slipped in when her back was turned and had entered himself against the wall to one side of the door. I stepped in behind her and clapped a cloth soaked with chloroform over her nose and mouth—"

"How long since—"

"Madame had no special attention to the hour. The assault probably took place between ten and eleven. The stewardess came in to do up the rooms at ten minutes to twelve—"

"Ah, madame." Lanyard lamented, "if you had kept your promise—"

"If only I had! But they do say there's no cure for a fool."

"Monsieur now comprehends, being so much in the secret, that I assumed, "that it becomes my duty to make you sure the toilet of last night without more delay."

Lanyard, his will and not be determined at all costs to shield Maurice, found no more useful shift than to feign perplexity and lack of denial: "I am desolated, Monsieur le Capitaine, but I cannot follow you. I was able to retrieve the jewels, yes, but—"

"Where are they now, monsieur?"

"What! You have the effrontery to tell me that you have returned the jewels to the owner?"

"I am sorry, monsieur. It is a matter of honor—"

"But naturally!" Plon of the Surete for the first time aided his voice to the dignity of sarcasm. "A matter of honor, indeed, with immunity. Monsieur Lanyard doubtless has not reminded us that there is honor among thieves."

"Eh?" The Captain gave a start. "To be sure I do, as you say, with the Lone Wolf that we have to deal!"

"An insolence, which you may be sure, Plon." Lanyard idly added, "you will duly report."

The French detective chose to ignore that. "Monsieur has been too much to do with thieves," he persued, addressing himself to the Captain, "to suppose me to be of such inferiorations. Once the virus gets in the blood it is incurable. There is no cure known but a life-sentence. Regard then M. Lanyard frankly as nafu he aikes with crime against society."

"You hear, monsieur!" Captain Pierard grimly bowed on Lanyard. "Be grateful that I offer you this chance—"

"And if I refuse?"

"It will become my duty to order your arrest and a thorough search of your effects for evidence to connect you with this crime."

CHAPTER XII.

"NOT" Fay Crosier cried from her pillow. "I won't have it. Please believe me, Captain Pierard, that I have every confidence in M. Lanyard; I have known him for years, I am sure he is incapable of such anything dishonorable."

"Thank you, madame," Lanyard replied. "But it is better that then, monsieur, since you have your—one cannot permit oneself to ignore the stigma of their suspicions. I shall overhaul everything, by good enough," the Captain snapped, "and if I find nothing there, by that."

"Just this." Lanyard flashed in his pocket and produced the key given him under arrest while you unpack my luggage. There are the keys"—he dropped them on the table—"search, then, and be damned to you!"

Good!" Plon with a chuckle picked up the keys. "Now we shall see what we shall see."

"What could be more true, monsieur?" Lanyard coldly inquired, "since you have no choice?"

"Enough." The Captain saw his duty clearly at last. "I shall remain and will go with M. Plon to M. Lanyard's stateroom. You will remain in meantime remain Mme. under formal arrest. M. Dupont,"—he addressed the steward stationed at the door—"you had found Lanyard for him—you will be good enough to see that the prisoner neither leaves this room nor holds any communication or communicating with his confederate."

"My dear Lanyard!" As the door closed Fay Crosier groaned, and hid her pillows without heeding the heads of her hair. "I am so sorry!"

"So temperamental, I beg you, madame," Lanyard sat down, smiling "I quite understand. But—what would you?—I am here, with these many suspicions that one pays for one's much prosperity."

"I suppose so." The lady sank back, and accepted an offer of smelling-salts. "All the same, I do feel like the devil about it. I was born to think that my telling about last night might embarrass you—"

"Not in the slightest, I assure you, madame. I am only saddened by the evil I have done in the past, which has always made me suspect that one pays for one's every mistake."

"The emeralds, monsieur? But they are here, in my pocket—"

"What makes you assert that?"

"Madame promised—"

"I was not present last night to keep my promise."—Fay Crosier struck a pose of quite profound scorn. "So I put it off till today; and I had just taken the jewels from my trunk in there, meaning to go downstairs and give it to the purser myself, when I was shot!"

Her voice began to climb to a hysterical pitch. Lanyard's de la Rousse softened Madame not to exclude herself; and the Captain of the Captain to round out the account.

"Madame—was coming, through the barber shop door when I heard the gunshot, who must have slipped in when her back was turned and had entered himself against the wall to one side of the door. I stepped in behind her and clapped a cloth soaked with chloroform over her nose and mouth—"

"How long since—"

"Madame had no special attention to the hour. The assault probably took place between ten and eleven. The stewardess came in to do up the rooms at ten minutes to twelve—"

"Ah, madame." Lanyard lamented, "if you had kept your promise—"

"If only I had! But they do say there's no cure for a fool."

"Monsieur now comprehends, being so much in the secret, that I assumed, "that it becomes my duty to make you sure the toilet of last night without more delay."

The Missing Man

-by-

Mary R. P. Hatch

"Such beautiful silk-white hair, and yet she does not look old," said Constance, recalling to mind the elegant, dark-robed slender lady who presented a great contrast to busy Mrs. Hill.

"Mother is only forty-six but she has known much sorrow," said her son, and then they talked of other things.

In a year from their first meeting they were married, but this was 22 months after Vane's mother died, so Constance never suffered jealousy or estrangement as sometimes happens on account of a mother-in-law; and she always remembered the sad, gentle woman who might, had she been here, be a real mother to her.

Vane's mysterious journeys began the spring after their marriage, and they took place always in May. She will she recollected her own disappointment at not being invited to accompany him; she, almost alone of all he left while he went alone on his trip!

Worst of all, he never told her where he was going, nor his object in going, and from that day forward now it had been a mystery. Among the townspeople they were looked upon as business trips to Boston, but she herself knew that he went elsewhere. And she stayed home two weeks. Once he left her quite ill, though out of danger, the physician had assured him. Another time she asked him to take her with him and he refused. Always there was an air of secrecy, a grave abstraction, no intangible difference in his manner, as if called about an irksome business.

Meanwhile Clare and Perley were added to their home, and they had been happy through the eight years of their married life despite the mystery of his yearly trips. For she loved him. She was sure that he loved her; but each time as the middle of May approached she grew nervous, and in various indirect ways tried to hinder his going.

This year he was unusually far from well, notwithstanding his declaration that he was as "strong as a horse." He was more nervous and irritable, besides being very absent minded at times. Then, as she had resulted him, his sleep was broken by dreams and restlessness. Sometimes he seemed to be struggling with heavy loads, or many pieces of lumber, and always ready to be overwhelmed. Then again it was fretful outbursts directed to strangers; and last night he whispered a woman's name, "Leonora Norris, pretty name!" That was all he said, but it was a strange name to Constance. Perhaps it was the name of some one he used to know.

Well, there was one fact manifest, thought Constance, rising. Vane is not well, and he ought not to have gone away. As for that woman, pshaw! Doubtless Vane was petnied out to her by some one at the hotel as a prominent citizen who could tell her anything she might wish to know regarding the place, and so she went out and spoke to him. Her husband answered the questions, passed on, and that was all there was of the matter. As for the mysterious trips, she would not think of them. She trusted her husband thoroughly, had always done so, and should continue to do so. She only wished he had not thought best to go away when it looked so much like rain.

Just at that moment the sun burst out. The most unbelieving could not call the weather into question, but still the cloud on Mrs. Hamilton's brow. "Some woman," she whispered, for she was alone, "would suspect their husbands of wrong-doing, to go away as Vane does every year so mysteriously;" and then she went slowly downstairs to her own room, paused on a stair to listen to the children's voices in the dining-room. "I have them, at all events," she thought.

Going straight to her mirror she gazed long at her own reflection, noting the clear, colorless complexion, the dark, luminous eyes, the rich brown hair with its gleams of gold, the tall, graceful figure, and the intangible charm which blent them all together into a charming personality, her own. She loved her husband deeply, and was not insensible to the compliment he paid her when going away. Why did he go, if he did not wish to? Surely his business did not demand his absence. He had no relatives. He did not go for his health; besides, his trips were yearly. A wave of color spod over her face and she clinched and her hands nervously.

Just then the children came rushing in, and Perley said, clasping her hand, "I am glad you are pretty, mamma, I should hate to have a homely one, shouldn't you, Clare?"

"I should get used to it in time, I presume," said the precise little maiden.

Mrs. Hamilton took them both in her arms and hugged them tightly for a moment. Then she made them tidy for school, but instead of letting them go off alone, she put on a street dress and went with them.

"I will go with you a little way," she said.

"Oh, mamma, will you? How fair!" asked Perley.

"Perhaps as far as the Emery House. I want to see Mrs. Fry. She is at work in the laundry this week, I hear, I must see her in regard to our washing."

But, most of all, she wished to learn something about the woman who had spoken to her husband. How she wished she had looked at her through the field-glass she had in the tower! But it had not occurred to her at the time. As it was, she had only a rather vague idea that the woman was young and pretty, and the uncomfortable conviction of jealousy on her own part which she must try to rid herself of speedily. What better way than to learn something about the woman, and her object in speaking to her husband? She would not ask leading questions, but if the desired information came to her, well and good.

CHAPTER II.

A GREEN-HAIRED WOMAN

Amos Talbert, the comfortable, genial landlord of the Emery House, had a wife and daughter; the latter unmarried, though not of uncertain age as she had not the least objection to say one's knowing that she was forty-two. With her bright complexion, brighter eyes and manners, she was one of the most attractive ladies in Grovedale, and it was no task, therefore, for Mrs. Hamilton to chat with her a few moments before asking to see Mrs. Fry.

"She left the laundry not half an hour ago to run over home of an errand," said Miss Talbert. "Has she come back, Miss Chase?" she inquired of the dressmaker who sat by the window of the private parlor altering a dress.

"I think not," replied Miss Chase. "Then I shall not see her," thought Mrs. Hamilton. Well, it was no matter. She would not probably know anything about the lady stopping there.

"Have you many guests in the house now?" she asked Miss Talbert a little later.

"Very few steady boarders, but a good many 'transients'."

"I wonder if the green-haired lady is gone yet," said Miss Chase, looking up from her work with a smile.

"Yes, she went on the seven o'clock train."

"On the train with my husband," thought Mrs. Hamilton; but you may be sure she did not say this.

Instead she repeated wonderingly, as she looked at Miss Talbert with polite interest, "a green-haired lady!"

"I am not surprised at your surprise," said Miss Talbert, laughing. "You would wonder still more if you were to see her. She came on the train last night and went away this morning."

"But you don't mean to say her hair is actually green, do you?"

"Not a bright, vivid green, but a scribe. She was taken on such a sheen emerald tint had to decolor sometimes in the shadow of an overhanging cliff. You should see it, Mrs. Hamilton. She is very pretty, has lovely features, and a sweet voice. I was quite charmed with her."

"I think she knows Mr. Hamilton," said the dressmaker, "for she ran out to meet him when he came down the street."

"Ah! perhaps you know her too," said Miss Talbert, looking at Mrs. Hamilton. "Her name was booked as Mrs. Anderson, Newark, N.J."

"Oh, I do not, she answered, "and I have never heard my husband speak of a green-haired acquaintance. Perhaps she went out to ask him a question;" but the absurdity of this idea occurred to her as soon as she branched it; "or he may never have thought to mention her to me."

"Doubtless they met long ago, for she looked out the window, saw your husband, and started up as if frightened, or, at least, greatly surprised. 'He here!' she said, and opening the parlor door she ran down to see him. I fancy Mr. Hamilton was surprised, too. He looked so. She had just come down to get a Speedo and thread to take a few stitches in her travelling-jacket," said Miss Chase, buffing to Miss Talbert.

Still undisturbed by the strange elephant's mighty challenge, Tarzan continued on his course. Evidently, he thought, the giant beast mistook him for an enemy, but with his uncanny ability to establish friendship with animals, he expected to prove he was a friend.

The mottled beast came slowly onward with strange, rolling gait, like some monstrous engine of destruction, his great trunk lashing in violent rhythm with his bellowing. The Jungle Lord called to him again in soothing tones, but the creature appeared not to hear.

At the jungle's edge, Beach awaited the awesome encounter. According to savage law, this beast was Beach's property, but the guardian of the Vale of Death, who destroyed every living creature that entered his domain.

When the elephant gave no sign except of furious charge, Tarzan, stepped short in surprise. Only then did he catch the beast's eye, and see therein the fire of utter, raving madness! In the next instant, Ouabi hurled himself suddenly forward in a frenzied charge!

CONSTIPATION MAY LOWER RESISTANCE TO GERMS

Can Be Corrected by Natural Laxative Food

Common constipation is due largely to insufficient "bulk" in meals. It is a condition that should be treated consistently.

Long neglected, it may contribute by a general run-down condition. Your body, then, needs strength it needs to fight off infection. You are much more likely to pick up a germ or illness.

Guard against common constipation. Make sure the meals you eat contain plenty of "bulk." Kellogg's All-Bran is a generous source of effective "bulk."

Within the body, the "bulk" in All-Bran absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, and gently cleanses the system. All-Bran also furnishes vitamin B and essential iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily, with milk or cream, are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require All-Bran at first. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Serve All-Bran in some form each day—as a cereal, or cooked into muffins, breads, etc. Eat it regularly for regular habits.

Guaranteed by the Kellogg Company. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Jobs Constituted 'Front' Say Police Investigators Probing Life of Red Ryan

Gangster Organized Criminal Activities of Paroled Convicts

TRACING OTHER CRIMES

Police Believe Lachute, Que. Holdup Engineered by Ryan And Gang

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—The theory that Red Ryan was a "rubber-stamp" criminal by day and a real one, a terrorist, by night gained headway today as Ontario police authorities—for which security to determine whether he had a hand in crimes during recent months.

Ryan, handsome, well-dressed Ryan, popular man-about-town and principle of men in high places through fraternal connections, escaped from penitentiary last July, lived an undercover life in Toronto that only a few other criminals knew about. That much, at least, is known to police.

What Toronto police received the astounding news that Ryan had been killed in Belleville, a leader above holdup, then immediately opened an investigation into his criminal activities. They went to his automobile garage and found gunpowder, sticks, nitro glycerine, fuse rope and caps.

They found it was learned, that the red-haired gangster of post-war years had been in partnership with three penitentiary and organizing criminals, operating used automobiles and began manage a hotel. Those jobs, which were said to have earned him almost $10,000 a year, constituted his "front".

Police began to satisfy themselves that Ryan was one of three men who held up a bank of Montreal branch at Lachute, Que., and escaped with more than $10,000 in cash. Two witnesses slapped the bank manager over the head and fought a long-range gun battle with police before fleeing over the border into Ontario.

ARABS FEARFUL OF IMMIGRATION

Landless Arab Proletariat Feared as Result

London, May 26 (AP)—The serious spread of Arab riots and bloodshed in Palestine is being met by "thoroughly reorganized and adequate forces," to prevent an actual rebellion, it was stated in official circles, November 26.

Nevertheless, the fear of the spread of the outbreaks in widely separated districts is making it difficult to cope with the attacks and is causing concern in the British Government.

Britain recently protested to Rome against what it called the diffusion of Italian radio propaganda in Arabia. Informed sources here, however, said the chief, but not the immediate source of the trouble was basically racial.

Arabs Versus Jews.

Arabs fear the Jewish immigration and that the influx of Jews are threatening to produce a landless Arab proletariat which will be the master of Palestine.

J. H. Thomas thanked in his seats of office as Minister of Colonies today to the King and Queen than Lord Peel, relinquishing office just as the Palestine disorders are becoming graver. The situation may compel Prime Minister Baldwin quickly to announce a successor. Thomas resigned when his name was linked with the "budget leak" scandal.

VESPER SERMON SERIES IS BEGUN

Rev. I. B. Naylor at Tabernacle Speaks on Man's Dual Duty

A series of brief vesper sermons was inaugurated on Sunday evening by the Rev. I. B. Naylor at the Tabernacle Church to mark the beginning of the season.

"Trust in God and do good," and the sermon text, which the minister called "a simple creed," emphasizing the dual aspect of human duty. There was what he said often seems on duty to God, but today the chief interest is the stressing of human service.

"To man," said Mr. Naylor "God has become little more than a shadowy mystery. We have lost the sense of the immediate presence. The world needs to recover that sense."

Rev. Mr. Naylor pointed on the to David Livingstone, who died the unchanging presence in his life.

"Do good with all thy might. Do good greatly, not with blare of trumpets, do good by stealth and blush to find it fame. We should be good Samaritans to all those who need help most. Do good from the right motive. Do good without advertising.

"Many of us do not realize our kinship with others. If we did, we should be expressing the love of God shed abroad in our hearts by God's being by doing. Trust God and give you life, power, peace, joy, God."

BELIEVE ROADSTER USED BY SLAYERS

Examine Car Found in 'Red' Ryan's Garage

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—Provincial Police believe a bullet-riddled roadster found in "Red" Ryan's garage Saturday night following the gun battle in Belleville, was used by the men who killed Steven Stonehouse of Markham, near Toronto, March 1.

Inspector A. H. Ward of the Provincial Police Criminal Investigation Department, has completed examination of the car and reported it to Chief Constable Willis Chapman of Belleville who is holding the bullet-riddled driven by three men who fatally shot Stonehouse and wounded his son, Jackes, in an attempt to rob their Markham garage.

The guns used by Ryan and Harry Pomeroy, Belleville bank robber-holdup-thug brought death to Constable John Lewis and the two Provincial officers, were sent to Ottawa for examination by ballistic experts. Comparison of bullets will be used to determine definitely if the same guns were used in the March bank robbery.

End Sought Ryan

Montreal, May 26 (CP)—Chief of Provincial Detectives Wilfrid Jargaille announced today his men had been seeking a bandit now believed to be Harry Thomas "Red" Ryan, shot to death in a hold-up in Barnston, Que., in connection with a bank hold-up at Lachute, Que., two months ago.

Chief Jargaille said Ryan was believed to have been one of two who escaped into Ontario and disappeared after robbing the Lachute Branch of the Bank of Montreal of $3,500.

Ryan, a local ticket-of-leave was easily obtained by such hardened criminals as Ryan, the chief said.

"Very few men are ever ready recruits for crime, without leading a life primer, however short," he said. "I am sure that Ryan was not a criminal like Ryan that they are ready to kill anyone. Many people are bluffing, and even if they mean to shoot they are afraid to pull the trigger at the time of the assertions they usually turn back to their homes.

"The case of Ryan can be pointed to as a perfect example of the exactness of my belief. The judges in our criminal courts have given several occasions remarked how often ticket-of-leave men and paroled convicts are let off with short periods after their liberation for new charges of criminal offences."

Cheekley's Body Unclaimed

Barnia, Ont., May 26 (CP)—As Barnia awaited today funeral arrangements for Constable John Lewis, 28-year-old victim of two gunmen who were wanted for the city's heroic dead. The funeral who couldn't be reached murdered Lewis in cold blood here Saturday night.

Police authorities of Ontario, the city council, members of the police force and civic employees will be among the thousands who crowd the First United Church this afternoon for the public funeral service. The city hall will be closed and flags will fly at half-mast.

Pall bearers will include Patrol Sergeant Charles Smith and Detective Frank McGirr. Those two trailed the lone Ryan, notorious bank-robber who was "reformed" and freed from Kingston penitentiary by Premier Hepburn, who killed Ryan's accomplice, Harry Cheekley.

While the world at large believed Ryan to be dead, Barnia police saw for the first time in his adult life, Ryan stalked into the government liquor store here Saturday night. He carried two guns. A cloth mask concealed the lower part of his face. His flaming hair was dyed brown.

He went in accompanied by the smaller Cheekley, to conduct a $600 holdup. With the boy-chief as his criminal career, perhaps, he was sensational. Ryan, the "reformed" bandit-thug-bank robber-holdup man, was killed by Cheekley.

No One Guessed It Was Ryan.

Congressman's Wife Leads a Weary Life

Green Wants to Dance With Sixty Dance at Night Club

New York, May 26 (AP)—It was a weary little wife who persuaded Mrs. Mary Bonchech, wife of Congressman of Seattle to return to her hotel after a night spent hours of "cutting up" at an Upper Manhattan night club, it was said today.

"New York is too tame for me," she told reporters as she followed him 21 year old wife into the elevator.

Bonchech whirled his wife around the dance floor, holding her by her wavy auburn hair, to the tune of terpsichorean exhibitions.

The couple's specialty "strip" dancer appeared.

As Madge Carney, a stately blond, went leaving the floor after her "negligee dance" Bonchech threw his shoulders up and down. Lewis Leon, one of the managers of the club, finally persuaded him to dance with his wife instead.

Daughter of Famous Curies May Join French Cabinet

Mme Joliot-Curie Mentioned as Possible Secretary of State

IS SCIENTIST

Paris, May 26 (AP)—Mme. Irene Joliot-Curie, whose parents gave radium to the world, may become the first woman member of a French cabinet, it was learned today.

Mme. Joliot-Curie conferred with Blum.

Mme. Joliot-Curie, who is about 36, has been known principally as a scientist. She and her husband have been working in the Curie laboratory at the Radium Institute, founded by her mother, and continued to produce radium substitutes in greater quantities.

Ottawa, May 26.—(CP)—Opposition to the Government's action at the last session of the Ontario Legislature giving a larger share of Corporation taxes to Separate Schools was voiced here yesterday at the Provincial Grand Lodge meeting of the Orange Young Britton Association of British America.

The Opposition came in a resolution passed by the meeting and an address from Col. T. A. Kidd, Conservative member of the Legislature for Kingston.

Magistrate Warns Of Wages of Crime

Toronto, May 26 (CP) — The name of "Red" Ryan was not mentioned but the meaning was obvious when Magistrate A. L. Tinsley today addressed remarks to a man who appeared on vagrancy charges after being found in a lane under suspicious circumstances.

"You have only to look in the papers to find out where a life of crime will get you," said the magistrate.

The three were remanded for sentence and dismissed with the warning.

Her father, Pierre Curie, died when she was still a small girl, but she was trained by her mother to carry on the family tradition of scientific research, already crowned by her parents' discovery of radium.

9 HON. GOVERNORS ARE ADVOCATED FOR RADIO BOARD

Special Committee Recommends Powers Similar to B. C. C's

Unanimous Report is Presented by Chairman A. Beaubien

Ottawa, May 26 (CP)—A Canadian Broadcasting Corporation composed of nine honorary governors working through a general manager has been recommended to those enjoyed by the British Broadcasting Corporation, was urged upon parliament today by the special committee appointed to inquire into radio administration. The corporation would have additional powers to regulate and control the character of its programs, political and advertising.

Chairman Arthur Beaubien (Lib., Provencher) presented a unanimous report which will be debated by the house later after members of the House have an opportunity to read it. The report urged that legislation carrying out its recommendations be introduced at the present session.

Adoption Means Changes.

Adoption of the report would mean abolition of the present Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission, members, appointed in 1932, and repeal of the Canadian Broadcasting Act of that year. It would also mean return to the radiotelegraph branch of the Department of Marine of control over all technical and scientific aspects of broadcasting, leaving the corporation to devote its time to regulation, production and broadcasting of programs.

Main submissions of the 37 witnesses heard by the committee were reflected in the report, with particular attention paid to political broadcasts which featured the inquiry. Future political broadcasts must be restricted to addresses must be fully sponsored, and must be subject to regulation and control by the corporation, with no political broadcasting of programs on election day or the two days immediately preceding.

Co-operate With Stations.

The corporation would be instructed to co-operate with the private stations in the final selection of committee concluding that pending complete nationalization (which was reaffirmed as a principle) the listening public would be to a large extent benefited upon private broadcasting.

Suggestion is made that the corporation be given power to borrow up to $1,000,000 from the Dominion treasury to extend its coverage of isolated portions of Canada either by linking with existing stations with Canadian networks or by establishing new ones.

Submission of telephone companies that they should be placed on an equal opportunity with the telegraph companies in bidding for wire line business was rejected in the report. It was recommended that rates charged companies set up for review the telephone companies, preferably those companies in the private provinces be given consideration.

Proper Control "Lacking".

The committee said that "the closest possible co-operation" should be established between the Corporation and The Canadian Press in the matter of broadcasting news.

With reference to the commission it proposes to replace, the report said evidence was given which showed that under the existing organization there was a lack of co-ordination in dealing with some of the problems and was found "a lack of proper control by the commission" in the conduct of Elwell broadcasting and a loose administration of Commission affairs.

If endowed with the powers assigned by the B. B. C. the proposed corporation would have authority to publish papers, books and magazines, collect news, receive royalties for literary, musical and artistic works, acquire and sell such and patent rights, and to establish and support pension schemes for its employees.

TWAIN'S STORY TOLD SCHOLARS

Mr. J. O. Herity is Speaker at Prince of Wales School

Last Friday afternoon the senior pupils of the Prince of Wales School were privileged to hear The Tale of Mark Twain" by Mr. J. O. Herity of this city.

Mr. Herity needed little introduction as this was his third annual visit to this school. "Mark Twain" is the pseudonym or nom de plume of Samuel Longhorne Clemens one of the greatest of American writers and an outstanding humorist, said Mr. Herity. The story of his early life was told—the pioneer home in Florida, Missouri, of the days and days at school when he had informed his mother that if it didn't make any difference he would just as soon not go back. Five years constituted his school life and then he went to work. In early manhood his first writings appeared and his books became best sellers.

Outside of his own country Samuel L. Clemens loved Europe more than any other. Here he was acclaimed in London, presented to King Edward VII and the Queen and at Oxford ancient seat of learning, Oxford, was given the honorary title of Doctor of Literature.

Mr. Herity closed this interesting address with a selection from one of Mark Twain's best known stories "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer"—the story of how one of the small boys of the village whitewashed the board fence.

Appreciation for this address was expressed by the principal Mr. K. M. Hart.

FRED KELLY, NOW ON PAROLE, HELD

Charged With Breaking And Entering Service Station Sunday

Fred Kelly, released on parole, was arrested early Sunday morning by local police and today faced a charge of breaking and entering a service station on Chamilton Road early Sunday morning. Appearing before Magistrate Butler today, he was remanded without plea until Friday.

Following a call, that a break-in was in progress at the Superior Service Station on Chamilton Road by the desk sergeant shortly after one on Sunday morning a call was sent out to the police car in charge of Constable Arnold over station C.J.H. the police car was on patrol, and at the time was near the Bay Bridge. On the meantime Constable Thomson came in for his lunch hour and being notified jumped into his own car and proceeded to the scene of the call. Constable Arnold had much further to go with the police car than Constable Thomson, but the police car arrived very shortly after the latter was made.

Constable Thomson, stated in his report, that he heard glass breaking and some one running on gravel as soon as he entered the station door and going around the corner of the building, saw a man going through a fence and immediately gave chase. The man, who afterwards gave his name as Fred Kelly, fell down, when going down a slight hill and got up and started to run again but he was caught by Constable Thomson who upon him and made the arrest. Considerable glass was left at the service station, while the prisoner was taken to the police station and upon Constable Thomson's return the two officers entered the building with Jack Sears, 115 Lingham Street, who was called to the scene, but from the appearance of the safe on examination, the sum of money in it was found to be intact. It is stated, that paint was found on Kelly's pants and coat and his hands were torn and also there was a fresh cut on his leg presumably sustained, when he fell running down the bank.

Kelly was sentenced for the part of the break-in and theft from the National Sanitarium some time ago and at the time of his arrest was out on parole.

King Edward Saw New Sword Salute at Parade

London, May 26 (CP)—The King saw the new sword salute for officers for the first time when he visited the first battalion of the Irish Guards at Chelsea Barracks.

This salute has only just been introduced and approved by the King. It is the officer's reward for years at an ample arm his body concerts to the right, instead of pointing it down in front of him as before.

When the King stepped on to the parade ground he was wearing the dark blue undress uniform of Colonel-in-Chief of the Irish Guards. Lieut-Colonel J. S. N. Fitzgerald, commanding the first battalion, gave the order "Irish Guards, Royal salute, present arms".

The King stood with his white-gloved hand at the salute while the band played the National Anthem.

Real Turns Over

Mr. Robert Colcrell and Mr. William Meyers, while out sailing in Fred Lyon's bat-winged sail boat on Sunday had the misfortune of turning over. The breeze became quite stiff in the afternoon and Colcrell who was holding the sail, not thinking, reefed it in and as a result the boat capsized. They clung to the boat for about an hour before they were sighted from the shore. An unknown man went to their rescue and with his help they righted the boat and sailed it partly out. Jack Kidd seeing, that someone was in trouble had started out in a boat and he proceeded to tow the boat and the boys to shore. The boys were none the worse for their experience and went off home soaked to the hide.

FASHION PLATE

LUCILLE BALL

Rumor has it that Lucille Ball (above), up to now more or less in the "extra" class, is likely to become the successor to the late Lilyan Tashman as Hollywood's best dressed star. Bernard Newman, famous fashion designer, says "For a long time I have noticed that Lucille Ball, on her moderate income, has been a lot better dressed than the big stars, with their unlimited means. I think this girl will become a second Lilyan Tashman, and, with the studio behind her, she is apt to make them the fashion world any minute".

FOREST FIRE IS OUT OF CONTROL

Six Lose Lives Trying to Stop Progress in New Jersey

New Gretna, N.J., May 26 (AP)—A forest fire which took five lives broke into new fury today fifteen miles from the place where hundreds of weary firefighters thought they had finally conquered it.

The division fire warden's office at Mt. Holly reported the blaze was "going fast" at Chatsworth where it first started Sunday and whence it roared southeastward to trap a party of veteran firefighters and civilian conservation camp workers last night.

Four bodies were found near Stafford Forge, half way between Tuckerton and Chatsworth, and a fifth member of the party died of burns on the way to a hospital.

Thirty-three others among the 50 who went into the woods together were unreported, but in the battle against the flames no one could say positively whether more than five had died.

REBELLION IS SEEN IN HOLY LAND RIOTS

Jerusalem, May 26.—After 40 days of guerilla warfare by Arabs against Jews and government forces there was a growing conviction among many observers today that Palestine is undergoing a major, well-organized rebellion, rather than simple anti-Jewish disorders.

Since April 15 there have been fifty deaths by violence, twenty-seven of them Jews. Twenty of the dead were Arab rioters, killed by police and troops. One was a Christian, whose slayer mistook him for a Jew. Another was a British soldier, killed yesterday in a clash with Arabs attempting a wholesale jail delivery of Arab convicts, and another victim was an Arab constable.

OLDEST WRITING DISCOVERED

The city of Uruk was situated on the shores of the Euphrates and was deserted about 200 A.D. because of lack of water.

VICTORIA DAY CELEBRATION

Victoria Day was observed with oldtime unanimity yesterday though it is over thirty-five years since Queen Victoria passed from the stage of this life. But memory of the late Queen and the associations of the day linger though several generations have come since she ruled. Coming on the twenty-fourth day of May, this day since Good Friday and in one of the finest of the months, the day will be marked for many years to come in Canada.

"RED" RYAN CASE.

"Red" Ryan is gone, leaving a record of which no man can be proud. He has also left lessons by the violence of his career and the eclipse of his parole in the murder of a peace officer and by his own death at the hands of police. The man who was made his freedom after twelve years in the penitentiary as a reformed criminal fooled everyone with the murders and which came to his parole. He let down those who so toiled incessantly to secure his release, leaving them sad but wiser perhaps, but puzzled as to what had happened in his mental makeup to permit him to leave prison at a time at least of the ten months he was out of prison on a double life of a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde variety.

His precautions and the completeness of his plans as the discoveries of bandit equipment in his car revealed, proved he was still the master criminal he had been years before. His companion, who was shot down in the same raid for money on the liquor store at Sarnia on Saturday evening is said to have been a criminal. Here is the still companionship again! Then came the shooting show Red Ryan still the leader.

Most persons feel that it was well that such a menace to organized society should fall by the bullets of the police protecting law and life. This trap which Ryan laid and which proved the death trap for the two is another of the hardest criminal that the police and law are supreme. People will feel that it was better that he should realize the futility of his wasted life as he fell wounded and admitted that he was "done". There is a great deal of talk today about the shock which the thought of the gallows gives a murderer and also of the sense of horror which it strikes in men who might murder but for the fear of the rope, but to the gangsters who are coward at heart who will not give the police a chance, it is safe to say that when these social parasites and enemies are shot down by the police, gangland feels more of a shock than if Ryan and his mate had recovered from their wounds to be hanged. In the United States the death of enemies of society in their tracks while perpetrating crime has a deterrent effect on the zeal of gangsters.

Ryan convinced many of the sincerity of his conversion by his work as an orderly in penitentiary and his admonition to other men in prison of the evil of their ways. But a few more doubtful and they read aright. They saw that the formidable record of crimes which Ryan had committed was something very unnatural in a man, that it was really a part of his nature. They feared his release. Ryan took that parole and it made still easier his life as a criminal. He played a fine front as a car salesman and as employee, making quite a large income, which protected him from suspicion, he wrote letters which he knew would please as well as deceive his best friends and kept up it is believed association with a few in the underworld in this province. He could talk in letters of riff-raff coming from the prison, but it was with criminals his real life was lived, the life hidden from all but a few.

Never did a man leave penitentiary with so great an opportunity as clubs, sportsmen, clergy and businessmen placed everything at his disposal. He took it and no doubt acted the double part. Other men have left prison but with no such chances as were his.

No doubt Ryan liked the double part—the role of acting. To be named as the reformed criminal all the while he was leading the old life in spirit at least, probably tickled his vanity.

What happened? Or did anything happen inside that mind? Was he really changed at time or was he acting? Was it a thrill which he had spoken of as the goal of such an act? What made him disregard human life and others' rights as he did? Some say there was a mental weakness, which failed to feel responsibility and to respond to kindness, except to deceive.

Anyway Ryan is a sure proof how hard it is to live down a past. It is not that his past hurt him in making a living. It really helped him, strange to say in a way it helps few if any others. But his great enemy was that something in Red Ryan which made him a criminal years ago. There were the years of a mind thinking in terms of crime.

Psychologists know that acts become habit, habit becomes character and character last of all is the man. It would seem that the "Red" Ryan of crime was crystallized beyond power to save him. He may have had flickerings of the better way as he wrought as an orderly and as he secured parole from prison, but underneath was the "Red" Ryan of crime. The human mind in spite of advances of science still baffles with its mystery.

His return to crime and his murder of a constable will have effect on the parole system as it extends to the criminal the benefit long recorded, the first offender is a different matter, but with the criminal of many acts of wrong doing, the question of release is serious. Yet many reforms have been claimed for the parole system. At present there is talk of reform of the prison system. At any rate Ryan's outbreak will intensify the need of penal problems.

From England's fleet a Spirit's array
Came a rousing cry on a fateful day:
"England expects this day, of you
All that a Briton may dare or do!"
And those words still boom with unslack-
ened pace
To every man of the British race;
Day after day, year after year,
They still bring courage, and hope, and cheer
And British hearts, throughout all time,
Wherever they may dwell,
Will still be swept to heights sublime
By Nelson's last farewell.

Again the "scraps of paper float on war's heated breath"
Again the tramp of armed men presage bloodshed, and death.
Did a noble woman's dying cry as she faced the firing squad
Leave a war-mad world this message, ere her spirit sped to God?
"Patriotism is not enough!" Years hold that echo yet;
Haply, will the world remember, though some would fain forget.
"Am I my brother's keeper?" Can time
this truth efface?
The love of man goes deeper than color, or creed, or race.

SOME MEN DIE AND ARE FORGOTTEN, outside of the small circle in which they moved while on earth. Other men die and are never forgotten, they live forever in the minds and hearts of those who loved them on earth. This is vividly shown in the case of the widow of Eugene Field, beloved poet of the people, who in danger of losing her homes was rescued by friends of her husband she knew nothing of, Eugene Field had a large following and his poems depicted many curious and lovable features of his day with delicious humor and a bit of irony, perhaps. He was very popular but he died and his vogue passed away, classed now with parents and grandparents-like, just old-fashioned. Mrs. Field lived on a beautiful estate in Wisconsin, but evil days came as the royalties from her husband's writing became smaller. Arrears on mortgage payments amounting to $3,000 threatened foreclosure. Friends of Field heard about it and there was some newspaper publicity. Plans were canvassed as to the best way to meet the situation, but solution came quickly when the New York Alumni Chapter of Phi Delta Theta, of which Eugene Field was a member, offered to advance the $3,000 required to satisfy the judgment and save the 155-acre estate of Mrs. Field who had invested $60,000 in it.

SCOTLAND'S FAMOUS SEA SERPENT, or whatever it might be, has been laying back out of the spotlight for some time, doubtless saving for the tourist season so open before showing itself to an incredulous world. In the meantime Belleville has stolen a march on the braw Scot by the discovery of a sea monster which lives in the water and feeds on the land apparently, has a warlike and aggressive head which spits and hisses and no doubt breathes fire and brimstone. Scotland's monster is probably just the enlargement of one of those German Der Tag naval jokes overwhelm by long immersion, brought from the depths of Scapa Flow where Der Tag fleet has been laying safely beneath many tons of water and sea drift. Belleville's monster may be the ghost of some wandering celebrity invited here in the dim and distant past by Billy Miles to make a speech on some occasion or other, with many others, who lost his way on his manuscript and is just crawling out to ejaculate "So this is Belleville".

FAMOUS WAR HERO WEDS

On an August night in 1918 London was warned to "take cover" as the German Zeppelin L33 flew over with a cargo of bombs. Lieut. Flight Lieut. now Squadron Leader S. D. Culley was on a small farm in Surrey as a conchyer. He managed to take off—a tricky job—and engaged the Zep single-handed. He silenced the Zeppelin's machine-gunners, and then dived under the airship, pouring incendiary bullets into her belly. She fell, flaming, into the sea. The sero-plane, caught in a gust caused by the exploding oxygen, also fell into the sea, but the gallant pilot was rescued. Squadron Leader Stuart Douglas Culley, D. S. O., is taking up his duties as Group Captain, Worksop, England, after their marriage. She is the former Marguerite Villamy Bastile. A guard of honor greeted swords as they left the church.—(C.P.)

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Puds Simkins was walking along just walking along, and I said, G. look what some kid must of just dropped.

Meaning a little blue hankerchief with black marks on it where people had stepped on it in going passed and Puds said, It must belong to one of those 2 ladies because they're the only ones in site.

Meaning 2 ladies away up the other end of the block and still going, and I said, Let's run after them and ask them. We'll each ask one, and whoever asks the one that dropped it will get the reward because she offers one. I'll ask the one on the outside, I said.

I'll ask the one on the inside, Puds said.

Being the only one left, and we ran after them all our mile and cawt up to them, saying, Hay lady, hay lady.

Me meaning the one on the outside and Puds meaning the one on the inside, and they stopped lawking and looked around, and I stuck the hankerchiff up at the one on the outside, saying, Does this belong to you?

Well of all things, how dare you ask me if I own such a disgusting disgusting looking object? the lady on the outside said.

Meaning no, and Puds grabbed the hankerchiff and poked it at the lady on the inside, saying, Is it yours, lady?

Take that away from me or I'll give you a smack, the lady on the inside said.

Proving it wasn't hers either, and they both kept on going, the outside lady being the tallest and the inside lady being the fattest, and I said, Well hay, I got another idea, let's both take it home and try to sell it to our mother, and no matter which one buys it we'll divide the profits equal.

The result being my mother took it with a pair of tweezers and brought it out in the front room, and Pud's mother bernt it alive.

Bad Weather Blamed

Airmen blamed bad weather for the crash. They said Clarke was on the usual route followed by flyers in the north country. He had flown it in daylight many and foul and always reached his destination.

Among those going to investigate is Captain Roy Brown of Toronto, who, with Squadron Leader Carter, won the Victoria Cross in the Great War.

When Clarke failed to report to Rouyn, Que., headquarters of General Airways, Ltd., miles from here, Pilot Gath Edwards was sent out in search of him.

Plane Upside Down.

He found the wreckage. The plane was upside down. There were six bodies. Edwards would give no further information pending arrival of company officials.

It is believed three unidentified dead were prospectors Clarke picked up at Parker Lake and Presqu'isle Lake. With Springer as passenger he was believed to have picked them up as he returned to Rouyn after an inspection of mining properties.

Ryan's accomplice was Harry Checkley of Toronto.

Car Stolen April 8.

It was established that the car Ryan and Harry Checkley used in the Barrie robbery Saturday night was stolen from a Toronto garage April 8. It was a Chevrolet sedan.

Provincial Police Inspector Albert Ward and Sergeant William Mcallister were in Lachute and Ottawa today in an effort to determine whether Ryan actually had a part in that holdup. Other officers tried to link the gangster with the murder of Edwin Stonehouse at Markham, a few miles northeast of here.

Stonehouse was fatally wounded when he and his son attempted to rout three men who were breaking into the Stonehouse garage in ideal a car in February. The son, James, may be asked to try and identify Ryan today.

Recent bank robberies at Collingwood and Allan Craig were also under police study.

Checkley, police believed, was involved with Ryan in several crimes in 1926 and they were convinced other accomplices also were involved.

Only Man to Go Over Falls In Rubber Ball Makes Ready To Bounce Over Brink Again

Jean Lussier Selects American Cataract for Perilous Trip This Summer Unmindful of New Rock Pile at Foot of Falls

Lussier in his rubber ball going over the Horseshoe falls July 4, 1928.

Josh Lussier

By G. C. D'WORSHAK

Central Press Canadian Correspondent

Niagara Falls, May 26.—Jean Lussier, who bounced over the Canadian Niagara falls on July 4, 1928 in a rubber ball, says he will try the same stunt over the American Falls on July 4, 1936.

Mindful of the bruises he suffered on the first trip, he says he is having a new type ball — one within another—built, so that the inside will remain fixed, regardless of the motion of the outer ball.

More Risk Now

Lussier is aware that government officials may try to stop him. They attempted to bar him the first time, but sneaked his ball down to a hut on the river's bank, six Cayuga Island miles above the falls, and soon was on and over the falls before police, regardless of what anybody intended to do about it. This time he plans to have the ball launched into the river at Grand Island, about five miles above the "point of no return" in what he terms "neutral waters" that will prevent interference.

Lussier is aware, also, that he is taking a greater risk than before, because there's a good chance the ball may land squarely on the big rock pile at the foot of the falls which was caused by recent breakdowns at the lip of the cataract.

But he dismisses it with a ready shrug that he has been daredevilling it all his life, and he's 44 years old now. And if things come to the worst, he points out, he is a bachelor and has no one dependent upon him.

Lussier recalls his experience as the rubber ball made the first trip:

"It was bumped about quite a bit as it was carried along, but there was no severe jolt until just before I went over the falls. It gave me a nasty bruise on my shoulder blade. When I realized it was starting to fall, I began to pray but in a second, it seemed I was at the bottom and the ball was bouncing up and down four or five times."

Slight Bruises

When, a half-hour after the drop, the ball was pulled from the river, Lussier was in a daze. He had suffered slight bruises, but that was all.

Inspiration for that adventure had come to him while working in a machine shop in the Bahamian Cays, at the time the late Bobby Leach went over the falls in a barrel. Lussier knew the final dip trip could be navigated with greater safety by using a ball.

Finances were managed poorly in 1928, but this time Lussier hopes to be successful enough to make life a great deal more comfortable. He has already begun contracts with tooth paste, cigarette, flashlight and automobile accessory companies, as well as a news reel concern.

Jean Bennett, charming blond star, and Cary Grant handsome virile leading man form the new romantic combination featured in "Big Brown Eyes", now on the Belle screen.

"SALADA" GREEN TEA

AT THE BELLE

"Big Brown Eyes"

Here's a your rating: A liberal helping of Jean Bennett's gorgeous beauty, sprinkled lavishly with Cary Grant, bigger, handsomer and even more likeable; add a thrilling exciting comedy drama; and tender humor for an hour-and-a-quarter. The result? One of the swellest pictures to come this way in months. "Big Brown Eyes" is now at the Belle until Wednesday evening, matinee daily.

The many fans who agree with the writer that Jean Bennett and Grant make one of the grandest romantic teams in films won't need any more information to know they want to see "Big Brown Eyes", but just to keep the records straight, let's add that it's the tale of a hotel manicurist who believes in keeping her beautiful eyes open all the time so that she sees many things which other young people don't know about.

Jean, who plays the manicurist, has a scrap with Cary Grant, her top sweetheart, and walks out on her job, winding up working for a newspaper columnist, just after, a murder shooting in the hotel, in which an innocent baby is accidentally killed. Jean's lunches are used in tying the baby killing up with a juicy robbery which has taken place, and she cleverly manoeuvres the killer into a trap so that Grant can round 'em all up with the goods firmly fastened on them. At this point, the lovers' quarrel is patched up, with a long clinch. It's a gripping yarn, with brilliant comedy moments. You'll hesitate between chills and bows of laughter . . . and that's a grand combination.

Jan Kiepura, Returns

Two of the world's loveliest voices are to be heard at the Belle on this day and Wednesday matinee and evening. They belong, respectively to Jan Kiepura, famous European tenor, and Gladys Swarthout, Metropolitan opera star, and they are on display in a new movie called "Give Us This Night" which ranks distinctively as tops in screen entertainment.

Kiepura, who won American fame in the film "Be Mine Tonight", is sensational in his first Hollywood production. His voice is amazing and in appearance and manner he is charming. Miss Swarthout, last seen in "Rose of the Rancho" is even better to look at and listen to in "Give Us This Night". Phillip Merrivale, the noted London and New York stage star, makes his movie debut as the composer, and a scrumptious debut it is. Phillips Benny Baker's comedy is excellent, Edwin C. Hill's Latest World News Events will be exhibited on the same program. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.15, the last complete show starting at 8.30 p.m. Matinee prices are 25c and 35c, 7.30 and 9.50. "Give Us This Night" starts at 2.46 and 8.50 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Story of Louis Pasteur"

Paul Muni has scored again. In the Cosmopolitan production, "The Story of Louis Pasteur," which will be shown for three days at the Capitol starting tomorrow, he has given the world not only one of the finest characterizations ever depicted on the screen but has made a real contribution to the art of motion pictures.

In a tense, smashing drama, replete with action and romance, he has painted the turbulent life of Louis Pasteur, that amazing French scientist whose battle for humanity against ignorance and prejudice is one of the most absorbing chapters in the history in an amazingly colorful picture.

It is hard to realize that there could be such mesmerizing drama in the discovery of a cure for some infection he is an almost legendary figure. The story is not just one of the microscope and the laboratory, although even that portion of the picture has been made intensely interesting. The picture dramatizes his battle against the ignorance, superstition and prejudice of the medical men of his day in favor of the court branded him as a charlatan and fought his every effort. Finally, of course, that they had him banished from Paris.

On the Same Bill

The interesting theme of "Two in Revolt" is said to make it one of the best pictures ever made. Drawing a parallel between two human souls, the film tells the tale of a love between a pedigreed stallion and a half-breed dog, and the romance between a society girl and the girl father's horse-trainer. "Two in Revolt" brings to the screen a diversified assortment of animals, tamed, trained and wild, and a human cast of stage and screen personalities headed by John Arledge, Louise Latimer and Moroni Olsen.

SARNIA OFFICER SLAIN BY RYAN

lease last July, Ryan was supposed to be selling automobiles or shaking greetings to patrons of the hotel which employed him.

He was known to have been established by his friends, those friends say, as a man with official pull. Yesterday the second bandit was identified as Checkley, "pistol" criminal whose prison sentence of 25 years totalled more than thirteen years.

Police held the belief for several days that Checkley was the slayer of Edward A. McMullen, almost as notorious as Ryan in the early 1930's. Ryan and McMullen led the most sensational prison break in Canada's history in 1923, getting away with three others over the 13-foot prison wall. Four were recaptured and the fifth shot and killed. McMullen was an older man than Checkley.

Dressed into Constable Lewis' death will be held tonight, not long after Sarnia has paid its last tribute to the policeman.

Known In Lindsay.

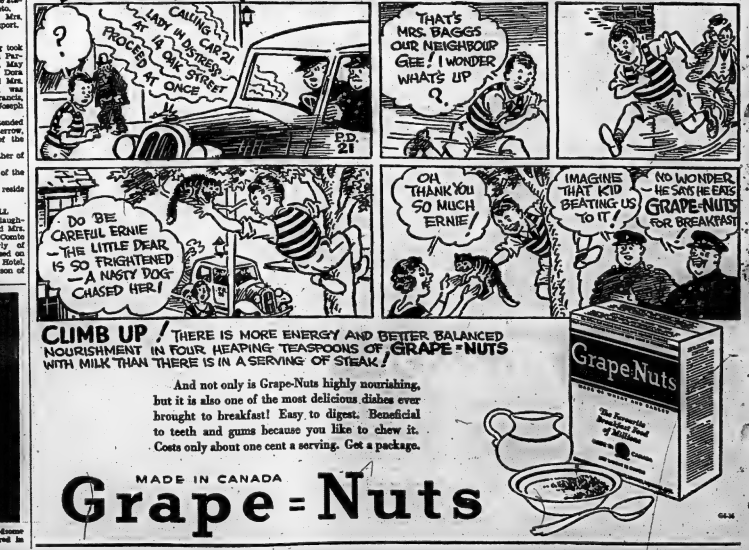
Harry Checkley, criminal pal of Red Ryan, was well known in Lindsay, his family having moved here from Kincardine when he was very young.

Citizens of Lindsay remember him as an athletic youth and a faithful attendant at the Baptist Sunday School. Even after he had been sent to Kingston penitentiary he wrote to the minister, Rev. H. Holmes, declaring he had had a change of heart and had "turned over a new leaf."

Lindsay was the scene of part of Checkley's criminal career. On Nov. 11, 1924 he was sentenced to five years in Kingston penitentiary for robbing the home of Lady Hughes, wife of Sir Sam Hughes. His father was also implicated in the robbery and sentenced to six years.

Despite his prison record, Checkley made frequent visits to his town in the past years. On May 20 he was here driving a new 1936 car. Visiting pool rooms he invited several young men to drive to Peterborough but they declined.

Checkley wrote several letters to Rev. Holmes' son, Jack. In the latter written from the penitentiary he said: "Its a good boy, Jack. Believe in God as I do and always keep on the straight and narrow path and never wind up where I am now."



Jack Holmes was about eight years of age when Checkley corresponded with him.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Bigger and Crawford by Financial Service

No important changes have occurred in the complexion of general business. Only here and there are signs of a seasonal recession developing and activity, on the whole, is holding to higher levels than would be generally expected for this time of the year. One reason doubtless is the fact that, despite every indication that the long term trend of the cost of goods will continue upward, there has been no significant increase in inventories.

Financial interests who have, up to the present, been more or less wary of highly active stocks, today looking into promising situations. A large number of new offerings are being announced and the manner in which these are absorbed indicates that the public appetite for mining stocks has not yet been satisfied.

This country's gold mining properties is receiving the attention of general interests, and sizeable blocks of our better mining securities have been shipped out of the country to be stored away in strong boxes for the time being, but American capital is also being attracted and it would appear as if the previously mentioned flow of gold will be maintained for some little time.

Base metal properties, Mining Corporation, Lake Shore Mines, Ltd., McIntyre Porcupine Mines, Ltd., and Noranda Mines, Ltd., have reported for the month of April, December 31, 1935, a net profit of $2,529,161, which was equal, after development expenditures, depletion and taxes, to $3.31 a share on the capital stock of 763,500 shares as at $1,796,750, or $2.50 a share in the preceding comparable period. Costs are developments are somewhat higher during the latest period due in part to the fact that in April the company recently has pursued the policy of treating the lower grade ores which could not be profitably mined prior to the increase in gold premium, thereby increasing production. It seems probable that earnings reported for May will show a high degree of stability. If this proves to be the case, the stock probably will continue ra-

TORONTO MINES
(Close)

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—Moderate heaviness marked the mining division of the Toronto Exchange in the late afternoon following a firm stock today in the early part of trading. The day's best prices were recorded in the first hour when volume was also at its height. The turnover was chiefly in the senior list and in the issues of gold and silver stocks were slow and barely firm.

Heavy traders on the up side among the cheaper stocks were Chibougamau, McKenzie, O'Brien, McWatters and Red Lake. Declines of fractions to 2-16 also closed with a net gain of about 13 and Preston and Lake Shore declined 45 and Hard Rock was off. Pickle Crow, Central Patricia, Sylvanite and Wright-Hargreaves declined a few cents each.

Penny issues moving forward included Falconbridge, Jack Lake, Bobjo, Thabota and J. M. Consolidated. Other base metal issues were posted for Castle and Rickardo.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 26 (AP)—Railway stocks added to scattered industrial gains which marked the main support for today's quiet market.

SOVIET ENDS EASY DIVORCE

Moscow, May 26 (AP)—An end of the easy divorce system in Russia and creation of new, strict family regulations should be forthcoming in a new law outlined today.

The measure will reduce divorces by the simple expedient of putting them beyond the purse of the average person.

Errors in Clutches Paves Way For Kingston Win in Opening C.O.B.L. Fixture on Holiday

Score is 8 to 4 With Game Close Until Seventh Frame

H. SMITH BIG HITTER

St. Louis Hurls Nice Game, His Control Being Perfect

The weather was ideal.
The crowd was splendid.
As a matter of fact everything fitted perfectly into the picture until Joe Dailey's Kingston Frontes arrived at the Pair Grounds, late as usual, for the opening game of the C.O.B.L. yesterday morning, and then proceeded to spoil the whole set-up by bounding the Belleville seniors 3 to 4 and thereby spoiling the entire day for some 800 fans, of which nearly half were minors.

Costly errors gave the Frontes a decided edge, as the local pastimers' works boosted the pellet for five runners, all of which subtracted their chances in victory. Inability to hit in the pinches also paved the way for the local reverses as Belleville batters left no less than nine base runners stranded on the base paths.

Fielding a young and untried team Manager Wetz's 1936 edition of the Belleville seniors in no way disgraced themselves, however, as they battled the provincial champions temporarily even terms until the seventh, when careless baseball, after two were out, gave the Frontes three runs and earned victory as the locals had battled at even terms up to that point.

Belleville's battery mates of St. Louis pitching and "Red" Kipp on the receiving end, stole the local limelight with their efforts, both turning in splendid accounts. The locals' control was perfect. the Belleville hurler fanning five and did not issue a single base on balls, despite the fact he was nicked for ten safeties, many of which should have been fielded, however. Although Jamieson, Kingston hurler, gave up fewer hits, he dropped a streak of wildness and issued no less than six walks.

H. Smith Big Hitter.

Hewitt Smith, veteran Kingston third baseman, was the big willow-swinger of the game, both his efforts at the spleboid for two mighty triples. T. Scrutton and Conway, the Frontes' catcher, punished out two hits each. Vinny Urzendowsky slapped a double and a single for Belleville as the youthful "Bud" Johnston concluded for a long drive to right field in the eighth: St. Louis, Wetz and Kipp all hit for the best for Belleville, respectively the highlight of the game came with a fast double play for the Frontes, Cliff Scrutton to Roy Smith. Weir handled six chances at second without error, Robbie, Mickey Compeau and Bob Heath, at short and outfield respectively, also flawless, handled seven chances. Elliots' tooting one, Bob Heath's running catch of Chuck Urzendowsky's fine drive and this pick-up of Mickey Compeau's were the features plays of the day defensively. Elliots made both plays, which were sensational.

Kingston opened the pastime by scoring twice in the first frame. Scrutton and Compeau singled in succession, Smith hit to right field, Belleville climbed back into the running by evening the count in the second frame. Conway did likewise, Weir pulling up at third. Kipp stole second and Jim Johnston advanced one on R. Smith's infield out. Kingston added another in the sixth, Kingston added another in the fourth on an error, fielder's choice and Conway's single, Belleville evened the count again in the fifth. Urzendowsky singled, scampered to third, Elliott bobbled Gray's roller to score after Scrutton took St. Louis' long fly to left. Kingston put the game on ice in the seventh with three runs, two of which were unearned, two were out and none on. A fielder's choice, Buckley's error and singles by T. Scrutton, Corkey and Jamieson turned the trick. Belleville added another in the eighth on H. Smith's triple with McQuade aboard. They also scored in the ninth as Kipp threw wild to third as R. Scrutton was stealing the base, Scrutton walked home. Belleville added their fourth tally in the ninth, Urzendowsky doubled and scored on St. Louis' single.

Jack "Cliff" Williams was in a Kingston uniform, but failed to put in an appearance, spending his time renewing old acquaintances from the new dug-outs in front of the grand stand in the Pair Grounds. Williams was slated to hurl in Napanee, Manager Daley announced. Before the game a parade was held headed by the Belleville Municipal Band prior to the game. Mayor Ellis and the usual ceremonies with Arthur Elliott pitching O. G. Cameron, M.P., batting and Newton Thompson of the C.O.B.L. catching, preceded the gala day's pastime.

KEN BIDDLE OF OSHAWA ENTERS HALL OF FAME

Pitches No Hit No Run Game Striking Out 19 Batsmen

NONE REACH FIRST

Kingston Frontes, Champs of Last Year Win Two on Holiday

Ontario went on a baseball spree during the holiday week-end, no fewer than 30 senior amateur games being played. Highlight of the contests was the no-hit, no run game pitched by Ken "Jake" Biddle, third ranking amateur pitcher last year.

Biddle, who hurled Stratford Nationals into the semi-finals in 1935, struck out 19 batters for Oshawa in a Central Ontario Baseball League game against Peterborough. He issued but three walks and allowed no batter to get past first. In all 31 players faced him. It was the first no-hit, no-run game pitched in Oshawa in 1936, since 1932. His mates got 19 hits, including three home runs, to clout the visitors 17-0 in what was defeated Peterborough 8-3 in a previous week-end game.

London went into undisputed possession of first place in the West Ontario Baseball League Intermediate League with three week-end victories.

At Guelph, London won 4-3, capitalizing on an error to put across two runs. Manager Eddie Cahill of Guelph team flashed a signal that London could use sacrifice to good advantage.

In a second game with Guelph, London came out 8-7 in 10 innings and then ran its record to four wins in four starts by whipping Stratford Nationals 11-3. It was the first time London had defeated Stratford Nationals in two years.

Stratford Nationals came from behind in the ninth to nose out Galt 7-6, at Stratford, in another Intercounty game. Brantford Red Sox defeated St. Thomas-Aylmer Combines 5-3.

Guelph lost another 8-7, 10-inning game to the Hamilton Combines during the week-end. Guelph got four runs in the first inning in the game both St. Thomas went one better by scoring five in the fourth.

Four games were played in the Hamilton section of the Intercounty League. Galt and Brantford the winning streak of the Dundas team by defeating the latter 6-5. Dundas went into a six-run lead in the first two innings but Dundas scored six in the third. Galt got its two-run margin in the fifth.

In Galt's second game Hamilton Moodie Chips won 4-3 in 10 innings. Galt had tied the game in the fifth and put two across in the eighth to win.

Brantford was unable to beat the Hamilton Stanleys and drop-ped a 4-0 decision to Hamilton Leonards. The Leonards only got seven hits but used them to good advantage, Jakalby allowed but four hits and struck out eight.

Kingston Wins Two.

Hamilton Tigers were defeated 5-1 by Dundas at that team down Hamilton. A four-run rally in the fourth inning.

Niagara Falls went into the leadership of the Niagara District League by defeating St. Catharines 9-5. It was the fourth straight win for Niagara Falls.

Although they overcame an 8-0 deficit Thorold failed to hold back an eighth-inning two-run assault and dropped an 11-8 decision to Welland.

Moosweep, carrying the colors of H. C. Balch, won the 97th running of the historic King's Plate at Toronto's Woodbine Park, May 23rd, with Stornabown owned by G. Hendrix second. Epicurus, from the Packwood stable of R. S. McLaughlin, finished in the show position. Ideal racing weather brought a respectable crowd for the Canadian racing classic and the track was fast. Photos show field rounding the first turn with Moosweep, the final winner last in the pack. Moosweep, King's Plate victor is seen after the race with Jockey Brammer still in the saddle.

Niagara Falls.

Chippers had a field day at the expense of Port Colborne, winning 14-4 after getting 21 hits off three Port Colborne pitchers. Moosweep, lost to St. Catharines 8-5. Port Colborne, in another week-end game, was defeated 8-4 by Thorold. Welland got three runs in the 11th inning to defeat Chippawa 9-8.

Kingston spoiled the season opening for Belleville by defeating Belleville 8-4 in a Central Ontario League game. In a second game Kingston defeated a new pitcher "Chief" Jack Williams and defeated Napanee 8-3.

OGDENSBURG IS STILL LEADING

Brockville Hurler Pitches No Hit No Run Game Against Oswego

(By The Canadian Press)

Ogdensburg maintained its place at the head of the Canadian-American Baseball League race after week-end games but it was left-handed Joe Krakauskas, who commanded attention rather than pitching.

Ogdensburg is unable to beat Joe, who used to play football for Hamilton Tigers, pitched the first no-hit, no run game since the League started, when he hurled Brockville to a 3-0 victory in the second game of yesterday's doubleheader against Oswego. The Pirates took the opener also by a 9-3 count.

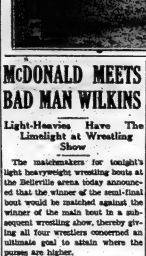
All the teams played doubleheaders, Canadian entries being limited by the United Kingdom for a Victoria Day holiday program. Ogdensburg divided in a double-header with Ottawa, losing the first game 8-5 and winning the second 12-4 to retain the League lead Perth and Watertown also split a twin bill, Perth took the first game at Smith's Falls 8-4 by punching over two runs in the ninth and then dropped the nightcap 8-3. Watertown remained in second place, a few percentage points ahead of Ottawa Senators.

16 Batters Whiffed

About 800 fans watched 16 batters tackle Krakauskas' offerings and go hitless. He equalled his record against Watertown Friday. Oswego Senators scored seven runs in the first two innings of their first game with Ogdensburg to nail the game away but 15 hits and six Ottawa errors gave the visitors an advantage in the second game. About 3,500 fans watched the fixture.

Prior to the holiday, Watertown took most of the laurels with a 6-4 win over Perth Sunday and a 6-5 decision against Brockville Saturday. Brockville dropped a Sunday game 3-2 to Oswego, the same Ottawa defeated 4-3 Saturday.

If there was any satisfaction for Ottawa in their one-run victory it was blasted Sunday, when Senators moved to Ogdensburg and took a 30-8 battering. In the other week-end game Perth defeated Ogdensburg 9-4.



McDONALD MEETS BAD MAN WILKINS

Light-Heavies Have The Limelight at Wrestling Bout Show

The matchmakers for tonight's light heavyweight wrestling bouts at the Belleville arena today announced that the winner of the semi-final bout would be matched against the winner of the main bout in a subsequent wrestling show, thereby giving all four wrestlers concerned an ultimate goal to attain where the purses are higher.

Two weeks ago this evening the light-heavies returned to the local ring and provided a great thrill when Danny McDonald, the Canadian middleweight champion gained the only fall over the hour limit with Lefty Priestly, the challenger for McDonald's crown. Tonight, however, McDonald faces tougher opposition in Sam Wilkins, the Michigan Terror, who out-weighs the Canuck title-holder some nine or ten pounds.

THE DEFENDER

DANNY McDONALD

In the semi-final bout the Red Devil and Bill Handley, of Toledo, will be out to win, as the winner of this bout has been promised a main bout versus the winner of tonight's final bout on the card. Last fall the Red Devil and Handley wrestled to a 45-minute draw in a local ring, but both boys have met some tough opposition since and are in the very best of condition for tonight's "shooting" match. Both the behooded gent and Handley are rugged wrestlers and always give the fans action personified. A preliminary will open the card.

Buffalo Ties For Leadership With The Newark Bears

The Buffalo Bisons are putting on one of those winning spurts in the International League which in past years they have reserved for the close of the season.

On May 7, they were six and one-half games out of first place. Today the standing read: Buffalo, 26-14, Newark 24-14. In their last 30 games the Bisons have finished on the long end of the count on 18 occasions, piling up a string of 14 straight successive victories to start their remarkable march to the top of the standing.

They went into a tie for first place yesterday when they turned back the Montreal Royals twice, while the Bears were winning a single night encounter from the Albany Senators. The scores of the Bisons-Royals games were 5-4 and 8-1.

The first game, played in the morning as part of the Victoria Day celebration, saw Tom Ash and Bob Olsen outpitch Leon Chagnon and Harry Smythe. Bill Harris had little trouble outpointing Lauri Myllykangas and Smythe, in the mainlee game with Frank MacGowan relieving in three runs with a homer, MacGowan also accounted for two of the Bisons' runs in the 4-3 contest.

Roy Schalk's single in the sixth scored Bill Baker with the run that gave the Bears their decision over Albany. It also marked a pitching duel between Kemp Wicker and Ray Starr, the former allowed six and nine hits, respectively.

The Rochester Redwings also won both ends of their double bill with Toronto, taking the morning game 3-2 and the afternoon affair 4-3. Bob Weiland had the honor holding the Leafs in the first encounter with Al Hollingsworth and Leroy Hermann in the third and scored five runs on as many hits. The Red Wings went to work on Al Johnson in the third inning of the second game, driving him from the box five hits and two passes. Johnson was relieved by Lou Saunders.

Leslie Munns and Norbert Kleinke coasted along behind their lad.

Perfect Weather Greets Many From Surrounding District as Sports' Day at Foxboro Held

PARADE INTERESTING

Races And Horse-Shoe Pitching Included in Program

Foxboro, Ont., May 25 (special) —The annual sports' day and ball opener of the South Hastings Baseball League in Foxboro yesterday was greeted with almost perfect weather, and fans to the number of 1,500 turned out to spy the first real holiday of the season. Shortly after noon the crowd began to assemble at the ball park, and until three o'clock a steady stream of cars entered the parking lot adjoining the baseball diamond.

The parade which assembled at the school grounds before going to the ball park was led by Miss Ella Ann, a big sports' programme and consisted of many novelty turnouts, clowns, etc. Jerry Dafoe and his country minstrels, seemed to be the pick of the crowd, and also drew the approval of the judges, as they took first prize in the grand march procession.

Horseshoe pitching seemed to be the centre of attraction for numbers of that sport visiting Foxboro, under the very capable direction of Mr. Wm. Leslie of Belleville, the world's champion, and he could be heard all afternoon in competition for the prizes donated by Mr. Leslie.

Races Held

The younger edition were very capably taken care of by the ladies, which were held for them, and classes for all under 12 years, and previously entered, showing the interest the young folks take in the line of sport. One novelty feature was the young couples' potato race, in which each gentleman ran to his partner, took his coat off, turned it inside out, and put it on her. The first couple reaching the starting point, won. The ever-interesting ladies' nail driving contest, also the ladies' peanut race contest drew many interested spectators.

Prior to the opening ball game, Rev. D. C. Hill of Roslin drew the crowd to attention with a program of words in memory of the late Dr. R. F. G. Ward, the Foxboro team's former manager. Mr. Ward was loved and respected by his proteges as a pugilistic very few managers are, and the Foxboro club will certainly hold up his memory as good sportsmanship on the diamond this summer. Following Hill's address, Pipe-Major Sergeant of the Argyll Light Infantry Band, gave a bugle recital.

Mr. Tennessee Officiates

The baseball season was formally opened, when Mr. W. E. Tunnesson ascended the hilltop and pitched the first ball with Mr. Hill to catch. Hill socked Mr. Tunnesson's first pitch and the ball game was on.

With Ken. Callahan, Lalta's submarine hurler on the mound pitching a right ball to the batters, coupled with straight support by his teammates, the Lalta boys tied into Melrose running up a score, which threatened to attain cricket proportions. Melrose started with Cunningham on the mound but he lasted only one inning, as Callahan found him for five hits and as many runs in the first. In the second Semark relieved him and held the Lalta boys in check for two innings, when the heavy hitting Lalta boys got again. Semark was decicked in favor of Cy Barriage in the seventh but by that time Lalta had a good lead.

Lalta, Marsh, C. Hall and Simpson were the most consistent hitters, Marsh getting five hits, Hall four and Simpson four. Marsh, C. Hall and Parks hit triples. Gowe and Marsh supplied the fielding features, each pulling down flies after a hard run.

For Melrose, Cy Barriage played well at second. He also scored his team's only run in the sixth, when after doubling he stole third and rode home on Howard's single.

Callahan for Lalta had six strikeouts and walked one, also hitting two batsmen, while Semark fanned one and walked four.

Lalta—Gowe, c; C. Hall rf; Simpson, 3b; A. Hall 3b; Marsh ss; Orr c; Parks 1b; Callahan p; Casey lf.

Cannifton 8; Shannonville 4

In the second half of the double header, Cannifton "Imperials" shed out a 8 to 4 win over Shannonville in a closely fought game, in which Ken Joby, Shannonville diminutive hurler stood out like the proverbial sore thumb. Joby practically carried the whole team on his shoulders during the whole piece as he struck out 13 opposing batters and granted only six hits and some of them being scratchy. Of the five runs scored against him only two were earned, as his teammates continually put him in the hole committing errors both of omission and commission.

Control is Bad

Bush started on the mound for Cannifton and was effective for five innings, but his control wasn't of the best, so he was derricked in favor of Sergeant starting the fourth, giving catcher for Cannifton had an off day. He not holding his pitcher up and was replaced by J. Murray, Hammett replaced Sentworth in right for Cannifton in the 5th.

Sergeant and Hammett hit into the winning rally with Sergeant getting a lucky two base hit with two on in the fourth, subsequently scoring on errors by Shannonville and the Joby.

Cannifton: Infield or Blaker, Gray, Frank Murray and Meena worked well together. "Chet" Wilson was outstanding up in the ball pen but did not put in an appearance. No doubt being saved for Sunday when they meet Foxboro in their next game.

Prince of Wales Handicap Next Start For Plate Winner

Toronto, May 25.—(CP)— The Prince of "Tales handicap at Thorncliffe race track on the east end for Monsweep, H. O. Hatch's three-year-old plate winner. The race, drawing eight fillies and mares, is a little more than a week off.

Bill Bringloe, trainer of the chestnut gelding of the Hatch stable pranked the great running power of the gelding as he announced the engagement for Monsweep in the new record for the plate grind might have been set, he said, if the ebony-coated gelding had been entered in the stretch drive. "He's a great finisher," he said, and the victory wasn't a surprise. All through the training period he showed class and style in the way he handled himself."

Monsweep was four-fifths of a second off the mile and a furlong record of 1:34 1-5 set by R. S. McLaughlin's Horometer in 1934. Monsweep was a handy winner, two and a half lengths better than G. M. Hendrie's stormblown, Epicurus, R. S. Mclaughlin's 1933 plate winner, was third, four lengths further back.

Weekin's Compare Horses

The jovial trainer wouldn't make comparison between Monsweep and Horometer, considered one of the greatest ever to win the guineas. Horometer, after a sensational juvenile career, suffered a quarter crack not long after winning the plate and never raced again.

Monsweep did not come out of the race uncoalled. He suffered a cut on a hind leg, when brushing away from the starting jam and pulled up lame. He was still lame today, but Trainer Bringloe said the leg would be normal in a day or two.

Plans have not been made to ship Monsweep to Saratoga for the big summer handicaps. It is felt there are enough races in Canada this year to attract him.

Bringloe also had a word for the poor showing of Sweepough, considered by experts as the better half of the Hatch entry in the classic. Three days before the race, he said, the chestnut colt developed a fever. He pulled through, but was not at his best for the race.

Epsom Derby Most Open Race for Years To be Run Wednesday

(By Gayle Talbot, Associated Press Sports Writer).

Epsom Downs, Eng., May 26 (AP) Lucky golfers, not the 1936 Derby winners, unanimously nominate tomorrow's running of the historic fixture as the most wide-open race in years.

When the field of 27 tears away from the starting gate for the mile and half journey, over a track, that has been soaked by rain, the favorite is naturally be a favorite in the Aga Khan's Taj Akbar, but there's no more reason in his exalted position.

There is even less justification for the status enjoyed by several of his closest rivals in the betting list. As the result of the absence of a really outstanding three-year-old, like Bahram last year, the bookmakers, who are as puzzled as anybody else, simply let the clients name their own poison.

Yesterday's exciting flurry over William Woodward's Rowell, one of the pale colored by the New York banker, was a typical situation, where one's guess is as good as another. Only a month ago Taj Akbar was ignored at 50-1. He's the favorite now partly because he won one race over the Derby distance and partly because he will be ridden by Gordon Richards, England's No. 1 jockey who has yet to win a Derby.

Lord's Astor's Pay Up, the second choice, owes his position to the fact that he captured the season's first classic, the 2,000 Guineas at Newmarket. Yet that was only a mile race and Pay Up has yet to prove his stamina over the Derby route.

UPSET VICTORY SCORED

St Andrews, Scotland, May 26.—(CP)—Captain G. R. B. Stevens scored an upset victory today in the second round of the British Amateur Golf tournament. He defeated Lister Hartley, former Walker Cup player and a semi-finalist in the 1930 championship two and one.

Dr. William Tweddell, who carried Lawson Little to the 36th hole in last year's final round, gained the third round with a 2 and 1 victory over C. Haslit. Dr. Tweddell, a former champion, was named captain of Britain's 1936 Walker Cup team yesterday.

CURRENT SPORT
DAY BY DAY

The weatherman smiled upon all local sporting activities over the week-end and the sun shone brightly throughout while for the sailors, a good stiff breeze blew before the sun on the bay. From the time the ball game was lost in the morning until late at night, baseball seemed to hold the spotlight and ushered in the outdoor sporting season.

Of course the most regrettable incident yesterday was the failure of the Belleville baseball team to handle the champion Kingston Frontenacs. As soon as the latter arrived, however, playing in Belleville, the Fronters were late, as usual, arriving in the park at exactly twenty minutes 11 course they held fielding practice for an hour, had up the evening star the local coaches and Curt Bennett began to warm up. Then the Fronts then went out and got ready for the game, at that, and

The Daughter of His Enemy

—by—

H. Louis Rayhold

John Sherman had great plans for his son Philip, but they did not include marriage in the near future.

"It's all very well, my boy, to play around with the girls in a friendly sort of way but avoid any entanglings alliances for the present."

"Therefore the life of Reve he had just read was a thunderbolt for which he was unprepared.

"Mrs. Leslie Bridgett of 84 Mansfield street announces the engagement of her daughter Gloria to Philip Sherman of West Park road. Miss Blodgett is a scholarship member of 'Whose Swastika Are You'."

Perhaps it is best to allow Philip's father a few minutes to get control of himself and to shift the scene, meanwhile, from his private office to the outer room where Philip, all unconscious of the fate which awaits him, lingers beside the desk of the firm's most capable stenographer, Miss Smith.

Fate had been partial to Rhoda, making her as pretty as she was capable.

Her slender fingers continued to fly nimbly over the keys of her typewriter as she firmly refused what Philip was asking her.

"No, Philip, I will not lunch with you. Run along and tell your boss he can't have it as long as you're here to make yourself invaluable to your father."

"Have a heart, Rhoda—"

"Philip, I like you well as I do that my job here would be worth exactly nothing to me if your father ever learned that I was the daughter of his old enemy. Will you please—"

At this moment the door of the inner office was opened by the unseen hand within. "Philip!"

Both heard the tone and knew it for John Sherman's voice.

"Yes, sir!" Then the door closed upon both of them.

Rhoda frowned. Was it possible her employer had found out that the daughter of the man he had once hated, and feared, was craving a salary as one of his stenographers?

But, within, the elder man was thrusting the newspaper under his son's eyes and pointing out the offending item with a finger that shook.

"Who is she?" demanded his father.

"She's the tiniest girl from the end in the front row with the pink hat," said Philip.

John Sherman's rage became apoplectic. "How, don't get off any gag about her head, was drawing a salary as one of his stenographers?

This statement in regard to the meeting of her husband and the green-haired lady seemed to cast the glimpse she had of it from her lower, though she had since seen she had not noticed the color of her hair. An accidental meeting evidently; but they went on in the same train together, perhaps in the same car. If friends, undoubtedly they rode together. Well, what of that? Friends met each other as it were here. Her husband might in the past have done the woman a kindness or some little service. It would be like him. He would tell her all about it on his return.

"She should be named Circe," said Mrs. Hamilton, lightly. "No other name would be so suitable for a beautiful green-haired woman. I will ask Mr. Hamilton about her. She must have a history."

"All women have, have they not?" asked Miss Talbert, brightly. "It would need a Howells, though, to write them up, even of them are so tame. But I think you are right about Mrs. Anderson. She must have a history—a strange one. She has a sad look, and she seemed frightened, or, at least, nervous. Did not you say so, Miss Chase?"

"Nervous, perhaps, and anxious to go on. She told me this morning that she expected to go through to Cranbourne without stopping."

"To meet friends?"

"So she said."

"That would explain it, perhaps. It is so annoying in here to stop over. Must you go, Mrs. Hamilton?"

"I think I must."

"But you will come again, soon, will you not? Come, Miss Talbert," cordially. "While Mr. Hamilton is away you must let your friends see you often."

"Thank you, and you must run in to see me often, Miss Talbert. We are getting to be too ceremonious in Greenvale."

"Yes, quite, clifford. Mother and I were saying so, exactly. I, for one, mean to battle against it. Conventionality is a country lover's dreadful to consider."

And then, with a pleasant adieu to Miss Chase, Mrs. Hamilton went away.

She called at the Savings Bank in passing, and Tony Osborn, with his pen behind his ear, came at once to speak to her.

"Good morning, Tony; very busy, I suppose."

"Awful, now Mam—Mr. Hamilton is away."

"Did he tell you just when to expect him back—what day, I mean?" asked Mrs. Hamilton.

"No, I don't, not two, he said; but it's all a joke about my being busy, you know, for everything was left in charge before he went. A lot of stuff was sent to Boston to the deposit vaults; I can hardly get the girl riding every day if I like," he said, with a boyish appreciation that belonged to Tony Osborne, but which nobody minded, for he was considered a thoroughly respectable and reliable young man.

"I'm glad to hear that we are not driven," said Mrs. Hamilton, reflecting that her husband always cleared the way for others, but took the roughest path himself. And then she went on her way. She met Mr. Henderson, she agreed to speak to her, and to ask what her husband would be back.

"Only two or three hours and we miss him already! No one can manage like Vane. In a week or two? Yes, that's what he told me. But, by George! he never told me where he was going. Strange! Always goes off in May. Of course you know—"

She murmured something about Boston and rest.

"He needs it, by George! Hope he'll get it. I shall spend a real when he gets back. Our business grows, Mrs. Hamilton. It's double what it was two years ago. Don't tell it while Vane was here."

"He works too hard, Mr. Henderson."

"I know it. Your uncle and I are old fogies, and lazy, to boot. We put too much on his shoulders. I told him on this occasion, however," says I, 'Vane's been working too hard.' 'I know it,' says he, 'Vane has lost twenty pounds lately.'"

"Is that so?" asked Constance, startled.

"So your uncle said. S'pose you knew it. Well, this will never do," stopping to talk to pretty women when business is looming, as the mill," said the jolly mill-owner passed on, leaving Constance to pursue her way homeward.

How lonely the house sounded! How still it was! How well and his be without husband or children? Grim, wan, staring fellows, Miss furniture do not make home, she realized forcibly as she sank in to a chair and folded her gloved hands on her knee.

Matilda had gone home for an hour, her morning's work being done, and there was every year in the month of May? Constance would have given worlds to be able to pierce the distance with her vision, and to see her husband at that moment, and to be invisible, with whom he was talking. Confound! The woman must have taken the northern train and be the south-ern! Why had she not thought of it before? Their meeting was purely accidental; she may have mistaken the husband for no husband. Why had she not thought of that, too? Constance arose and shook the few remaining vapors from her mind, took off her gloves and hat-net, and went about her sewing humming a lively air.

"Two weeks pass so quickly," she murmured, "Sometimes I can scarcely realize they have passed. When he comes back I shall ask him all about it. I have done it, but will I will now. Secrets ought not to come between man and wife. I will tell him so. They might make trouble. They do sometimes. Vane's is a harmless one, I am sure of that. If it wasn't I should be miserable. But people think it strange. They think we don't know where he is. Mr. Henderson thinks it strange, I could see that, and so does Tony. I must tell Vane about it when he comes back."

As you may imagine, with such consistency thought, and so much alone, Constance did not find the days very swift in passing. Indeed, they lagged terribly, though she made calls, practised her mu-reverenced her accordingly. She and did sundry odd jobs of sewing, the accumulation of the month.

To add to her anxiety, she did not hear from her husband. Meanwhile, she had sent a letter with Mrs. Perry to the green-haired lady. Years ago, when poor, shiftless cranny, like their father; they might 'a' dricked up all right, but mother's the old Billy did git at it once, but Mr. Carter somehow got the right side of 'im an' talked 'im out on't. Well, I can't never do enough for your folks, Mis' Hamilton; and your man too, 'cas been turrible good to me an' mine. I sha'n't never forgit it."

And she never did. She had wanted and ironed Opossum's frills and ruffles when a girl, and she now did the same for Clara. Though, as she said, she "done for" day after Mr. Hamilton's depar-I guess."

"Are you sure?"

"Sure as I was a comin' to the laundry an' he a comin' down the street to take the train. 'You here?' she says. 'You are mistaken,' says he. 'Oh, yes,' she says, 'I didn't think,' an' she looked round at me, Mr. Hamilton, she looked at her pretty close, as if sort of thinkin', or straightin' her self out, an' then he spoke again, but what it was he said I didn't hear, because, of course, 'twasn't none of my business. Besides, he spoke too low."

"Probably she was insane."

"No, I guess not. She seemed kinder troubled, though, and folks in trouble always go to such folks as your folks. Or else she knew him. Whichever 'twas, she was a nice, pleasant woman, an' a dreadful pretty one."

HEART OF DICTATOR AT MOTHER'S FEET

An impressive ceremony, viewed by thousands and supervised by his government officials was the placing of an urn containing the heart of Marshal Pilsudski, late "iron man" dictator of Poland, at the feet of his dead mother in her grave. The urn in the casket, in which it was brought, to Vilna cemetery, resting atop the tomb.

"You play too hard," the white rat said. "If I'd known, I'd a stayed in bed."

She's lost her head to her new found "friend"—when the tail disappeared—finis—the end.

TWO HENCHMEN OF PAROLED BADMAN NOW BEING SOUGHT

McMullen, Finnessy, Pals of Red Ryan Sought For Markham Shooting

McMULLEN NAMED

Police Certain Ryan Led Gang When Bank Held up at Lachute

Toronto, May 27.—(CP)—The last Red Ryan roundup, just half completed when Ryan and his one companion were killed at Sarnia Saturday night, was underway today with police of Quebec, Ontario and Western Canada in the game. Two henchmen of the paroled badman were sought:

Edward McMullen, whose criminal record is almost as long as Ryan's was wanted for the murder of Steven Stonehouse, Markham, Ont., councillor. He was believed to have fled to the West Hot week. Police had evidence he was a Ryan gangster.

Thomas Finnessy of Ottawa, like McMullen a former Kingston penitentiary convict, was the object of a search by Quebec police, who would question him with participating in the $2,000 holdup of a bank at Lachute, Que. There was evidence Finnessy, too, was a member of Ryan's gang.

The robber band, as far as police were able to tell, operated over a period of months in Ontario, Quebec and Quebec before Ryan and Harry Chesley were killed by Sarnia police after murdering Constable John Levis.

McMullen Identified

"That's him—the man with the bald spot," said 23-year-old James Stonehouse last when presented he showed him McMullen's picture. Son of the murdered Councillor, Stonehouse said he had identified the shot him in the arm. It was not revealed whether he had told McMullen also shot his father.

The police officials identified McMullen and Chesley as two of the three assailants and said the third member of the band was the third. The Stonehouse shoot-ing took place in Markham, when the Ryan gang tried to steal the Councillor's car at Markham.

As far as police were concerned there remained no doubt Ryan led the Lachute bank raid April 14. The stolen sedan used in the fatal Sarnia battle Monday Sunday was used more than a month earlier in Lachute. Manager Garnett Chelsey identified Ryan, Chesley and Bryans from pictures.

Quebec police swore out a warrant yesterday for Finnessy's arrest and Toronto police were expected to have asked authorities in Western Canada to keep them on the where-abouts of McMullen, a notorious character in the Kingston prison with Ryan in the famous 1929 break.

Posing as a reformed man eager to keep away from former companions, Finnessy was released on parole on the pleas of lawyers during the Mc-Mullen-assisted mutiny and his release from prison. During this time he operated innocently at public gatherings in Toronto.

Gave Blank Cheque

The Toronto Globe said it learned that three months ago Ryan gave his brother, Russell, an endorsed blank cheque, telling him to cut some day and might not come back." Ryan left $100 in the bank on which the cheque was drawn, police found $100 on de-positi.

The Sarnia robbery, it was believed, may have been the result of a long series, which Ryan intended carrying out under his own name, finally abandoning his pretense of reforming. It may have been the one from which he did not intend to return.

In support of this theory was the fact dynamite sticks and nitro glycerine were found in the car and Chesley were using. Police believed they had taken up safe-cracking as "a sideline to bank robbing. They attributed several Toronto safe-breaking jobs to the red-head.

School Addition Again Pressed With $8,000 Estimate to Wire All Public Schools in the City

City Council Gives No Decided Answer to Request

LENGTHY SESSION

Lord Tweedsmuir Invited to Officially Visit The City

After a large deputation from the Board of Education headed by its Chairman, George F. Ostrom, had interviewed the City Council on its request for an addition to Queen Mary School and the rewiring of all Public Schools and resurfacing of the gymnasium floor at the Collegiate Institute at an approximate cost of $71,000, Mayor Harry Hill informed the deputation, that the council would take under advisement the request and give an answer later. The money is raised by the Council it will be by a debenture issue spread over a twenty year period.

Charles L. Hyde, Chairman of Building of the Board of Education introduced the subject by submitting a written resolution passed by the Board at a special meeting before interviewing the Council. Mr. Hyde explained the dire necessity of the work being done owing to the overcrowding in the particular school and advocated the rewiring of the schools on the insufficient light. Mr. Ostrom stated that the addition was urgently needed and that now was the right time to build as money was cheap and materials at their lowest cost. He believed, that $1,500 could be saved on the work. In closing he asked for co-operation of both bodies on this important question.

Lighting Very Poor

Ross Sliver told the members of the Council, that the lighting in the Public Schools was not in twenty years ago and that the system was now obsolete. He stated that pupils were being held back in their studies through the incapacity of proper lighting and that the reports were not only responsible for the education of the children but to a greater extent for their health. He also outlined the congestion at Queen Mary School and thought the time opportune to build the addition. Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne made a fine appeal for the student body and hoped that the Council could see the responsibility that rested on their shoulders. He stated the light capacity was very poor and some boys were working under light of only a candle and one half of a pencil. "This has been shown", said the speaker, "by the failures are coming from those who have poor light in which to work."

Addition Essential

Rev. Mr. Payne showed the Council that the addition was an essential requirement giving his experiences of last Friday, when the visited Queen Mary School and found 40 children huddled into the auditorium. "It is not fair to these pupils", said the speaker. Again

Hamilton, Ont., May 27 (CP)—Lightning struck three fires here—another in this district last night when a fierce thunderstorm swept the area.

Crashing detonations startled three fires. The first two were small buildings, one a shed on Hess Street North and the second a frame building on Arvis Street, both these structures were gutted by flames before they could be extinguished. On the mountain a barn owned by Richard Harris was struck and burned, but neighbors removed livestock safely.

The home of Mrs. W. D. Platt at Port Nelson was fired.

MANY COMPLAINTS MAY CAUSE CHANGE IN MEDICAL RELIEF

Physicians Claim Funds Insufficient to Pay For Services

Likely Municipalities to Get Administration of Medical Relief

Toronto, May 27—(CP)—Responsibility for administration of medical relief may be returned to the municipalities, it was learned in Queen's Park today.

For some time the Ontario Medical Association, through District Units, has been administered "medical" relief. There have been reports of dissatisfaction with this method. The Province has been contributing 26 cents a month for each person on relief from municipalities and these funds have been turned over to the Medical Association. The Association apportions the total among physicians attending relief patients. Of the 26 cents, four cents was directed to the fund for payment of druggists for medicines and supplies.

Recently Hon. David Croll, Minister of Public Welfare, ordered an auditor's inquiry into the manner in which the funds were distributed and from members of the medical fraternity it has been complained that funds were not adequate to pay for services.

In an effort to correct this situation, it is learned, Mr. Croll is considering a plan to turn over to municipalities the responsibility for caring for relief patients. It is reported the Minister will advise the appointment of Municipal Relief physicians and the establishment of Public Relief Clinics.

It was understood Mr. Croll plans to give effect almost immediately to the new plan, pending any suggestions from the meeting of the Medical Association, now in session in London.

MAHMOUD WINS FOR THE AGA KHAN IN 157TH DERBY

Khan's Second Successive Victory in Historic Classic

RECORD ESTABLISHED

Taj Akbar, Carrying Khan's Colors, Runs Second

Epsom Downs, England, May 27. —(CP Cable) — Mahmoud today added another link to the chain of victories for the second successive year in the 157 renewal of the Derby the Blue Riband Classic of the turf.

The multi-millionaire sportsman's colt Mahmoud covered the course of 1 1-2 miles five years in record time of two minutes 32 4-5 seconds. Thrilling Mahmoud was another Aga Khan entry, Taj Akbar, while an outsider, Mrs. J. Shand's Windsor Lad, was third.

Mahmoud was held in check by Thankerton in the early stages but came to the front in the home stretch to win by three lengths. His stable-mate, a more favored entry, made a strong bid near the finish but Mahmoud, ridden by Arthur Wragg, easily. Thankerton was three-quarters back.

Favorite is Fourth

Lord Astor's Pay Up, the 5 to 1 favorite at post time, finished fourth.

Mahmoud clipped one-fifth of a second off the record set by Hyperion in 1933 and equaled by Windsor Lad two years ago.

Last year the Indian Prince captured the Derby with Bahram and in 1930 his Blenheim II was victorious.

Mahmoud started at 100 to 8, Taj Akbar was quoted at 6 to 1 and Thankerton at 9 to 1.

Twenty-two colts ran over Epsom's Pulling course while a throng of some 300,000 watched the spectacle.

Canadian Holds Ticket

Dublin, Irish Free State, May 27. —(CP Cable)—One Canadian held a winning ticket in the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes, Mahmoud, Taj Akbar, finishing second in today's Derby, and as a consequence will win $75,000 for the Canadian holder, was "Dark Horse" and ticket number 126,000 was sold by the management of passengers for one ship in the history of the British, arrived alongside the Queen Mary from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Shortly before 4.30 p.m. the Queen Mary's siren sounded a warning, cries of "All aboard" rang through the towering decks, a squadron of bustling harbor tugs took a firmer hold on towing cables, and the task of slipping the mooring ropes of the new liner was on.

Then the second largest liner in the world backed out from her dock, was turned around by the tugs in mid-harbor, and proceeded slowly down the Solent.

Royal Send - Off is Given Majestic Queen of Ocean Bands Play at Southampton

Passengers Gaze in Wonderment at Size of Ship

BEAUTY EVERYWHERE

Airplanes Drone Overhead as Tugs Nose Ship Away From Dock

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
Southampton, May 27.— (CP Cable)— Gaily dressed from stem to stern the Queen Mary sailed on her maiden voyage at 4.34 p.m. (11.34 a.m. E.D.T.) today.

And no Queen of the Seas ever had a more royal send-off.

Airplanes bearing streamers "good luck" circled and dipped overhead. Special trains carried crowds of sightseers from London. Chartered launches dashed about fussily to get a last view.

Passengers Wonder

Yet above it all was the wonderment of the passengers who saw the giant ship for the first time—their sense of almost bewilderment in the size of everything. In the multiplicity and beauty of the public rooms. Engrams of the ship pleased here and there indicated the precise spot reached by the explorer-navigator. Knots of passengers quickly gathered about them to learn the facts about.

In the main hall stands a model of the Queen Mary made entirely of flowers, a parting gift to Sir Edgar Britten who is her first captain. It was Derby day. Not to be outdone a few lovers of the turf had places waiting near the course, saw the race and then flew to catch the Queen Mary at Cherbourg.

The French port is the liner's next stop. Then she proceeds direct to New York.

If the weather is kind, the new giant of the seas is expected to attempt to wrest ocean speed honors from the Normandie, pride of France.

Fastest Time Forecast

Her 2,139 passengers were confident the ship and speed ship would take them from Bishop's Rock to Ambrose Light—the course over which Atlantic records are figured —in the fastest time ever.

She must better an average speed of 30.35 knots to seize the blue ribbon from the Normandie.

Ship's officers, however, were more cautious than the exhuberant passengers.

Captain Sir Edgar Britten said: "The question of the crossing is a difficult one for me. The ship has been built to make 30 knots and for the schedule we shall not break the record.

"If we happen to keep ahead of schedule, it will be in the ordinary way of business."

Band Plays 'Rule Britannia'

The band played "Rule Britannia," the thousands of sightseers shouted and cheered, handkerchiefs and ships, and planes droned overhead while tugs nosed the Queen Mary away from her dock.

Five boat trains from London, carrying the largest single consignment of passengers for one ship in the history of the British, arrived alongside the Queen Mary from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Shortly before 4.30 p.m. the Queen Mary's siren sounded a warning, cries of "All aboard" rang through the towering decks, a squadron of bustling harbor tugs

BELGIAN PREMIER

EMILE VANDERVELDE

With the Socialists taking a commanding lead in Belgium's parliamentary elections, political observers predicted Premier Paul van Zeeland would resign to make way for a Socialist premier. The logical choice, it was said, would be Emile Vandervelde, above, Socialist leader and now minister without portfolio.

Fire Sweeps Away Buildings Car, Machinery at Union Vale

Ben Payne Suffers Heavy Loss in Midnight Blaze

NEIGHBORS CALLED

Union Vale, May 27.—Mr. Ben Payne suffered a heavy loss early today night when about midnight, fire in some unknown way broke out in his garage. His son, Carl, was the first awakened by a noise and immediately notified his father who was given by telephone to all the neighbors assistance. Help soon arrived, but despite all the help the wind was in the direction to carry the flames to his barn and pig pen, soon burning them to the ground.

Besides his buildings, he lost an auto, a truck, a grain drill and other pieces of machinery, an amount of grain and hay, cream separator, cutters, harness, tools and many other valuable articles that were kept in these buildings. The valuable race horses were saved from the fire, and it was fortunate that the cattle were out in pasture.

Mr. Payne carried insurance but the loss will be a great loss and plans on rebuilding a new barn in the near future.

TRAVEL TALK ON FLORIDA HEARD

Mackenzie Robertson is Guest Speaker at Kiwanis Club

A most delightful travel talk on Florida was delivered by Mackenzie Robertson to members of the Kiwanis Club at a luncheon held on Tuesday, Mr. Robertson has just returned from spending the winter in the south and his detailed description of that fine winter home made many of his audience want to take the trip at the first opportunity. A surprise was in store for the members when George Zakes kindly donated the egg cream used for dessert and also gave each twelve bricks to Herb Fox, George Forbes, Harry Hall, Cook, Jim R. Riggs, Davey Davison, Eddie Shapiro, George Lee, Dr. Mac-Laurin, Jerome Cowan, J. O. Herity and Frank Donnelly, who were fortunate in having their names drawn by the guest speaker.

The club is receiving upon a worthwhile project in that 80 underprivileged boys and girls will be given an outing of a week at Sir Moira Lake boys' camp when the regular camp has been completed. Meals will be provided by the members and the club will pay all the expenses. The children will have the privilege of the camp life under the supervision and the club believes that the children will be grateful in that those less fortunate than themselves will be able to get a breath of fresh air under ideal surroundings. This is only in return for many favors received above the club by the citizens at large. Next Tuesday no meeting is scheduled with great care by the members. Tuesday, June 2nd, and on June 16th will be a big affair and many members will take in the proceedings.

Orange Grove Deserted

Mr. Vincent was the man introduced by Eddie Shapiro, congratulated for the splendid service being rendered the community by his efforts. He has purchased property in the Orange Groves in Florida and the means taken to prevent the destruction of the trees by the land owners having wood piled in the groves is being watched and the trees trading or free. He stated there was a great many farming and that land was low lying and very level but the absence of rain was noted as the sparkling wandering silver were so few when they could be kept out of the land. Also in the north cattle had to be housed for seven months in the year, but Robertson believed the biggest crop they had in the south for the winter months was the "tourists," who paid through the nose to the tune of a dollar. He described the floating population as being immense and the authorities had all kinds of amusement centres, that a man running a horse valued at less than $6,000 did not have to pay taxes and no estate inventory was demanded from race tracks, dog racing and "one arm bandits" that were scattered all over and modern inns. The appreciation of the club was expressed by Dr. Wellbanks.

HORSES RUN AWAY INJURING DRIVER

Frightened When Car Swerves Into Wagon To Avoid Head-on Collision

Arthur Adams, R.R. No. 3 Belleville, sustained leg injuries and several bruises when thrown from a wagon in which he was driving when the team of horses drawing the wagon took fright after being frightened when a motor car truck the horse-drawn vehicle at the extreme extremity of Bridge Street at 1.30 yesterday afternoon. Before the horses were recovered, one had fallen and sustained a cut leg tendon, which may result in its ultimate destruction. The driver of the automobile to strike the wagon, Mr. Roy Vincent of Toronto, was later arrested on a charge of the breach of the H.T.A. and pleaded guilty when arraigned before a police of the Peace yesterday and paid the minimum fine.

Mr. Vincent was driving his motor car in an easterly direction and upon approaching the intersection at the pump house lane and West Dundas St. started to pass the horse-drawn vehicle when he suddenly observed a car approaching from the opposite direction. To avoid a headon motor car collision Mr. Vincent swerved his car and struck the rear of the wagon. The sound of the impact frightened Mr. Adams' team which broke into a gallop and ran away. In his frantic efforts to stop the progress of the runaway team, Mr. Adams was thrown from the wagon and sustained severe injuries. After the horses had fallen and were recovered Dr. Wellbanks, local veterinary and Dr. Wellbanks, local veterinary surgeon, was called and pronounced it might have to be later destroyed, owing to its severed tendon.

P. C. Arnold investigated the accident and reported both the wagon and car being damaged. Constable Arnold took Vincent into custody on a charge of reckless driving and arraigned him before the courts, where the motorist paid a fine. Mr. Adams was taken to his home after receiving medical attention, however,

QUINN'S STORE AT TWEED ROBBED

Robbers Discard Old Clothes And Take Two New Complete Outfits

Provincial Police today were searching the district between Belleville and Tweed in search of two youthful robbers who broke into Ray Quinn's gents' furnishing store, Tweed, and stole two complete changes of wearing apparel last night.

The discarded old clothes worn by the two robbers were found in a box car at the Tweed railway station early today by chief C. Hayes assisted by the Provincial Police. The two men who are being sought were seen coming into Tweed through the west end on a freight train and as no trains had passed through Tweed between the time of their arrival and the discovery of the robbery, it is believed (the men were trekking southward to-wards Belleville.

The clothes that were stolen and will be worn by the two men are described as follows: One grey suit and one brown suit with a single calf shoes and one black horseshide windbreaker. They also took a brown colored club bag and double-ties are carrying the remainder of the loot in the bag. Socks, ties, underwear and other articles of clothing were also taken from the store. A yellow sleeveless sweater was also taken.

A police cordon was thrown around the immediate district of Tweed from Perth to Peterboro' in an attempt to believe all hopes of locating the two robbers.

SCHOOL ADDITION AGAIN PRESSED

Mr. Scriver spoke, when asked by the Mayor, "How long will the new lights on in the school?" He stated that 40 per cent. of school rooms were under lights and under the economical consumption of schools now employed, there is light on only one side of the class room. It has been found, said the speaker, "that the children, who are seated nearest the windows, do more advanced than those who sit at the far side of the room or against the wall. Under the new system of lighting that is proposed all pupils would be equal in receiving light and there would be less purchasing of glasses due to poor eyesight and more advancement in education." Mayor Hill stated, that he would not like to give an opinion on the matter due to a member of the Aldermanic Board having promised the deputation, that the matter would be given attention immediately and a reply given, Mr. Scriver's "pet" project agreed upon action so that the Board could prepare plans and have the work completed before the summer holidays were concluded.

New Proposals Received

A new set of proposals was received from the Canadian Shoe Co. Company by the Chairman of Can. Aldermanic Board. They were read and will be considered by the special committee appointed along with the City Solicitor to meet the Board to council. If there is no objection from the committee, the Council will proceed to take over the property in accordance with the recommendation recently passed by the Board body, under a mortgage now held. Alderman Lewis read a long list of proposals and being informed that Mayor Hill had the proposals had made any difference in his opinion, Alderman Lewis, Alderman Jennings stated, that he had not changed his opinion. Mayor Harry Hill expressed the opinion that as the citizens had voted to close the old school, the Council must have the right to say whether the council should take it back. There is a lot of money invested and if Belleville should lose the mortgage, again, it is going to cost the city some money. It will be some years before the new school is in clear title and I think it would be well to keep control over the ratepayers.

Aldermanic Remarks

Alderman Lewis thought this was drawing a herring across the trail. The purchase of a property at 22 Gordon Street, was passed through the various stages.

Before the Council closed, Alderman Lewis introduced a motion, "that the City Solicitor and City Treasurer be asked to attend the Finance committee meeting to show what action had been taken on instruction from Council to secure rent arrears and if the instruction by first those in arrears had been carried out."

Alderman Bateman, chairman of the committee on the whole and Ald. Ryland and the following members were present: Mayor Hill, Aldermen Mills, Jennings, Safe, Barlow, Cushing, Clapp, Bateman, Armstrong, Domenico, and Bargar.

CAUSE OF INDIFFERENCE

Warning of "an inevitable tomorrow" when the church might be rejected entirely by the people as a useless burden, Dr. Shailer Mathews, dean emeritus of the University of Chicago Divinity School urged at St. Paul's Chapel, New York, that organized religion accept the responsibility of helping persons to overcome their feeling of futility and "distrust of creative forces in the world." He asserted that the indifference of part of the public towards the church could be attributed to the action of certain persons and groups in picturing God as a champion of the status quo. The result was that those who wanted better conditions might reject religion as antipathetic to their aims. He stated that "some persons have told me they cannot believe in a God who allows such suffering as has come with the depression." This is one of the attitudes that has been, in the last few years, an expression of a terrible theistic revolt against that which is the basis of our religion." He suggested as an antidote, the church should endeavor to spread the knowledge that "personality and health are more valuable than economic efficiency."

'DOLL'S HOUSE,' PALACE

Two amazing "palaces" are to be seen in some cities of Canada. At the present time in Montreal is Colleen Moore's Doll House, a priceless construction, which is being exhibited in aid of crippled children. This doll's house is complete to the last detail though everything is in miniature.

"Titania's Palace" which has raised money for the crippled children of Great United Kingdom is to arrive in Canada soon. It is only twenty-seven inches high but contains priceless artistic treasures and wonderful modern equipment, including a bath room, an automobile, a bicycle and a vacuum cleaner. Its creator, Sir Nevile Wilkinson, with his wife will visit Canada for the forthcoming tour of the palace which has now been seen by nearly a million people in the Old Dand and overseas.

While some persons are building large homes, others have constructed this miniature doll's house and this miniature palace for Titania the fairy queen. These little gems are priceless because of the infinite labor and skill and the finest sense of art required in their creation and construction.

Many persons make just such fairy palaces in fancy. Probably no large house ever built appreaches anything like the preciousness of the doll's houses which people build, either in fancy or in actual construction as in these two specimens.

In the case of these two "houses" the noble work of exciting interest in child welfare, particularly in the care of crippled children, is stressed and indicated at every point. It associates the sacred 'houses' and 'palaces' with childhood and fancy and willingly contribute to the purpose for which these will tour certain cities.

PALESTINE RIOTS

"The London Times points out the futility of the Arab agitation against additional Jewish immigration into Palestine, one reason being that the movement is carefully managed and to schedule. 'Arrangements for bringing in settlers are made many months in advance and every move is carefully made, so that the newcomers are absorbed into the communities without any hardship or disturbance of industrial conditions," says Montreal Gazette. "The Times remarks that Jews and Arabs are the characteristic products of the two traditional ancestors, the half-brothers, Isaac and Ishmael. The former was industrious and obedient and tilled soil that others regarded as barren. What is more, by his labor and enterprise he made that soil pay for the endeavor that he put into it. Ishmael, on the other hand, was the archer who fought because he was wild and headstrong. Conditions in Palestine today reflect the two characteristics in question, and the country is prospering because of the Jewish traits and industry. The government of Palestine has a surplus of £6,000,000, which, says The Times, is due largely to Jewish thrift and efficiency. In the circumstances it is to the good of the country and everyone in it, Arab as well as Jew, that the Jewish settlement plans should continue to be worked out. It is quite a matter of fact that many of the Arabs are disposed to be reasonable and friendly, and that the Jews in general are meeting them half-way, so that things could easily move smoothly were it not for the extreme nationalism of the more belligerent of the Arabs. These latter, of course, will not be permitted to continue their nefarious activities. Great Britain's responsibilities are clear and there is no intention to shirk them. The Colonial Secretary, in the House of Commons, a short while ago, stated that His Majesty's Government will not be made to deviate from their policy by riots or threats of any kind. It is an awkward task to face the Government of reconciling two so divergent races, but it is by no means an impossible one, as the report that many of the Arab Nationalist leaders themselves would like to see an end of the disturbances indicates. In any event, in 1917 the Balfour Declaration stated that Palestine was to be made a national home for the Jewish people, and they have established themselves strongly since then. The Arab nationalists will eventually have to recognise this fact."

An untried path before us,
A road we cannot see,
That leads us ever onward
Into the days to be:

PASSENGER PLANE CRASHES IN THIS HISTORIC COUNTRY, and many people at once feel a revulsion against travelling in the air. But shucks, there are fewer accidents in the air than on the motor highways and much it is considered the safer mode of freight and the number of passengers carried all over Northern Canada the percentage of casualties is very low. Air transportation is speeding the development of Canada's resources by turning miles into minutes and months into hours, advancing the natural development of the natural resources by years.

A BUNCH OF OSHAWA PRINTED BILLS FOR AN OSHAWA BUSINESS dumped on Front street, Belleville, Saturday, all in one heap, suggested an optimism little short of amazing, for while those who run may read, they seldom want to, and when the street sweeper carries a commercial message in his vitals it may be as important and interesting as a declaration of war but it will be as impotent as a battle fought by Napoleon on St. Helena with chessmen.

IN VIEW OF THE RECENT SHOWING HERE OF THE FILM DEPICTING THE LIFE OF CECIL RHODES, Empire Builder, it may be interesting to note that one of the troopers under Dr. Jamieson, in that mad but spectacular raid which was to capture Johannesburg and wrest control of the Rand from Kruger and his Boer confreares was a Belleville man. Belleville's contribution to Dr. Jim's troopers suffered with the rest of the troopers in being captured and imprisoned by the Boers but lived to make considerable money in the diamond fields of South Africa and return home to spend his last days under kindlier skies in the old home town. Cecil Rhodes was a great friend of Dr. Jamieson and moved heaven and earth, as the saying is, to save his friend from meeting a firing squad which the Boers were so anxious to put upon Dr. Jim. Diplomacy succeeded and Dr. Jim lived to serve a prison term in England for his offence against the Boer republic and Oom Paul Kruger.

HARRY HATCH WON THE KING'S PLATE with one of his thoroughbreds. Being as Harry came from this neck of the woods, or hereabouts, his many friends got a big kick out of the win. Kinda be like to look at the Seagrams, the Hendries, et al., had a life hold on that fixture but 'Arry 'Atch certainly showed them that Bay of Quinte persistence can take a lot of beating and still come back to score a win.

"CHRONICLES OF BARARBAS" is an interesting book by H. Doran, noted New York publisher, who depicts his own life as a book publisher and introduces many noted authors with whom he came in contact in the course of his work. This is a book very much out of the ordinary and gives a peep behind the scenes at the making of books and also glimpses of character, habits and mode of lives of some of the greatest authors of the day. Barabbas was a robber, and most authors believe book publishers are robbers, hence the title. "Chronicles of Barabbas." Mr. Doran began his publishing career in Toronto when he became a member of a tract publishing house which specialized in religious literature and has seen the evolution of book publishing is revealing and full of human interest. The book is in the Corby Library—when it is in which is seldom.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was thinking about doing my homework and pop was smoking to himself with a satisfied expression, and ma warked in saying, O dear, I wish I could sit back the beginning of the end, I've sut seen my first gray hair.

O, where did you see it, ma? I said, and she said, Where do you suppose I'd see it, on the ceiling? O deer, after all these years of everybody telling me my hair seemed to have the fountain of youth, I cant bear it, she said.

Aw, G ma, what's one gray hair? I said, maybe you saw a mouse or something and just that one hair turned white from fritz and you'll be all rite from now on. I expect to see any more mice, I said, and pop said, Sure, sure, everybody knows gray hair is distinguished, and just one hair is a very nice thing to pay for looking distinguished.

It's the hell before the storm, I said, and pop said, Some morning I'll wake up and find myself practically gray all over, she said, and I said, Well holey smokes, ma, suppose all your other hairs took that one dropped out before they turned gray, that would be cwel for you.

If you cant taxt sense dont taxt me, said O. Now ma dont get in a question of time, she said, and pop said, Maybe the gray hair doesn't make a summer, I mean a winter. Look at me, I had my first gray hair when I was 23, and now every morning when I look in the mirror I breathe a prayer of thanks if I see any hairs at all, he said.

If that's suppose to be meant as a consolation I'll return it with no thanks, ma said. O deer, why did you have to mention looking in the mirror every morning? she said, and I said, Well gosh, me, why don't you make a resolution to never look in a mirror again, and if anybody else starts to say anything about your hair, just tell them you're not interested, so to mind their own bizmeez.

The scene being a small size smack some place and the final result being pop had to take me to the store to get her mind on other peoples troubles.

SUBMARINE, TOMB FOR 40 MEN, MAKES FINAL PLUNGE

The curtain rings down on the career of a submarine that nine years ago was a tomb for 40 men in the ocean bed by orders of the navy department. In 1927 the S4 went down off the Massachusetts coast carrying her crew and officers, to the number of 40, to their doom. She was hit amidships by a ship running on the docks since. Towed out to sea at last, three days later she went aboard her, opened six valves to allow water to pour in, then sprang into a launch and paddled away while the undersea craft made her last dive. The S4 is seen here just as she was cast adrift. TOP RIGHT, her bow is lifting while the stern settles for the last plunge below the waves.

The afternoon was beautifully decorated with potted plants and springtime blossoms, and on a table at the front of the church was the birthday cake with its silver decorations.

The president, Mrs. W. Harlow opened the meeting with hymn "Who is on the Lord's Side", and then the Lord's prayer was repeated in unison.

Teachers of Quints to Be Women of Culture

Ability, Common Sense

Callander, Ont., May 27.—(CP)—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe's hopes that the Dionne quintuplets will become just as normal young women as girls born singly rest largely now on the women to be entrusted with the education of the famous babies, who will be two years old Thursday.

Admitting he had few fears left about the babies' health, Dr. Dafoe said today he and the other guardians, who will shape the babies' lives until they are 19 have turned attention to the future. They have given much thought to the nurses and teachers, who will be the quints' constant companions as they grow up.

"Oh yes, we have plans", the little country doctor said. "Great plans, but we mustn't make them public now. They may have to be changed as conditions change later.

"You can be sure, though, that their teachers will be women of culture, ability and common sense. We hope to make these youngsters French-Canadian gentlewomen. What more could anyone ask?"

Reading New Home

At present the babies' teachers must also be graduate nurses, and Dr. Dafoe has found ability in both professions in his present staff — Miss Jacquelin Noel of Windsor, Ont., who is studying child psychology and Miss Yvonne Leroux of Callander, who has been with the babies since they were born.

Both are French-Canadian, both love children and say they are spending the happiest days of their lives isolated in the Dafoe Hospital nursery.

Besides the Dafoe home the Quints' guardians are planning to build a playhouse for them and the rest of the staff an eight-room house this summer.

They have no hard and fast routine of the hospital today as preparations for the move to and in North Bay for the celebration Thursday. If any birthday presents were received they will be put away in the hospital.

Dr. Harold Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare and a quint guardian, other government officials and prominent citizens will attend a reception at the hospital Thursday, this will be the highlight of the celebration.

Candy Banned

Yvonne, Annette, Emilie, Cecile and Marie may parade their bag of tricks for the visitors then but they will earn no extras to their usual diet even on their birthday, Dr. Dafoe has banned even the suggestion of candy.

There has been no indication from Oliva and Elzire Dionne, [illegible] parents, that they will attend the reception. They were absent from the last birthday celebration last year and Dionne, although he is officially a guardian, takes no part in direction of the quintuplets' affairs.

DEFIES LEGISLATORS

FRANCIS E. TOWNSEND

Originator of the $200-a-month pension plan bearing his name, Dr. Francis E. Townsend figuratively thumbed his nose at a U. S. House of Representatives committee, seeking to query him and walked out on the discussion. Threats of trial for contempt brought further defiance from the financier who declared the legislators were wasting his time. He later announced he had instructed his aides to also refuse testimony.

PRESENTATION

An event of unusual interest took place when forty-five friends and neighbors invaded the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Parks promptly at eight o'clock on their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, Rev. H. A. Turner acted as master of ceremonies and an interesting program consisting of music by Miss Bessie Ketcheson, Moira; Mrs. W. J. Pilchard, West Huntingdon and Mr. Frank Brough, duets and quartettes, speeches and last but not least a mock wedding. Mr. Arthur Brough very capably acting as officiating pastor. The bride, Mrs. Gordon Mitts, looked charming in a wedding costume and veil of twenty five years ago. The part of the groom was enacted well by Mr. George Brough. The W.M.S. presented them with a table reflector and flower.

Among those from a distance were Rev. and Mrs. Turner, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Pilchard of West Huntingdon, Mr. Charles Irvine of Holloway, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ketcheson, Bessie and Norma of Moira, Miss Reaby of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Sherry, Misses Viola and Annis Reid of Thomasburg. After the wedding march, played all united Mr. and Mrs. Burks many more years of wedded happiness.

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY
By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

It is a commendable thing to possess virtues, but when they are overdone they become vices!

If the possession of virtues is going to make their owner nervous, irritable, fretful and peevish, then we have the anomaly of something essentially good—a virtue—evolutionizing into something essentially bad—a vice.

It is a virtue to speak the truth, for example. But would anyone consider it a display of virtue for a physician to tell a patient about the tremendous seriousness of his illness if, by so doing, the shock might make the patient worse and jeopardize his life?

Realizing the enormous influence of mind over body, would not the exercise of virtue in such an instance defeat its own purpose—the saving of the patient? If a virtue causes do more harm, or does harm, then it becomes something far different from what it appears.

Now, then, the possessor of virtue often feels so proud about it that he feels he has a right to censure those who do not think and feel as he does.

Chastity is undoubtedly a virtue. But if the possession of chastity makes one feel so superior that one does not feel inclined to lend a helping hand to those who fall by the wayside, then we have a concrete example of virtue becoming harmful, because it is overdone. We don't all have the same opportunities of starting on life's career with the best possible equipment.

People who have been "let" slums should not be held to incurable standards like those more fortunately born in heredity, home and environment. I don't mean to imply that the bars should necessarily be lowered for the unfortunate. They should be raised, if possible to the same standards of excellence with regard to the cardinal virtues as well as everything else. But we cannot help others—make them more virtuous—if we allow our own good points to blind us.

Always be tolerant and understanding! Let your virtues help others as well as yourself! Be careful also that you do not consider yourself superior because of the virtues you may possess.

Nobody is absolutely without virtue. Even hardened criminals have been known to possess some good, somewhere deep down in their natures.

Our virtues should not be heralded from the house tops. The saying about people who live in glass houses not throwing stones is applicable here. Preserve and foster your virtues but do not work them to death.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Dot Hint

All women desirous of having a good skin should carefully watch their diet. Variety in food as well as adequate daily elimination of the residues of digestion are prerequisites in this connection. Fresh fruits and plenty of greens are well-known beauty aids, whereas starchy and sugary foods, when eaten to excess make for a greasy skin. Drinking from one to two quarts of water daily between meals is also most important.

A generous hand is being used to apply bat trimming. Paris sends the bats of the Renard type, a trifle odious as possible. A navy blue pongee—a small model with narrow sides and long line back to front closing—has a pink bird posed in front in ribbonwork in pale green velvet and also has tiny red, white and mauve posies in front.

Pretty and practical is a bolero frock in navy sheer woollen with a white and dotted navy corral pink satin. The sleeves are wide.

Always necessary is at least "One Day" at the dressmaker type. The practical model is of black quilted taffeta, with a dull filagree mounting set with semi-precious stones.

A Child Often Prefers His Father

Fussy Mother Usually Takes Second Place as Tot's Companion

(By Lisa Grenelle)

Louise and her brother, Johnnie, liked best to be with father.

The reason was that father had faults, too. He was sometimes cross, sometimes he forgot to play, and lots of times you knew he wasn't really listening. But he did leave you alone."

In short, father wasn't always like mother, interrupting and interfering. You didn't feel he was watching you every solitary minute, that would dismiss and scrape upon the very first spot that came on your dress, the first smudge that came on your hands, that would care how you looked, which was a most constant bother your socks were up or down; whether a button was missing, if your hair lied crooked. Even when company came father didn't seem just so long as you didn't make too much noise or get under his feet.

But mother was always fussing over something, especially in the morning before letting you run to pull up your socks, and scolding about your hair, or the smudge on your nose, or the rip in your sleeve —and then wanting you to curtsey and show off to her friends.

Not Quite Fair

"Father might treat us like kind of a pest, sometimes," Louise said to her brother, but he is always getting us if we were just old dolls that he had bought to sit still and keep clean, like mother does."

Johnnie thought that father were not quite fair to mother, I'm sure. After all, somebody's got to clean up the house, and it can't be done once in a while. But perhaps mother's often not definite enough. There are much fewer negligent mothers, I'm sure, than of those conscientious parents who are a little too conscientiously the job for their own good, or that of their beloved offspring.

I'm sure father has a lot to learn from mother about what to do to or for the children. But hasn't mother also something to learn from father as to what not to do?

Don't Interrupt

Children's play sometimes must be interrupted, and they, like everyone else, must learn to adjust their plans to accidental interruptions. Father gets them in the office, and mother through it. In the modern, in the midst of dressing to go out for the day, or evening, critical point of the development of the play. But mother sometimes interrupts the children unnecessarily, so do the children interrupt mother without sufficient cause.

Let the children build their fort undisturbed. Perhaps they like it better that way. Anyhow it isn't an important enough matter to warrant interference. There are times when mothers as well as children, should be seen and not heard.

Why Not Try New Coiffure To Aid Looks?

This star enhances the beauty of her coiffure with flowers

(By Helen Pollett)

In the coiffure market, curls are going up. It's fun getting the valance of ringlets away from one's neck, finding oneself possessor of a new hairdress. It's strange seeing a different lady looking out of the mirror, a bit more formal of appearance than when she wore the boyish curly bob, but that's all right, anyhow, no coiffure is permanent. If you don't like it, down it comes. The high arrangement is messy and that's why it does not suit all women. The tailored type had better cling to her clipped hair with its wide, fluid undulation. You can't beat that style for neatness and easy grooming. But the dainty, fluffy girl takes to top-dome curls as a kitten takes to cream.

Hair ornaments are making headway. Combs back, they hold up lifted ringlets and puffs. During the evening festivity a gardenia in the hair looks pretty slick; even roses are worn again. Fresh flowers nestling in the ambrosial locks make a girl look pictorial and romantic.

As for slgrettes and pearls, take your time and think about them. They're friendly only with the magnificent draperies, and it takes a real beauty to get away with them.

Lemon juice won't have any effect upon redness of the skin, a condition calls for the use of rigid water instead of hot, or cold, and generous applications of cold cream. Red hands are sometimes the result of exposure to chemicals immersion in water for too long a time. Women who have to wash dishes find it convenient. Usually there is some kind of sparkling water, or ginger ale something or that type.)

As a matter of fact too—and I say it for further comforting consideration—thoughtful housewives nowadays, hostesses who are sophisticated and socially accustomed provide non-alcoholic alternatives for highballs and cocktails when they have guests. There is often a pitcher or ice-cold orange juice, or grape juice, or tomato juice cocktail or ginger ale or one or two kinds of sparkling waters. It is the same thoughtfulness that makes a hostess serve coffee and a coffee-substitute after dinner.

Good Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Courage of Your Own Taste

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are planning to attend a dance at a fashionable hotel in a large city next week. As this is our first dance in this type of place, we are in doubt as to our ordering. Since we do not care to drink intoxicating liquors, we would appreciate your advising us just what drinks or refreshments it would be proper for us to order. Do you think it would make us seem "backward" if we ordered cold drinks such as ginger-ale, and so forth?

Florence

Abolish from your mind, dear lady, that it is "provincial" to order what you wish to order, in a restaurant or at a dance. There is no reason in the world to order or to accept a highball or a cocktail when you don't want one . . . even if everyone in the room is ordering one but you. Assure me that there is any reason for you to order an omelet when you detest eggs!

As a matter of fact, this idea of being provincial works just the other way, for it is considered provincial to take a drink that you do not want or like. The provincialism comes in being hesitant about ordering what you want, or in unconsciously drinking what you are offered. There is, for instance, no reason to put on a pious air and say, "No, thank you, I never drink", or "Thank you, no, I never touch it." All of this pity is misplaced and inappropriate. The thing to say is, graciously, "No, thank you very much, but would it be convenient for me to have a glass of any kind of sparkling water . . . or plain water, if the sparkling water isn't convenient?" (What you ask for depends on what you know is convenient. Usually there is some kind of sparkling water, or ginger ale or something of that type.)

As a matter of fact too—and I say it for further comforting consideration—thoughtful housewives nowadays, hostesses who are sophisticated and socially accustomed provide non-alcoholic alternatives for highballs and cocktails when they have guests. Engagement Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been recently married for three months and would like to announce my marriage very soon. As I have been wearing my engagement ring since my marriage, I have been letting my friends know that I am planning to get married.

I would like to send announcements cards to only our relatives and would like to know how to break the news to my employers, since we have been giving them the impression that we are just going to be married, and would not like them to know until the last week before I leave their employ. I don't want any announcement in the papers, but would also like to tell our friends about it.

Please let me know just how the announcement cards should be worded and if it is quite all right to let our friends know by word of mouth?

B.

I think that, under the circumstances, the best and most dignified thing for you to do is to make this announcement as simply and as straightforwardly as possible. Tell your relatives and friends, those who live near enough to be told by word of mouth, and write to those who live far away.

Then you plan to leave your position, tell your employers that it is necessary to have any cards of announcement.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

McDonald Too Experienced For "Michigan Wildcat" in Main Bout of Wrestling Card

RED DEVIL BOOED

Steve Taylor, Local Mat Man Easy Winner Over Webber

Danny McDonald, Canadian middleweight wrestling champion, experienced little difficulty in defending his title against the challenger, Jim Wilkins, the Michigan Wildcat, in the main bout of Tuesday night's card at the sheet at the Belleville arena. McDonald showed too much experience and won his bout in straight falls. In the semi-final tilt the much-hated Red Devil, a gent with a red mask, literally bowled over Jimmy Hughes of Bowne, of Chicago, into submission to win two straight falls, while "Irish" Steve Taylor, Belleville's favorite wrestler of the local boy made, won over Max Webber in the opener. A fair crowd of some 500 fans thronged the sheet to see Donald and Taylor win, but booed the Red Devil for his continued rough tactics, even in victory.

In the main bout, over the hour limit, Wilkins opened hostilities by proceeding to use shady tactics, but McDonald soon put a stop to them by smashes to lamps the Michigan Terror, who retreated to the outside of the ring and refused to return. Wilkins repeatedly had McDonald in trouble until the champ finally floored him with a well-placed drop kick to subsequently gain a figure four aeroplane scissors and hurled the Wilkins around like the zenaie, that cotton tail rabbit game, and then some place happened to be on Wilkins' shoulders for a full minute and 31 minutes of clever and agile wrestling on the part of McDonald. The body punishing was too much for the second round and Wilkins proved of the aggressor at the opening. Wilkins forced McDonald to the ropes and advanced to the centre of apparently pull. McDonald back into the ring, when suddenly McDonald unleashed a flying leap and sent Wilkins prostrate to the floor. McDonald then turned the ropes and fell on Wilkins for a fall and victory.

Referee Tony Mess

Just who was the actual opponents in the semi-final still remains a problem to many fans. Those who had Red Devil was supposed to be matched against Pete Bower, a German wrestler, from Chicago, but the majority of the host saw the Red Devil battling with Referee Wells, who was repeatedly called upon to curb the unsportsmanlike villain for illegal holds such as rabbit punches, gouging, kicking, etc. Frequently Bower did manage to get the upper hand and twice drop-kicked the Red Devil out of the ring. The Red Devil had Bower outclassed in the roughing end of the bout grossing like nobody's business, but the grosns didn't count for much as the Red Devil would frequently turn his attentions to Referee Wells, who finally floored the beheeded gent with a perfect right to the point of chin and from henceforth the bout became a little more interesting as far as wrestling was concerned. Finally, after twenty minutes of rough housing and exchanges of fisticuffs the Red Devil literally pounded Bower into submission and won with a body press.

Bower seemed to be a better sort for a ten minute rest and was the aggressor as he procured a crab hold and later a head scissors, but the Red Devil either bit or punched his way out of what seemed to be a hot spot. An irritated fan tossed a box of pop-corn into the ring, his aim apparently being off color as he missed the Red one's head. The Red Devil promptly reached down and procured a handful of the corn, cash and all, rubbed it into Bower's eyes. Then as Bower stumbled blindly around the ring the Red Devil attached him with rabbit punches and what not to later Joel Bower bodily from the ring. Upon his return the Red Devil finished the job on the man, drew blood and then picked him up to hurl Bower to the mat and put his shoulders and hairy his hand raised in victory amid booing and disapproval.

"Irish" Steve Taylor used a series of Irish whips to soften Max Webber, his Toronto opponent and then at 2.30 and 3.15 two Irish Taylor tactics, Steve evaded the second and Webber crashed through the ropes to be counted out as he sustained an injury and, could not return before Referee Wells tolled the fatal count. Webber was assisted to the dressing room to appear-ent pain, while Taylor received the fans' recognition of a whistle.

Cyril Tolley, Contender For Golf Crown Wins

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 27. (AP)—Making a strong bid for sporting worth wind, blowing in from the sea, Cyril Tolley, one of Britain's best contenders, narrowly escaped downfall at the hands of R. S. Somerville today in the British Amateur golf championship.

Somerville extended Tolley to the 18th hole before yielding.

The pairings were snuffled to the cars as the dwindling field of 72 started out on the third and fourth rounds.

Of the original six American entrants, only Lawson Little, early one remained. Theodore Bassett of Rye, N.Y., who drew a bye in the first round and whose opponent defaulted yesterday, playing Gerald Micksem.

British favorites still in the running included Tony Torrance, Dr. Alex Haliburton and Walter Watson.

H. G. Bentley beat William Gill, one up.

CURRENT SPORT
DAY BY DAY

It was with regret we learned day. There is a lot in what Corrigan says and for the information of all fellow-townsmen, we might say, that the Belleville Rotary Club fought bitterly against the motion to amalgamate with the others, when the question was brought up at a luncheon meeting recently. The Belleville delegates were the only body to support the motion, however.

Two C.O.B.L. games are on the slate for today with the league leading Oshawa and Kingston tangling at Kingston, while Peterboro journey to Napanee.

We wonder if the Peterboro scribe will raise the old cry of "the umpires beat us" after Friday night's drubbing received in Oshawa. If not the Lindsay City scribe will have a lot of sibilant "s" to spare. Incidentally Umpires Woodley and Hollingsworth of Belleville are endeavoring up their sleeves today at their Peterboro scribbling friend. (?)

The competition marched the third annual track and field day held by the athletes from the High School department of the Collegiate Academy at the Fair Grounds yesterday, Instructor Eddie Schrieder, who's athletes are always a credit to the local athletic field, he knows how to produce champions. In the senior series, that Tom Hughes and Ron Doyle tied in points for the championship of the day with 18. All the contestants in the intermediate class Hughes and Doyle shook hands and Jack Holland emerged victor. Hughes is a field event competitor while Doyle excels on the track, he was decided to decide on senior champions this year. The Belleville Collegiate will hold its field day on June 6th to be followed by the C. O. I. D. field day on June 9th.

Instead of confining his efforts and worries at his present job with the Peterboro sport scribe evades the matter of explaining the downfall of the Petes and spends considerable space worrying about the baseball set-up in Kingston and Belleville. The Littlecot City scribbler, Gerald Barrage, Jimmy Hughes and Jack Williams could appear in Belleville and have their uniforms without the customary "Ad" and not an old "eastern custom", mine fran, would be the result. Come and share and forced to follow. At any rate the Peterboro sport scribe-downer takes time off to give Ken Farmer, the idol of the Oshawa "GM-Men" a little boost. They won't stand for it here much longer, the Peterboro scribe the following to say on the subject—

"Even if it was against the Petes it was pretty to see Lefty Biddle pitching that game for Oshawa yesterday. It was a superb performance. The Oshawa baseball youth saw with the miniature moustache. He blazed his smoke ball by 19 batters. He didn't pitch to the necessary of a single. The locals were simply helpless. Only a few times were they extended their hitting averages with an average of 18 lusty wallops, including four home runs. Oshawa now a one-sided game but they have a lot of good ball players and his buddies make C.O.B.L. history.

"The boys were away below the form they are capable of showing. Oshawa was unbeatable on the ball. Okay

Off to California!

LOS ANGELES, THE CITY OF ANGELS

For the third consecutive article we are sitting plumb in the middle of Angelus Temple, and its Pastor-Founder, Sister Aimee Semple Macpherson, simply because we have never before found such helpful, interesting subject. We shall now conclude all too briefly this topic, continuing from our last heading.

4. METHODS. To obtain a seat in the vast Temple, strangers and visitors must present themselves at least half an hour before the service begins. To assist these, workers of the Temple distribute printed invitation cards on street cars, in parks, in fact everywhere, so that they may be properly taken care of in the centre of the main auditorium, or in the first gallery. We were fortunate in meeting Mr. James Clarke, one of the Temple's leading officials, on our second visit, and over after we were allotted good seats. We also met Mr. Clarke's wife and talented musical daughter. This Mr. Clarke is a brother of our Mr. Spencer Clarke, Belleville's unrivalled photographer.

The vast audience is first seated, then the silver band around the powerful, sweet-toned pipe organ, all in front of and below the pulpit and stage, then the choir enters forty strong in lots on each side of the pulpit-stage, total 80 singers in all. The band of about 20 wear beautiful uniforms of purple and gold, the men and women of the choir wear white robes of shining silk. An army of workers is scattered everywhere through the audience for prompt service of various kinds; the men are in ordinary clothes but the women on the street and in the Temple wear a plain white dress over which is spread loosely a long black cape. At some of the services the 700 Bible students take assigned places somewhere near the front in they symbolic costumes of white and black, or white and blue. No word picture can do such inspiring scenes justice. We all believe that we relish our food as much with our eyes as with our organs of smell and taste. Similarly we worship with our eyes and ears.

When all are in their places, a few musical notes are sounded, and two young women in uniform ascend the platform, each bearing a pole, between which is hung a white satin banner on which the following words appear in red letters: "SILENT PRAYER".

In a few seconds the same musical note is sounded and the banner leaves as it came. Then the band plays a few selections, and the choir sings a few gospel songs to warm up the spiritual atmosphere. At this psychological moment, the Pastor-Founder appears at the right hand door leading into the second gallery dressed in an ordinary full-length, white gown with wide sleeves and anecdotal surplice around her neck and shoulders, and with her hair parted in the middle of her, thousands of hands clap vigorously as our Sister descends swiftly to the stage with beautiful smiles, and hows of grateful recognition. The roses are placed on the pulpit and then "God Bless You All", followed by "God Bless You Sister". From that moment on for three hours, you can scarcely take a deep breath or turn your head to one side, lest you miss something startling and important. So much happens to keep interest that it is impossible to give minute details; it would be advisable for you to come and see for yourself.

Early in the service, our Sister requests all who are present for the first time in Angelus Temple to raise their hands. Scores respond at every service from most of the states of the union, also from Canada, Mexico, Ireland, Africa, Australia and other parts of the world. They had previously heard the services of Angelus Temple over the radio and many had come to surrender and be baptized. The Pastor shakes the hand of each newcomer and presents a red rose. On our first night we gained our Sister in a long line on the platform, shook her hand, and twice that night from Canadians the radio carried to the world "From Belleville, Ontario, Canada". Immediately at this announcement the Pastor's dark blue eyes flashed like diamonds, and the radio carried a message and important. So much happens to keep interest that it is impossible to give minute details; it would be advisable for you to come and see for yourself.

Immediately at this announcement the Pastor's dark blue eyes flashed like diamonds, and the radio carried a message from God's Word to the people of Belleville, Ontario, Canada, and the British Empire in the most loyal terms. She is by no means ashamed of the British flag, and surely we are not ashamed of her? How about it, good editor at Ingersoll?

"Amens" and other exclamations of approval are common throughout the service with both Pastor and people. "My that Amen was cold and half-hearted; say it again, now once more," is sometimes the monitions. Her original style is one of the many methods she adopts to keep the fervor of worship at high pressure. No one ever goes to sleep in her services. Her radio broadcasts are heard by from ten to fifteen thousand people in London, England, on the second coming of Christ, an old, long be-whiskered man with a full sleeve in his hand, rose before the audience to punctuate her remarks by snores that disconcerted her dreadfully. Finally she ran to him, about him violently and scornfully, "Wake up, the Lord is coming!"

"He he," responded the sleeper, half awake.

"Yes he is, and you had better get ready or you are going to be left behind."

"All right, I'll go along with you now," and then our Sister had difficulty in keeping him in his seat.

The most remarkable and effective part of her methods is the full size, stage-like illustrations of her sermons. We have already explained briefly one of these, "Bridging the Gulf Between Earth and Heaven", where Bloodhounds are used to track down the sinner, incorrect, but they must be costly and require much time and labor. The results invariably prove their worth.

Every service concludes with an invitation to repentance and conversion, and hundreds respond. Only a great church organization, by the Holy Ghost, can have results that would equal the following who attend Angelus Temple and seek the benefits and privileges it so splendidly affords. Angelus has scores of departments and activities, as follows:

5. This Pastor-Founder directs and controls a complex and powerful organization. She would have made a success in any profession.

6. ATHLETIC. Our Sister has many talents and uses them all with amazing success. She is the most prodigious worker we have ever known and if it is a miracle in itself that she has such extraordinary health. She has written hundreds of gospel songs, and scriptural operettas and plays. She also has well-developed musical talents, including those of congregational singing, led by band and choir, with precision, at the same time playing the tambourine in accompaniment. She is also a pianist, and her shrewd judgment reveals that her literary ability points the way to the Hall of Fame. She could become a famous artist on the radio, the screen or the stage.

We could write as much more again about the inspired Pastor-Founder of Angelus Temple, Los Angeles, California, and her far-reaching work, but space and time do not permit.

THE CITY OF ANGELS

Some of our readers no doubt wonder why Los Angeles has been so named, and hence we shall attempt to give some information about that.

(a) Students tell us that tribes known as Angles and Saxons were among the early invaders and settlers of Britain, that they were of a succession of the present German people, and that they had fair hair and blue eyes. Roman missionaries on seeing them for the first time asked who they were. "Angles" was the reply. "Not Angles but angels", a great was the admiration of the astonished missionaries.

(b) Many people, especially those in Los Angeles and Southern California are similar to the Angles of old in physical appearances and hence perhaps the resemblance in the words Angles and Angels.

(c) But we have observed that there is a deeper significance, an inward as well as an outward meaning.

There must be something in the surroundings that make men and women must smile and be agreeable to those whom they serve in their various capacities and duties. Even the waiters, especially the head waiter, are jovial in the kitchen and wash dishes. At any rate Los Angeles is the most friendly and naturally affectionate city in the world and you feel instinctively that you belong to it, and it to you. This is only one of the many reasons why you would prefer to live and die here.

AT THE SEASIDE

Los Angeles proper is not on the sea; its harbor is twenty miles away. There are many seaside resorts, however, and you can go to them by auto, bus or street car, and we have so far visited a few of them.

(a) Hollywood, a beautiful suburb, is a select, residential development district for talented people (chiefly literary), is about eighteen miles south west of Los Angeles. It was here that we first saw the Pacific, blue waters of the Pacific Ocean, and formed an attachment for Southern California.

(b) Santa Monica is a fully developed residential and business city, beautifully situated on the ocean not far from Hollywood Riviera. The late Will Rogers had a home at Santa Monica, also Shirley Temple and others live there. Visitors are coming and going there all the time.

(c) Long Beach is another beautiful city on the ocean not far from either of the other two, all of which radiate from Los Angeles at similar distances of around twenty miles. Long Beach reminds us of Atlantic City and also of Belgium, Ostend, several respects. There is a wonderful sandy beach extending for several miles. The waves of the ocean roses shoreward like mountains and afford healthful amusement and sport. Some ride on the crest of the waves on surf boards, others dive beneath the towering foam and appear again after the wave has passed only to be repeated again in a minute or two, still others jump upward at the proper moment and swim through the foam and spray. A few fish eat piers or driveways with long bamboo poles and do very well. For hours one afternoon we watched these performers with great interest, and resolved to take part ourselves some soon. Running along the beach is a midway with endless curio-stores and places of amusement, a fairyland when illuminated at night. This corresponds to the boardwalk at Atlantic City, though at Long Beach the wide walk is splendidly paved. Visitors and their money are scarce just now on the midway at Long Beach, but there is lots of fun and you certainly have many a laugh. Many visitors come and go here also, mostly those in search of health.

About three years ago the world was startled by the news of a serious earthquake at Long Beach, when several hundred lost their lives due to the fact that at the first disturbance they rushed into the streets and were killed by falling walls. Had they remained indoors, they would have escaped. One large hotel is still unoccupied as it has been condemned as unsafe. Nearly all other wrecked buildings have been rebuilt or repaired.

Fortunately the disaster occurred at six in the evening when the schools were empty, otherwise the death toll would have been enormous due to their poor construction and consequent collapse. We found old residents everywhere here cheerful and resigned to their fate whatever it may be. This smiling optimism is not only wonderful, but positively contagious everywhere in this lovely land of sunshine, fruit and flowers. Not a drop of rain has fallen since we left Toronto on May 5th, and it is now May 18th. Climate undoubtedly affects temperament and disposition. The street cars charge seventy cents from Los Angeles to Long Beach and return, a little less than two cents a mile. For several miles around Long Beach all walls are so thick that they are only a few feet apart, but enough room for the high wooden derricks used as pumping stations. It is a rare sight and reminds the visitor of a mammoth field of asparagus. Millions upon millions have been obtained already, and still there is plenty. The government had to step in to prevent the various companies from drilling even in the ocean nearby. We like all these seaside resorts very much, and hope to give further details sometime soon again.

A handsome, steel darkie dressed royally in a purple and gold uniform stands at the main entrance to our hostel, the Hotel Barclay, to usher in newly-arrived guests with pomp and ceremony.

"Well Doctor, how is you this morning?" he greeted me with a profusion of smiles and bows as I was leaving the hotel this morning on a slight business errand.

"Just fine, Captain. I'm standing right on the top of the world, and how are you?"

"Se magnifical too (meaning perhaps magnificent), it ahoo is going to be a nice day."

This reminded me that darkies love high sounding words to give vent to their emotional nature, but that they ignorantly mutilate the King's English shamefully.

We expect soon to give some interesting details about Hollywood and Beverley Hills. More in a few days.

Best wishes to all.

HENRY, FERGUSON NOT IN RUNNING FOR LEADERSHIP

Former High Commissioner Will Not be Delegate at Convention

1,200 DELEGATES

W. H. Ireland May Have Two Opponents For The Presidency

Toronto, May 27 (CP)—Behind the scenes of the Ontario Conservative Association's annual meeting today, political observers looked for signs that night indicate who would be the Party's next leader. He will be selected tomorrow at a convention attended by 1,200 delegates.

There was preliminary skirmishing and much lobbying in the corridors of the Royal York Hotel as the annual meeting itself promised to produce some excitement, although contenders removed from the ranging leadership campaign.

William H. Ireland of Toronto, seeking the presidency of the Association again, faced the competition of Earl K. Bronskill of Kitchener, who announced a week or more ago that he would enter the lists. Reports had it a third contender would be produced at the last minute.

Henry Not In Running

But the principal excitement will develop tomorrow when the convention assembles to name a successor to George S. Henry, former Premier. He is understood to be unwilling to seek re-election. Mr. Henry was named leader in 1931 following the resignation of Premier G. Howard Ferguson to become Canada's High Commissioner in London.

Actually, Mr. Henry has refrained from making a definite announcement of his intention to retire but it is no longer known by party men close to him, that he has no intention of running. Mr. Ferguson, out of politics nearly four years, has made it plain he will not stand.

He will not be a delegate at the convention and he has not, and will not, take any part in helping the assemblage make up its mind, he said here last night. "Of course I'm human as a two man tandem tire," he said. "Why shouldn't I like the leadership but instead I will be simply as a spectator."

Only four candidates are Conservative members of the provincial legislature—A. Holland Acres (Carleton), Wm. Finlayson (Toronto St. Davids), Arthur Ellis (Ottawa South) and Leopold Macaulay (York South).

Some May Drop Out

The others are: Hon. Earl Rowe, Member of Parliament for Dufferin-Simcoe; Grant Dexter, Winnipeg noted author and speaker, former editor Winnipeg Free Commissioner; William J. Stewart, former Toronto mayor; V. G. Martin of Brantford, former Conservative Member Conl Public Welfare for Ontario; Cecil Facey, K.C., of Lindsay.

Belief was widely held that one or two of these might drop out before the convention started voting, but it was considered equally likely that all would be nominated and entered at the 11th hour.

The Federal party's interest in the event was apparent. Wesley A. Gordon, Minister of Mines and Resources, and Hon. J. H. Bennett, Cabinet, mingled with crowds of Conservatives today. Hon. H. H. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals in the Bennett Government, also was present.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Quarryville, N.S., May 27 — (CP)—Ella is a determined professor of the three bears story. Columbus, O., May 27 (CP)—A shaking young man entered a drug store here and said: "Mister, I'm perfect for nerve-quieting tablets, but what I want is dynamite. Then he steadied, drew a gun, took $3 and left. The robbery netted the little affair. Mr. McElroy identified he needed 'em himself afterwards.

Weston, Ont., May 27 (CP) — High heels worn by the fairer sex of Weston loomed into affairs of the townscouncil here when discussion arose over complaints about the condition of the sidewalks. It was pointed out that most of the complaints came from women, and council debated as to whether the high heels caused by the condition of the sidewalks or the high heels of the ladies.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Story of Louis Pasteur"

Fifty years ago, Louis Pasteur, the great scientist, used his rabies serum on a human for the first time and saved the life of 9-year-old Joseph Meister.

This dramatic experiment which cut the death rate of the dread disease to less than one per cent. is reenacted in the Cosmopolitan production, "The Story of Louis Pasteur," which is being shown at the Capitol Theatre.

Paul Muni portrays Pasteur, Dickie Moore takes the part of the boy Meister.

While the camera and microphone recorded the scene, the hospital where the film was really saved was going about his duties as janitor in the Pasteur Institute in Paris.

The scene was accurate in every detail, before it was made. Five hundred Paris representatives located Meister at the Institute and heard him tell how he and Louis Pasteur actually gave him the rabies treatment fifty years ago.

"The Story of Louis Pasteur" is the thrilling drama of Pasteur's fight against hydrophobia, prevailing at his time, to save life by discovering the cure. Besides Paul Muni includes Josephine Hutchinson, Anita Louise, Donald Woods, Fritz Leiber, Henry O'Neill and Porter Hall.

William Dieterle directed the picture from the screen play by Sheridan Gibney and Pierre Collings.

As an added feature, "Two in a Taxi" will be shown as a special treat for all animal lovers.

AT THE ELLE

"Petticoat Fever"

Against a background of ice-bound Labrador Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy are enacting one of the funniest comedies ever screened in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Petticoat Fever," coming to the Elle Theatre tomorrow and Friday, matinee daily.

Adapted from the stage hit of the same name the story concerning wireless operator who is so lonely that he holds prisoner two fliers, a beautiful young girl and her male companion, whom he rescues from the arctic night.

Reginald Owen heads the Englishman cast as the blustery English man whose bride-to-be is snatched away from under his very nose. Others cast are Otto Yamaoka, as the Japanese consul; Samuel Hinds, Harvey, Bo Ching and Iris Yamaoka.

The brilliant direction of George Fitzmaurice has in a large extent responsible for the unabating merriment of this exceedingly funny picture. Producer Frank Davis has dressed it with lavish production furnishings.

"Petticoat Fever" is the first picture to feature Robert Montgomery and Miss Loy since their memorable whistle, "Private Number," which has gone far in personal popularity since that time and improved vastly in acting technique.

Major Bowes New Amateurs

A grand variety of short treats have been assembled for exhibition when the Capitol Theatre presents Major Bowes New Amateurs.... the pick of the new found stars you've been voting for in the Major Bowes self appears in every film.

Dick Gonz ... a real basketball objector in the broadcasting studio today, the boys and girls and grown-ups, whistlers, barnyard imitators and warblers is silence in Major Bowes Capitol Theatre unit, which is a two-reel road show, including several who appeared on Bowes program from time to time.

That the gong now is stilled is explained by the fact that only the cream of talent is presented. "Popular Science" the delightful screen oddity in full beautiful technicolor, and "Fisherman's Luck" are other attractions the great outdoors will be exhibited on the same program.

Two Splendid Features

Two splendid feature attractions will be presented at the Belle Theatre for the last time tonight. "The Brown Eyes," featuring lovely Joan Bennett and Cary Grant and "Love On The Run" featuring Jan Kiepura, popular star of "Three Waltzes" and Europe's greatest tenor and Gladys Swarthout lovely Metropolitan diva.

The last show starts at 8.30.

Three Mentioned to Succeed J. H. Thomas in Cabinet Shake-up

MALCOLM MACDONALD — SIR SAMUEL HOARE — MAJOR ORMSBY-GORE

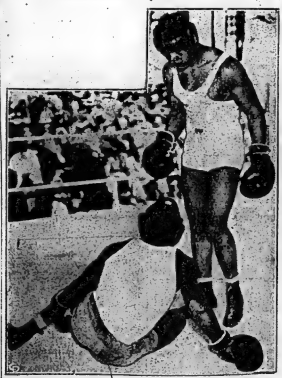
With speculation rife in London as to the successor for Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas in the colonial secretary's office, three names prominently mentioned were Sir Samuel Hoare, Hon. Malcolm MacDonald and Major William Ormsby-Gore.

Mr. Thomas' resignation followed sensational disclosures of a leak in budget information to insurance purchasers and an exhaustive inquiry. Major Ormsby-Gore is signed as foreign secretary during the Rhinelgian crisis. MacDonald's budget was predicted with either or all the three mentioned, in line for appointments. Sir Samuel Hoare resigned as foreign secretary during the Rhinelgian crisis. MacDonald, son of former Premier Ramsay MacDonald, has held minor cabinet appointments and Ormsby-Gore is now first commissioner of works and a former under-secretary for the colonies.

PRODUCER MUST SAY "YES" BEFORE THE Y CAN WED

Britain's romancing screen stars in Hollywood, Merle Oberon and David Niven, are in a peculiar predicament. Apparently very serious about marriage intentions the pair cannot proceed with nuptial plans unless Samuel Goldwyn, noted producer, gives his permission. Both have contracts with Goldwyn containing clauses that make it necessary for the producer to approve before they marry. Plimdom awaits Goldwyn's return from a business trip for his announcement. Here are Miss Oberon and Niven a-motoring.

PILOT SAVES GIRL'S LIFE BY GRASPING HAIR



Pilot Charles W. Sutherland, of Boston, seen climbing from his cock-pit had one flight over Boston harbor that he will long remember. The girl in the circle, who gave her name as Jane Doe and refused police any other information, chartered his machine for a flight, then, with Sutherland flying at 10,000 feet, opened the safety strap and tried to jump to her death. Sutherland seized her blonde hair and while his aeroplane twisted and dived practically out of control, fought the struggling girl until he had pulled her back into the cockpit. He held her and brought his machine safely to earth. "Give me a gun", was all "Jane Doe" would say to police.

CONSTELLATION OF STARS SNAPPED AT HOLLYWOOD FUNCTION

Speaking astronomically, it happens only once in a blue moon that a roving cameraman would find three movie stars (of such magnitude), appearing together in public as the three pictured here. It's Big Chief Buddy Myer now, since the Washington star second baseman has been duly welcomed into the Navajo tribe by visiting braves. The Navajo warriors did a war dance in Myer's honor before a recent game against Boston Red Sox and Buddy attired in tribal headdress is shown here. He was also presented with a $500 diamond ring by U. S. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi — and he's wearing the ring. 'Twas a very nice party, he avers.

The Missing Man

Mary R. P. Hatch

When Mrs. Fry told her was but little more than Constance had already heard, but it gave her pause to think about for several days, indeed, until a week had passed. But at the end of that time an incident occurred which surprised and alarmed her not a little.

One morning, hearing the door-bell ring, Miss Hamilton opened it herself, Mary being busy, and was surprised to see Tony Osborn standing there, idly flicking the dust from his boot with a small cane.

"Ah, good morning, Mr. Hamilton. Jolly weather, isn't it?"

"Very pleasant. Will you come in, Tony?"

"Thanks, no, I just want to see Mr. Hamilton."

"Mr. Hamilton! Surely you have forgotten that he is away."

"Dead beat to get home?"

"Certainly not. I don't expect him for a week."

"Eh—I see the bank last night, Mrs. Hamilton. Of that, I am certain."

"Then where can he be now?"

"Search me! I suppose he was here, and I called over, to see him, as he didn't come to the house. Looks as he is at the mill."

"Without coming home, Tony?"

Young Osborn bit his lip and caught deeply, but each moment grew more bewildered.

"Did you speak to him?" asked Mrs. Hamilton.

"Yes, and he spoke to me. Banking hours are over at four, you know, and it was just after that that I saw him going into the bank as I was passing. Shillie,' he said, and I thought a little, 'Didn't expect me back so soon, did you?' I said, 'I didn't,' thought he went in and shut the door after him, and I went home."

"Tony, that couldn't have been Mr. Hamilton."

"It certainly was. It was his voice I heard, and his form, features, garb, everything. I couldn't have been mistaken."

"Tony," said Mrs. Hamilton, in a low, terrified voice, "I am afraid we have been deceived. It must have been a burglar."

"Oh no, there isn't the least doubt in the world that it was Mr. Hamilton; none at all."

"Was everything right this morning?"

"Yes."

"Nothing missing?"

"No, nothing at all. All that surprised me is that he isn't here."

"You would certainly have been if he had come home. That makes me think more than ever that he is dead."

For answer Tony took from his vest-pocket a small, white-kid of indigo design and handed it to Mrs. Hamilton.

"I found it on the desk just as it would have fallen if it had become loosened from his shirt front."

"O Tony! What does it mean?" cried Mrs. Hamilton, with white lips. "What can it mean? It is his. I gave him the set myself, and had them mated with his shirts. Oh, this is t-"

"I noticed it," said Tony quietly. "And I'm sure it was his. Now, how did it happen to be on his desk this morning unless it dropped out last night?"

"Perhaps it has laid there, unnoticed, since he went away."

"Impossible. I have dusted and put everything in order daily."

Tony's habits of order were inconvertible. "Cannot you recall last whether he spoke of missing one before he went away, Mrs. Hamilton?"

"No, he said nothing about missing one."

"Then you will find that I am right," said Tony. "Mr. Hamilton was at the bank last night at about eight o'clock. He must have been detained somewhere, and will, no doubt, be here shortly. You may expect to see him coming up the street at any moment," he concluded, reassuringly, for he saw that she was terribly shaken.

"I hope you are right, except as a tramp. I wouldn't worry, if I were you," and Tony went down the stairs, but paused to ask, "Shall I go around to the mill and ask Mr. Carter if he has seen anything of him?"

"Yes, please do, and ask Uncle Carter to come up to see me if Vane isn't there."

"All right," and he turned away. Of course everything were all right, but I'm afraid it isn't," he muttered.

CHAPTER III

CASHIER'S MATTERS AT THE BANK

Constance was left a prey to anxious thoughts while Tony went on toward the mill building, a long, low-built structure on the river-bank. At a distance it resembled a mammoth bee-hive in more respects than one. Men toiling back and forth and the busy hum of machinery were all, perhaps, that suggested the similarity, but it certainly existed.

Tony asked to see Mr. Carter and was directed to his office, a comfortable modern apartment at the rear of the building.

"I am in my own sanctum, I perceive," he growled, as he recognized Tony, and he fell to sorting letters. "What do you make of that, Tony?" holding up the signature of one to Tony.

"Barclay and Co," he read.

"Bar-clay and-dirt! Why can't a man write plain instead of making like that?"

"Mr. Carter, have you seen Mr. Hamilton this morning—or last night?"

"Seen Mr. Hamilton! What do you mean, young man? You ought to know I haven't without asking," he said irritably. Though Mr. Carter was the best natured of men, as was Mr. Henderson, also, they resented Tony of a couple of hens ruffled by a blow. They could do nothing but cluck angrily at this enforced attendance upon business they usually managed to shirk.

"Mr. Hamilton was at the bank last night that's all," said Tony.

"And never came near the mill! Look here, Henderson!" he called. "Vane has come, and we can get him to straighten that consignment matter."

"By George, I'm glad of it. You don't know, Carter, I said this morning how he was likely to walk in at any time."

"But it seems he hasn't," said Tony, coolly, amused, in spite of his anxiety, at their readiness to shuffle off their responsibilities. And then he told them the facts as he had done to Mrs. Hamilton.

"By George! That looks bad, doesn't it, Carter?"

"Yes, where can he be now?"

"That's the question. Perhaps he came back after something, and didn't want to trouble Constance by going to the house, of course, would object to his going away again, and he knows it. He knows every well, too, that his mysterious journeys vex her, as well they might."

"Where does he go, Carter, every year in May?"

"You know as well as I do. I only hope there's no danger in it that's all. Seems as if there must be or he would tell Constance."

"What! Does he tell you?"

"Not a word, no more than you or I."

"Not much like my wife or she would have had the secret before this. What could he have wanted at the bank?"

"Oh, uncle, something dreadful has happened to Vane!" she exclaimed, as soon as she saw him.

"Oh, no, Constance, I guess not. I guess he had business at the bank, something connected with the deposit vault in Boston. He may have written and didn't want to alarm you."

"But father he had spoken to Tony, uncle, he must have known I should worry."

"Yes, so you would. Vane ought to have thought of that, but men are inconsiderate. Very inconsiderate are they, dear."

"Vane isn't. He would know I should worry. I am sure something has happened to him."

"Can't you write anywhere to find out?"

"He gave me an address in Boston, the same I always write to when he is away, but it amounts to but little."

"Why?"

"Because, as Vane explained, he might be miles away, though in the course of a week a letter so addressed was pretty sure to reach him."

"At all events, it will do no harm to write."

"I will, at once; but he ought to be home in a week, now, whether he was at the bank last night or not."

"Yes, he should. Let's see; you got a letter from him last week?"

"No, and he usually writes from Boston the day after he arrives."

"And you have heard nothing since he went away?"

"Nothing. I wondered at it, for I usually receive a line from him at least four times in the two weeks he is absent."

"Constance, has it never struck you as a singular matter that he should go away alone every year in May and stay two weeks?" Mr. Carter looked acutely into his niece's face as he asked the question.

"Yes, it seems very strange, very mysterious, doubly so in the light of recent affairs."

"Well, a week will soon pass, and no doubt, Vane will return safe and well. But let me advise you, Constance. Question him about his journeys, where he goes. You have a right to know."

"I have decided to, uncle; for, as you say, I have the right to know."

As I have said, the time did not pass very quickly, for time lags to hearts wearied or worried. Constance dispatched her letter to the Boston address, and inquiries were made in Grovedale concerning Mr. Hamilton's appearance there on the twenty-second of May, which was the time alleged by young Osborn as the date when he saw and spoke to him.

But no one had seen him, or any person' particularly resembling him. This was a strange circumstance, as at that hour the streets were never deserted, and the electric lights, one of which gleamed at the corner not far from the bank, made it seem impossible that he could have approached the bank, entered it, and gone away, unseen.

MATURE TASKS FACE DOMINION

Right Hon. R. B. Bennett Points Out Burdens of Nationhood

London, Ont., May 28.—(CP)—Secondary control of the dominion by writing on a piece of paper," and by trust in both a material and a spiritual sense, Right Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Prime Minister, declared here last night.

Speaking at the annual banquet of the Canadian Club, Mr. Bennett declared it was up to the Canadian Government to take up the cause of peace and security in the absence of National "laid it down", League efforts in spoke of as "visionary dreams of security."

Canadians would have to set themselves if they were prepared to pay the price, if her aspirations to self-government were to be consummated, British National ideas involved liberty of the individual but not license, he declared that liberty, and the general welfare of the public.

Family The Strongbound

"These immediate aims of the State are common to all nations, and we could not have pressed material advantages in large part even if we surrendered to the spirit of Mentity," he said.

"We must set ourselves resolutely to the task of strengthening our family ties and devising means for the security of the future by tool and sacrifice, we have cruelest and unbearable.

"The time has gone when we, as Canadians, could stand aloof from movements from our own national problems, our own National destiny. Until our failure to do so in these economies have become associated with national disaster, we cannot acquire an intelligent appreciation of world problems or of international obligations.

"We cannot set alone, but we can, in association with others who have similar aspirations and ideals, endeavor to give practical effect to the tracts of the future some basis of stability." Mr. Bennett said, under further speaking of the League of Nations. "There is not much security in covenants."

Overlapping at Home

Speaking of the domestic situation he said:

"We are now compelled to consider how many jurisdictions with overcrowding and overlapping and overlapping of taxation powers, can a state such as ours afford to embrace? The necessity for National unity and National solvency make it imperative that this question should be considered without delay. Confederation is a matter of bargain and it must equip itself for the task of maturity.

"We must ask in all earnestness, have we in this question before us a self-sustaining entity on the north half of the continent, capable of maintaining ourselves, and willing to pay the price for doing so? If the answer is yes, have we the unified will and moral character to give reality to that aspiration? If we have we must think Nationally, and clearly discern those functions of state which, by the very nature of things, can more wisely become National instead of provincial in character."

London, May 28 (AP)—Prime Minister Baldwin today set May 12, 1937 as the day on which King Edward VIII will be formally invested with the authority of the British throne in a centuries-old coronation ceremony.

The announcement was made in a special issue of the official gazette. The date will be officially proclaimed at colorful ceremonies in the heart of London tomorrow.

Moral Offences Against 21 Yr-Old Niece Proven

Los Angeles, May 28.—(AP)—Rebert E. Peck, convicted on three counts alleging morals offences with his comely 21-year-old niece, Lois Wright, is due to be sentenced Monday, and there is every indication he will go to prison on charges of grooming his fifth wife in a habitation subject to the laws of the State of californian.

Each of the three charges involving the red-haired barber's pulchritudinous niece, on which a jury convicted him yesterday, carries a penalty of one to 50 years imprisonment.

A co-defendant with James on the fifth grooming case is Charles Hope, a former sailor.

WRANGEL ISLAND TYRANT EXECUTED

Semenchuk And His Aide Startseff Shot in Prison

Moscow, May 28.—M. E. Semenchuk, tyrant of Wrangel Island convicted of leading a reign of terror, was shot to death last night.

His chief lieutenant, S. P. Startseff, also paid with his life for the killing of Dr. F. Wilhelm Herz, German Soviet scientific expedition which visited the Polar region.

An official announcement tersely said: "The sentence of the supreme court has been carried out". Pleas for clemency from convicted men had been rejected earlier by the central executive committee.

No mention was made as to the time and place of the execution. It was generally understood, however, the men were shot by one official shot discharged a pistol behind prisoner's head. The sentences probably were carried out in Butirki prison in the suburbs of Moscow, where the prisoners were confined.

The trial of Semenchuk attracted the widest attention of any criminal case since the assassination of Serge Kiroff, one of Joseph Stalin's chief assistants, in December, 1934.

The former Island "dictator" and his lieutenant were sentenced to death after conviction on a charge of murdering Dr. Herz and their pet-lord of grace expired last night. No official reason was disclosed for holding the execution over until today.

The wife of the former "tyrant" faces a charge of perjury as a result of her testimony during her husband's trial.

Both Semenchuk and Startseff denied the charges against them. Semenchuk's wife, Mary, on whose sentence was pronounced, sobbingly declared Semenchuk "I don't deserve to die".

Startseff nonchalantly lighted a cigarette in the courtroom.

SCHOOL TAX LOOMS

Various Departments Under Fire At Convention

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—Candidates for the Provincial Conservative party leadership today made their first official appearance before the electing convention when their names were placed in nomination, and delivered a brief address.

First on the list, A. A. Acres, M.P., Cochrane, who told how he was a descendant of two of the oldest pioneers in the province, and there should be a greater distribution of wealth to the back-to-the-land movement.

"Never in the history of the province were there such needs as at present," declared Hon. George S. Henry, Premier, when he introduced Mr. Acres. He described Mr. Acres as the "mouthpiece of the Province" because he had "been one," and said provincial and federal politicians were against the Legislative Attacks."

He charged members of his legislature with "playing politics" with the assessment bill but voted for the Government's measure when it was passed. He said if they did not he would not be with them for two years.

Mr. Acres said he was the first man in the Legislature to make the suggestion for a tax on tobacco and declared he was a better friend of the farmer than "those two men" here Mapburn, whom he described as a Hero."

The Carleton member announced that he was in favor of the principle of privately he would first pass a bill establishing a three-member board to administer the assessment which would be a woman. Secondly, he would pass a bill to repeal the tobacco tax resolution. No Separate School would be established unless those petitioning for it gave an undertaking to pay their taxes to the Public School.

The first bill mentioned in the throne speech would be that establishing the school for leadership.

Says Mrs. Magill Did Not Get $8,000 in Gold From Mine

By E. L. WILLIAMS

Haileybury, May 28.—Arthur Phillips, Deputy Inspector of Mines for Cumberland County, today told the Coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Isabella Magill that he was informed about $6,000 in gold from the Mosher Long Lake Mine had been taken away by Mrs. Herman Magill, wife of the Toronto barrister, who was killed with her.

P. D. Henderson, foreman of the mine, denied that Mrs. Magill received $8,000 in gold from the mine.

"It is time to deny that!" exclaimed Henderson, jumping to his feet. Commissioner Norman McKenzie waved the foreman back, and Donald Grant, counsel for the Magill estate, continued his examination.

"How did you come to give this information today?" he asked.

Phillips said he had read newspaper reports, which quoted Henderson as saying no gold had come from the mine.

The commission heard evidence that Mrs. Magill planning to take mine to New York parties when Mosher Long Lake Mines closed down, imprisoning Magill, Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding.

MUNICIPAL PROBLEMS

Dismissal of Game Officials Attacked by Former Premier

Toronto, May 28 (CP)—Ontario Conservatives, gathered today to choose a new provincial leader, in succession to George S. Henry, first heard an address by Mr. Henry before turning to resolutions and nominations.

Scenes greeted the appearance of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson and Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. W. D. Hamilton, sister of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Federal Conservative leader.

Mr. Henry said the convention was the largest the Conservatives ever held in the province.

"I am pleased as the former leader of the party—leader for the last five years—to welcome you to this convention," said Mr. Henry.

Two or three major problems stood out, continued the former premier, but he wished to discuss them.

Economies Are Urged

Premier Hepburn talked of economies, "but he doesn't mean what they" said Mr. Henry.

"The only way it will be our task to sum up the inaccuracies—I would even go as far as to say the untruthfulness—that are being made on the platform by the Prime Minister and some of his ministers at these times to them."

Referring to Hydro, he said the Conservatives had solved this problem in the north. At the time was a depletion in the value of the "but year or two, however, there was a change. The Conservatives in Quebec province because there was no power available, and always be a power surplus in Ontario.

Charges Surplus Destroyed.

The former premier accused the government of destroying the surplus and criticized the short terms for contracts with Quebec power companies, approved in the last session.

The government was depleting Hydro's cash reserves, Mr. Henry charged.

He then attacked administration of the liquor legislation by the present government, asserting there was a lack of control in beer sales following the abolition of warehouse inspection.

The liquor question would be a major one in the next campaign and the Conservatives stood on their record of control.

In Separate School tax legislation the party would "stand pat" and not attack" on the public schools. He condemned what he described as arbitrary dismissals on large corporations under this legislation.

Henry Attacks Plan.

"It will be an issue in the campaign—I mean the election," Mr. Henry, "because the people of the province are not going to have the public school system to be depredicated."

Practically half the Liberals opposed the school tax legislation, he contended, but voted for party discipline.

Toronto Girl is Stowaway, Put Off Liner at Cherbourg

Rahama Siegel, Film Company Worker Takes Trip

TEMPTED TO STAY

Cherbourg, May 28 (CP-Havas)—The giant liner Queen Mary today left behind her a romantic but somewhat cruel fallen young Canadian girl who gave up her dreams of a "supremely thrilling" transatlantic voyage as a stowaway on the liner's maiden trip to New York to be put off at Cherbourg after a few hours of travel.

She is Rahama T. Siegel, young film company worker who left a New York job recently to seek a new position in England.

The stowaway, who said her parents have their residence in Chabas, embarked at Southampton on a visitor's ticket, answering the irresistible call to go down to the sea in ships as a stowaway.

It was soon found that the young girl was carrying no visa permit among its passengers. Courteously but firmly Miss Siegel was informed she would have to alight when the ship arrived at Cherbourg at 8 p.m.

"I went aboard for a thrill," she said. "I knew it would be a supreme experience. It is the best I have an apartment in New York but my parents reside in Canada.

"I came to England on the Aquitania last April 22. I was there with a film company in New York for four years, and came to England to be married to a British film concern. I did not really mean to make this trip to Europe.

"But when I had been on the ship for a few hours the temptation became overwhelming," she concluded smilingly.

Rahama Siegel, who 'stowed away' on Britain's giant liner Queen Mary, is a 1927 arts graduate of University of Toronto and daughter of a member of Toronto's Board of Education.

While an undergraduate of the University here she won an oratorical contest, later going to New York to join the world. Her mother is Mrs. Ida Siegel, a school trustee.

FERGUSON TO BE ACTIVE IN PARTY

Aligns Self With Drive to Return Conservatives to Power

Toronto, May 26.—Definite indication that Hon. G. Howard Ferguson will be active in the political field but intends to become a driving force behind the Conservative party with Federal Ottawa as his goal within two years, was believed forecast in his remarks to delegates before the annual meeting of the Ontario Liberal-Conservative Association, at the Royal York Hotel.

Cheers echoed throughout the crowded ballroom of the hotel when the former premier entered with Mrs. Ferguson during the meeting's election of officers. They broke out again when Premier Hepburn, and Mr. Ferguson, picturing a sweep by the Conservative party throughout Ontario, announced that in that progress he intended to be "in on the proceedings."

Later, in an interview, he was asked the significance of his words. "It means I'm going to work like blankety-blank," he said.

TORIES CHARGE

Regarding the Assessment Act amendments, declaring valid the School issues, Col. Drew said: "I am for repeal of the amendment passed at the last session, and there is no qualification to that statement."

He would not refer the question to any commission, he said.

Premier Hepburn had done nothing for the farmer, continued Col. Drew. He abolished the Farm Loan Board, the Co-operative Trusts, and left the premier's action "in Mr. Hepburn's hands."

Cheers.

"Our health system has been interfered with for the first time since Confederation," charged Col. Drew, "and the conditions today are worse than ever. Mental hospitals are overcrowding and the sanitoria are full."

"I belong to no group, no class, no creed, as far as the government of the province is concerned," he said, adding that the money was the people's money, not the government's own.

"Col. Drew, the ladies want to know if you're married?" said an interpreter.

"I guess the reason I have some money is because I never married," was the reply.

Col. Drew declared that the one government department which should be maintained was that of northern development, because the north is the province's greatest problem.

School Tax Seen As Issue

Arthur Ellis, M.L.A., Ottawa South, reviewed his political career from Ottawa aldermanic to his reelection to the legislature in 1934. He was the first member to head public accounts committee which investigated the Ontario road building contracts.

Shortly after the inquiry the northern development department was taken out of the hands of Hon. Peter Heenan and put under the mines department.

The Separate School question, said Mr. Ellis, must likely would be the outstanding issue in the next election. He regretted injection of a religious issue into provincial politics and said he was in full accord with the present government. Premier Hepburn, he declared, in this would result in political gain. What was needed, he declared, was what was given them under the British North America Act but were not included in the constitution. If sanction enlarged the rights of Separate Schools, he declared, then them would be taken from public schools, he declared.

"If I became leader of the Conservative party in this province, I would not be afraid to say that privately that act will be repealed," said Mr. Ellis.

Hydro and Government.

Hydro, he declared, was under government domination and control, and "most of the engineers of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission were hired from day to day."

The Hydro organization should be free from political interference, said Mr. Ellis, who proposed that Hydro Commission that would function as a business man and a representative body.

Premier Hepburn, he said, increased the provincial bonded debt by $46,500,000 or all the rate of $77,000 a day.

Wilfrid Heighington, M.L.A., Toronto, St. David, declared Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Lands and Forests, had practically constituted himself "King-Emperor" of Ontario.

—King Peter I". He had assumed ministerial power through legislation providing for reforestation of timber limits.

With the present Ontario government in power it was fortunate the province had Premier Hepburn in the house of London, Mr. Heighington said, or they would be sold down the river in Varsity allotment to enrich the provincial coffers.

Mr. Heighington revealed it was he who introduced the amendment to the Assessment Act in 1935 in the Legislature, and in any other Legislature, "I would introduce the same." The amendment saying the Assessment Act was the people would have to swallow it, he said.

Ben Rigsby Trampled on

Leopold Macaulay, M.L.A., York South, considered the gathering a meeting of the shareholders of the province.

"There never was a time in the history of this province when the people were more against the party trampled on as they are today," said Mr. Macaulay.

If any of the leadership contenders looked him, it would be to defeat but a common aspiration to serve the province, he said. It had been said he was a member of a defeated government.

"Was I to run, knowing first and foreup out and refuse to run?" he said. Sometimes discretion was one of the most difficult in the province. Men who voted against him in 1934 would be prepared to carry him to victory.

The 19 opposition members in the Legislature formed a united front, declared as "unscrupulous, unsound premier."

Premier to "Wipe Out"

Mr. Macaulay predicted sure defeat for Premier Hepburn and said election tactics in Regina would be considered nothing beside.

Returning to the school tax legislation, Mr. Macaulay said:

"If I am elected Premier of this province, item No. 1, bill No. 1 of session No. 1 will be devoted to repeal of the Hepburn bill.

"It cannot be defended; it won't be defended, and it will be wiped out as a blot on provincial security.

It was necessary, he added, to fill Ontario public life to a higher plane.

Rowe Discusses Education

Hon. W. Earl Rowe, M.P., Dufferin-Simcoe, saw the Conservative party brought back to power as a force in the next election.

"I personally believe," he said, "that has been laid down by the party leader, Mr. Bracken, is sound.

The present government made no move to improve educational conditions and economics that enabled education was not seized to report to the Legislature.

Without any mandate the government put through the amendment to the Assessment Act and forced the people as they had not been before, declared Mr. Rowe.

Mr. Rowe described the legislation as "a mess" and cannot stay on the statute books."

Minority Rights

No party could guarantee the minorities rights without restoring a square deal to the majority, he said.

"The first act of a government of this kind, Mr. Rowe, would be to repeal the Separate School legislation.

He attacked the present government on the Quebec power contract legislation and charged an effort by the government to withhold municipal representation of the Hydro Commission.

On the commission were "two Orti politicians and one ex-Orti lawyer-politician."

The government dismissed 2,000 civil servants and soon hired about 1,000 included wives and friends, charged Mr. Rowe.

Representation of Redistricting.

The government now boasted a balanced budget would be repeated next year. Does to increased taxation and depletion of services, they should have a surplus of $10,000,000 he said.

"If you give me the leadership of the Liberal-Conservative party at the next election, I will give me the health in the time ahead, I'll give you victory," Mr. Rowe promised.

Former Mayor W. J. Stewart of Toronto told the delegates they were present to elect a leader to redeem the good name of the Province of Ontario".

Mr. Stewart declared he was one of the first to say on a public platform that he would support the separate school tax legislation. Since then many others had jumped "on the bandwagon".

They were Franks Numerous.

There was no shortage of planks in the Conservative platform. They included youth problems, preservation of British institutions, development of the north.

THE "QUEEN MARY"

The progress of the giant liner "Queen Mary" named after Britain's Queen, across the Atlantic for the next few days will have a great deal of interest for the world, especially the shipping world. Of the behaviour on the mighty deep of this latest of floating palaces there is not the slightest doubt. Unless there is risk of damaging the engines the vessel will make an effort to recover in her maiden voyage to New York the record taken by the great French liner Normandie, not so long ago when British speed supremacy was eclipsed.

To capture the record the Queen Mary must cruise at a speed a little better than 30.35 knots, which was the Normandie's rate on her return voyage. On trial runs the Queen Mary has reached a top speed of 32.84 knots.

In any event, the latest colossus of the sea is expected to race to New York in very little more than four days' time, arriving there Sunday.

An investment of more than $25,000,000 was involved in the completed Queen Mary, towering high above the water with her 12 decks.

The vessel is slightly smaller in gross tonnage than the Normandie, her 80,778 tons being compared to a tonnage of nearly 82,000 for the Normandie.

The length of the Queen Mary is 1,018 feet, compared to 1,029 for the Normandie. The British vessel has a beam of 118 feet, to the 119 feet of her French rival. The distance from the Queen Mary's keel to top superstructure is 135 feet.

LORD TWEEDSMUIR AND THE DOCTORS

Lord Tweedsmuir has the happy faculty of getting to know men and institutions. Yesterday he talked to the medical men of Ontario at London, telling them that Canadian doctors are the medical shock troops of this continent. He has discovered, that the great medical schools of the United States, such as Johns Hopkins at Baltimore and some of the chief clinics are manned largely by Canadians. "Everywhere in the United States," His Excellency said, "a Canadian doctor has a position of special prestige. I have been told—I need hardly say by a fellow countryman—that Canadians in the States very rarely in the same position that a Scotsman does in England."

As said before he knows men and institutions like a born Canadian now, for he has the inclination and the ability to understand them. So he calls medicine the noblest of all callings, for no other profession gets so close to the human heart and to the heart and in no other calling are these demands more gallantly met. Medicine demands constant study, the mind must be kept alert. He thought all the general practitioner, he thought all would agree, is the foundation stone of the whole profession.

His Governor General then launched into a tribute to the doctor all through the ages. He said—

"A busy doctor has his day filled with a variety of cases which call for accessing to the knowledge and skill which he possesses; but he must be constantly adding to that knowledge and skill, for daily the work of research and experiment is adding to the doctor's equipment. If he is a conscientious man, he dare not get out of touch with the latest developments. He owes that duty to his patients. He cannot afford to treat a case by antique methods when new and better methods are available. And he owes that duty to himself."

The doctor's skill had enriched literature. Sassoon, in his own words, had been "cut for the stone" in early life and thereby given many years of fruitful and happy work, with enormous benefit to himself and to the public services. If Sir Walter Scott could have been operated on for gall stones, his span of life might have been increased, while treatment for duodenal ulcer might have softened the temper of Thomas Carlyle.

The Governor General recalled the contributions to literature made by two great doctors, Sir Thomas Browne, who had written "Religio Medici" and Sir John Brown, author of "Rab and his Friends."

By such healthy understanding of men as individuals and in their callings Lord Tweedsmuir who has been a student of mankind, and a student of life and whose findings are enshrined in his numerous historical studies, his novels and his many other writings, has made himself one of the most popular holders of the vicereal office in Canadian history.

His years in Canada will not only ripen that noble understanding and sympathy which he has for all men but will, there is not the least doubt, help in the development of the interests of the Canadian people. Seeing as we are, his sympathetic mind will understand us and perhaps gently lead us from some of the faults along the way to a cosmopolitanism of view which every nation requires.

His study of the Canadian doctor is a good start of that way for which he has come to understand all the people of this land.

A SECOND BLOOMING

My days were filled with petty cares;
The stars and hills were lost to me;
The dawns and evenings I o'erlooked;
Too late, life's values I could see.

For winter came ere I observed
My wonder flowers fair and sweet;
My roses blooming in the sun
Were trodden down by careless feet.

As rains that weep the clouds away
Spring comes again. I need not probe
To find re-birth in God's great plan,—
I only need to touch His robe.

HERR HITLER, HAVING SMASHED THE VERSAILLES TREATY to little bits and pieces, is busy annoying his neighbor France by polishing loaded guns at him across the Rhine and taunting him with the unspoken question "What are you going to do about it?"—like the old chip-on-the-shoulder-game we used to play at school—knock it off and fight—I dare you —you dasn't because I'd just bust you all up if you did, and all that sort of youthful bravado. Herr Hitler gets a big hand from the German populace as he struts his hero stuff, and now turns his attention to a demand for the return of the German colonies lost during the Great War. He has nothing to lose and is sure to add fuel to the hero worship. He likes his job and as long as he can talk and walk and strut and bluff he can keep on enjoying his position. This is his day in the sun, he'd better enjoy it to the utmost while he may.

OLD TIME PROSPECTORS WHO FOUGHT FOR LIFE AND WEALTH against cold, hunger, insects, animals, snow, ice and turbulent stream, are amazed, and it might be said disgusted, at the modern trend in prospecting which discards the prospector's pack, his pick, his bacon, bannock and beans, and soars aloft like a bird to skim over mountains and forests and drop down in likely looking spots in No Man's Land. The airplane has made a wonderful difference in the production of mining. Prospectors can reach their claims in a few hours, where once more was required before, while miners can bring in supplies and machinery and get in and out without hardship in jig time. The old desert rat with his flea in little burro sees a shadow cross the path of the sun and hears the roar of a plane passing swiftly overhead, as the first notes in the knell of doom to his calling. Gold is where you find it but the bird men get there first.

W. H. IRELAND IS RE-ELECTED HEAD

from every riding have to settle party policies embodied in a series of resolutions.

A special committee, composed of leading party members, sat until early today drafting the final resolutions. Mr. Ferguson was in the closely-guarded committee room for a time.

Originally nine men sought the leadership but before noon yesterday of Mayor Cecil Frost of Lindsay and Mr. Martin of Brantford, former welfare minister, who withdrew last night, left the field six strong.

They are: A. H. Acres, M.L.A., Toronto; Frank Billington, M. L. A., Toronto St. David; Leopold Macaulay, M.L.A., York South; Omar Hill, M.L.A., Simcoe South; Hon. W. Earl Rowe, M.P., Dufferin-Simcoe; Hon. Col. Arthur Drew, Guelph; former Mayor W. J. Stewart, Toronto.

Ireland Re-elected

After re-electing W. H. Ireland of Trenton as president of the Ontario Conservative Association, delegates yesterday were given some advice by Mr. Ferguson, Prime Minister Mc-Bride of Toronto regarding the leadership contest.

Mr. Ferguson urged the delegates not to be worried over such emotional ideas, that this is a popularity contest." The Toronto Mayor declared that every man has a man with the courage of his convictions.

When the association meeting finished, the leadership gathering opened in another hall. Mr. Henry reviewing his leadership briefly declared: "I do not propose to tell my name is on the ballot tomorrow."

Member of Old Gang

Mr. Ireland, in his opening remarks as chairman, described himself as a member of "the old gang of Tories," who "keep the ship going when others are in opposition," and told the gathering he had "never been accused of employing gags or exclusion methods at any time nor do I intend to today."

Immediately after all the beginning of the meeting upon a proposal moved by Mr. Ferguson, York county, to amend the constitution to permit members of riding associations to become members of the Ontario association without paying the $1 fee for provincial membership.

"A lot of our members of the riding associations cannot afford to pay the dollar". Mr. MacKenzie declared. "They feel that they are shoved into the cold. A lot of men would have been here today who are just as good Conservatives as you or I but they cannot be here because they cannot pay the dollar."

"What Canada needs, and Ontario needs, is Conservatives, not just Conservatives with money," remarked Alderman E. Sanders of St. Thomas, seconding Mr. MacKenzie's proposal.

This matter was finally turned over to the incoming executive, after which a proposal of W. E. Williams, that the new executive appoint a committee to draft a new constitution of the association to the whole province.

The Eastern Association, to which belong the delegates from the counties that the province be divided into western, central, northern and eastern district associations, and the officers of these associations form party leaders in the executive of the Ontario Association. Thus, he said, the association would be solidified and the matter of membership in the provincial association being settled. Names of the district associations could be considered in connection with tuition.

"We have lots of men who are coming up to-morrow who couldn't come to-day because they cannot afford it," remarked Thomas McKinney, Prince Edward County.

"I don't want to apply the gag or any exclusion, but we must get a lot of speed or we'll be here all afternoon," said Mr. Ireland, proposing both Mr. MacKenzie's and Mr. Williams' proposals be passed over to the executive. This was unanimously approved.

Mr. Stewart of London, took over the chairmanship of the convention while delegates went on with the nominations of officers. Regretful that he would be unable to contest the office of president of the association, Mr. Ford told the convention that he would, however, be standing 100 per cent. behind the candidates which the delegates selected.

The meeting ruled that each candidate for the presidential office should be granted three minutes in which to appeal for votes and then, before nominations were closed, five names were put forward from the floor. These nominated for the office were: W. H. Ireland, immediate past president, of Trenton; John F. Soards, Kingston; G. J. Frost, Mayor of Lindsay; R. W. Brett, Shelburne; and Karl Hamith of Preston. Both out the province.

Mr. Brett and Mr. Soards requested that their names be withdrawn.

W. H. Ireland, in allowing his name to stand for re-election, told the convention that the Hepburn Government was definitely "on its way out."

"I think that the Ontario people are now fast willing for an opportunity of telling the Liberal premier to pack up his bags and go," he declared. "If ever there was a time when delegates in Queen's Park they are there right now."

Stayed With Ship

Appealing to the delegates for their support in his candidature for the presidential office, Mr. Ireland told them that he was not sticking to the ship now because the Conservatives were coming back into power.

"I stayed with the ship in shallow waters," he declared, "and, regardless of what you do this afternoon, if I can ever be of any assistance to the new leader you can always count on me."

No stone had been left unturned to make the convention a success, he concluded, and more than 30,000 letters had been sent out through-

Do you know that—
The Scotch Parliament Once Passed a Decree of Punishment for all Golfers

History tells us that golf was originally a pastime of the Scots who also played a variation of the game on ice, with a stake rather than a ball. It is said that how the Scotch happened to adopt the game is unknown. However it was sufficiently popular to cause the parliament that in 1457 the parliament decreed that golf and football "be utterly cryed down and not used," with strict penalties for those disobeying the decree. Golf, however, defied the opposition and from all these has been known in Scotland as "the Royal and Ancient Game."

Golf is to-day accepted and enjoyed by Canadians of every age and season . . . it is probably the world's most popular game. Many are the golfers who have enjoyed it from pre here. Sufficient to say that you need only play once for golf to exercise your enthusiasm and hold it for a lifetime.

WOODLEY'S

Trenton and District

Trenton, May 26.—(Special) — Trenton police are definitely sorry that they took four juveniles into custody on Saturday afternoon. Two of them were taken in by the Belleville police force, charged and released on bail. Another charge that they skipped them back to Trenton. The fourth boy went in a room off the jail, they made no much noise, that they were let out and let roam around the jail proper. Here they found a large cowboy suit, bead cast, broke windows and knocked the stove pipes down. Mr. Wilbur Wright, who is in charge of the jail, then made his escape from the cells. Soon afterwards police heard a hub-bub in the jail and upon looking found the boys out of the cells. On asking them how they got out, they said they let them out. One of the fathers phoned from Toronto inquiring about his son. Police asked him to come and get him out as he was wrecking the jail. Mr. Wright said that he would be down as soon as possible and when he got there he found the boys gone. The boys gave their address as Edgewood Avenue, Lake Avenue, Orchard and Windfield Avenue, Toronto. While two of them are in Belleville three weeks ago, they broke out of the room they were held in and it took Beatrice Delaney, Miss Winnifred Wyatt, Miss Katherine Brennan, Mr. Clare Brennan and Mr. Albert Case.

Later in the afternoon the guests were entertained by Miss Brennan at the accordian rendered by Mr. Albert Case, and vocal solos by Mr. Sargeant Warren, Montreal.

The happy couple will reside at Read.

Campbellford Resident 84 Years Old Sunday

Mr. Joe Whitehead Has Resided in Campbellford 70 Years

Mr. Joseph Whitehead of Stirling motored to Campbellford on Sunday to convey his good wishes to his father Mr. Joseph Whitehead, on the occasion of that place who upon that day celebrated his eighty-fourth birthday.

Mr. Whitehead is one of Campbellford's oldest citizens having resided there for more than fifty-three years. He is still well in the days when they forded the river at that particular point, which eventually gave it its name. Mr. Whitehead came to this country for the purpose of visiting his parents in the city of Belleville when he was twelve years old. The family then moved to Stirling and from there where he returned to Bentall, Hungerford township, where he remained until 1866 when he returned to this side of the Atlantic with Miss Ellen Brock as his bride and settled in Campbellford where he has resided ever since.

During the past week Mr. Whitehead who since his wife's death eight years ago resided with his son on Victoria St. with his married daughter, was visited by his daughter from New York and showered with good wishes and gifts at a surprise party given in honor of the honor. Mr. Whitehead has been in failing health for some time past at the home of his son, prominent business man of the village and on above short visits to the home and circle of friends here with his kindly good humour, friends regret to see with his son in wishing many more years of continued good health.

In reply to the following address read by Miss Jean Adams:

Dear Miss Rodgers:

We, your friends and neighbours have taken the privilege of coming to your home tonight to spend a social evening with you before your departure for your new home and to show the kindly regard we have for you. In token of our love and esteem, we ask you, Mabel, to accept these gifts and as you use them in your home may it bring to your mind the many friends who will always wish you every happiness in your married life.

Signed on behalf of the friends, Mrs. Ross Wright.

Miss Rodgers thanked the friends for the gifts and wishes and invited all present to partake of refreshments which were served by Mrs. Arthur Rodgers assisted by several of the other ladies present.

Mrs. Rodgers keeps in wonderful health having celebrated her birthday in its fullest, and though taken completely by surprise, along with her daughter, by Fred Whitehead of Rosetown, Sask., who is making an extended visit to the East and had shared with her mother the honour of the evening.

PRESENTATION

Friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hall gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Longwell of Foxboro on Thursday night, and presented them with an electric floor lamp, bridge lamp and electric iron, as a token of their esteem. Reeve Aspinall addressed the couple and Mrs. Hall read the following address and card, and the early hours of Saturday.

Mrs. Donald Longwell read the address which follows:

Dear John and Annie:

As you have made for yourselves a new home in Belleville and have left your old home here, we feel we should show you how much we think of you and regret very much your going.

We feel we have been kin before, but we didn't know you were going so soon, or we would have had a party to see you off the thought.

"As dreams their clouds depart" so will the feeling of grief and trial and true friends deepen.

We are glad to think you greatly ever ready to help at all times, when sickness or trouble came to our homes, you were there to help and console. In times of gladness you were there also.

It is hard to part when friends are true.

Perhaps it may cause a sigh, a tear,

Then steal away give little warning,

Choose thine own time, say not good night,

But in some brighter clime, bid us good morning.

We ask you to accept these gifts as a remembrance of your friends in Foxboro.

Signed on behalf of your friends by Mr. and Mrs. B. Wild, Mrs. C. Hall and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gay.

The call was presented in its presentation by Rev. W. A. Young, B.Sc., A. of the Huron Presbytery and was accompanied by the session clerk, Board of Management, and Women's Missionary Society of the congregation calling.

Representatives from Mr. Hill's congregations spoke highly of the services their ministry has been during the four years of his pastorate and expressed deep regret over his severance.

In granting that the pastoral tie be dissolved and release granted, a number of presbyters made kindly references to the scholarship and fellowship of Mr. Hill, as well as to the many services rendered by him as a presbyter.

Mr. Hill assumes his duties in his new charge early in July and that under most favorable conditions as Moderator of the Kingston Presbytery.

Rev. R. J. Cameron, a former Moderator, presided, while the call was under consideration and Rev. W. A. Hunter, B.A., B.D., will be Interim Moderator in the charge of Foxboro, etc., while vacant.

EDWARD M'MULLEN IS BEING SOUGHT

Believed to be Member of Ryan Gang Implicated in Markham Shooting

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—Police efforts to break up Red Ryan's hat ring were believed today to have been with the offer of a $1,200 reward for information leading to capture of Edward McMullen (Yonge-Eglinton) McMullen, Ryan's closest confidant, is sought as an accessory after the fact to the murder of Provincial Constable Arthur Hastings, O.P.P. officer, who was killed in the Markham shooting. Until then they were unidentified.

They had the word today of the murdered village constable, that he recognized McMullen from a picture which he had seen on him and his father. He wasn't so sure about the son, but the father, he said, might have been there too.

Police warned U.S. and Western Canada police to watch for McMullen, reported to be headed west. He is now in custody in the Ontario Penitentiary and broke from the prison with Ryan and three others last October.

Police ignore the suggestion of Wednesday, but police deeds in the young man said he would not have to.

A Toronto man told police he is almost certain he was in contact with McMullen in this city, and said the wanted man tried to sell him a diamond ring.

The informant also claimed he saw McMullen on a Toronto street westbound, but police doubt this information as they learned McMullen was headed west.

IN MEMORIAM

MURRAY—In loving memory of our dear mother, Nelle Murray, who passed away one year ago today, May 26, 1929.

Deep in our hearts has a picture
Of the loved one gone to rest;
In our memory's frame we will keep it
Because she was one of the best.
Our lips cannot speak, how we loved her,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say;
God alone knows how we miss her
In our hearts that are crowned in clay.
To those who have a mother,
Treasure her with care;
You will never know her value
Till you her vacant chair.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by Sons and Daughter.

Sky Mineral Mill Assured

Expected Shortly

From a well informed source it is learned that Consolidated Mining & Smelting Co. of Canada will shortly decide on the site of the Big Missouri mill in the very near future. Announcement is expected to be made in this connection within the next few days to three weeks.

In the annual report of Big Missouri Mines Corporation, President Hedley Gifford this month, that "last fall sufficient ore (with gold) was proved in sight to justify the installing an operation of at least 900 tons per day, and the construction of the mill was postponed until the spring of 1930, when the entire work would justify larger operation."

In view of the average low grade ore at the Rouse Vista property a large operation is generally considered to reduce costs to a minimum. This consideration has been suggested that the most economical tonnage to start with would be 1000 or 1500 tons daily. It has been calculated that on the basis of 1000 tons daily and millheads of $11.50 to $4.50, Big Missouri's ore per cent. production of $4,000,000 would be equal to over 10 cents per share on the outstanding capital.

O'Leary Reports on Three Streak High Grade Ore on 800-Ft Level

According to unofficial reports, O'Brien has cut high grade ore on the 800-foot level. It will be remembered that rich ore has been encountered on the 600-foot level of the mine on the 700 and 1000 foot levels and a discovery on one of these levels would probably lead to confirm the continuity of the ore shoot between the 600 and 1000 feet. Should it prove continuous, it is estimated that the value of this ore shoot alone would be in the neighborhood of $4,000,000.

Activity in Cobalt Stocks Likely to Set Arrangements Pending

As a result of the important strides in the Cobalt area, Nipissing Cadillac stocks have become favorites with speculators in Toronto, and the district is reported to be preparing for a further influx of buyers from these centres. Financing negotiations are reported to be under way in connection with the Canadian Pandora, Graham Bousquet, Nipissing Gold Operators and Wood Cadillac.

Gremlin Interest in Junior Golds

The chief topic of conversation in the Toronto mines and oils brokerage quarters who would never think of buying a share of stock without first carefully investigating the possibilities of several promising junior "golds" is the gremlin which stands for the imagination of traders and speculators.

Gold producers have no worry about the disposal of their output, being the only form of metal that is in the world in such a position. There is no surplus supply of this precious metal and no price-cutting exists. Every time an ounce of gold is produced, it adds to, definitely, the increasing the wealth of the Dominion for $35.

Margin Requirements Restrict Trading

The Trader in Barron's points out that Stock Exchange rules and the Reichsbank's action in raising the rediscount rate to 5 per cent. are the restricted that. That is why the volume of trading is small and the speculative public hasn't the funds to buy heavily on margin, it is said.

The professionals in Wall Street are inclined to look for a much better shape. They, however, are not disposed to operate in markets so completely devoid of public, where it is impossible for them to turn around quickly because there is always danger of their being hung up with sizable blocks of stock when demand suddenly dries up.

In connection the Trader points out that it still holds true that business is infinitely better than sentiment. Factory production, too, noted for its honesty and candor of opinion, is optimistic, there are plenty of unsettling factors in the situation. It is extremely difficult to generalize speculative activity, yet it is still to be demonstrated that speculation is so active that the influence of continued prosperity business is to be ignored.

INFORMATION LAID UNDER NEW BY-LAW

The very first information laid by the police under the new one hour parking by-law was heard this morning and the motor car owner will be arraigned in Magistrate's police court. The first summons was issued to a local Front St. merchant for parking his motor car on Front St. yesterday for a much longer period than the allotted one hour limit, police allege.

Major League Situation Given Distinct Metropolitan Air With Yanks, Giants on Top Rung

Lead In Each League And Closest Tied With Cards In National

DETROIT COMING

Jimmy Foxx Fails 13th Homer to Lead In Both Loops

Just to give the whole major league situation a more distinctly metropolitan air, New York baseball fans were splitting a game and a half lead in the standings today as the thirty-third of their "crucial" series with Boston had four hotsted tilts on the program.

The Giants' advantage in first place is, by a 9-4 13-inning victory over the Dodgers yesterday, a result of the shutting of the National League pack; Pittsburgh and Chicago, tied for third and fourth, with 11-3 and 8-3 wins over the Cardinals and Cincinnati Reds, respectively, sending the Cubs back in fifth. The Dodgers sank into the cellar again through the victory of the Giants, and the Phillies climbed to seventh place with a 7-4 conquest of Boston Bees.

In the American League the Yanks outlasted the Sox 8-6 in an 11-inning "do-or-die" affair, which may Manager Joe Cronin return to the Boston Bench for the first time since he broke a finger in the early days of last season. Cleveland and Chicago also changed places again in their battle for the bottom berth in the first division, Cleveland moving up by outslugging the helpless St. Louis Browns, 15-5, and the White Sox were badly blanked by Tommy Bridges and Tommy Bridges, 7-0. The Athletic-Senators game was rained out.

Tuesday now it's best, just one thing after another leading to kick the Giants around, for the Cardinals' Lennie, Mobil of the pitchers have been doing anything but pitching. The catcher, who was officially "benched" Monday, Bill Terry has been able to get into the batting order in person, and even yesterday, the Giants' lead in the National was the direct result of their top slugger, Mel Ott, who was held up with an illness.

Paul, the Giants' first, they keep rolling along.

The Yankees opened the game tough against the Red Sox, Leading 7-1 in the first two innings, they were unable to stave off the determined Red Sox rookies, who pulled up even in the seventh and made it tight all the way to the finish. Bill Zuffe's single drove in the winning run in the 11th. Jimmy Foxx's 13th circuit clout failed to tie the count for Boston.

PRIMO CARNERA FORCED TO QUIT

Leroy Haynes Wins by Technical Knockout in Ninth Round

New York, May 20.—(AP)—Another of the bad breaks which have assailed his ranks fractures put old Primo Carnera, the lumbering Italian heavyweight, in traffic around the record raisers today.

He lost his 10 round return battle with Leroy Haynes, the new Pueblo, Colorado sensation, in the National Sporting Club arena last night when an attack of paralysis in his left leg forced him to leave the ring, 40 seconds after the ninth round.

Haynes was ahead on points at the time and probably would have been returned a winner, anyway, but "Da Preem," by holding the colored boy on even terms through out most of the fight, partly made up for the knockout which Knockout Haynes scored in Philadelphia two months ago.

Disappointed and discouraged, Carnera would not discuss his injury, the handlers worked on his leg in the dressing room after the fight. He is to be given a rest an exhibition tour of Europe, but after that he isn't sure. His friends say he may never return to the United States to fight.

"SHERIFF" BLAKE HELPING ORIOLES

Hurls Nine Complete Games Winning Six of Them

By The Associated Press

On the basis of their showing thus far, Baltimore Orioles aren't likely to cut any important figure in the International League pennant race now or later.

Manager Jack Dunn's team got away to a fine start, but Buffalo—but with plenty of power at the plate they can cause trouble for most any team.

The appearance of "Sheriff" Fred Blake, the veteran second baseman, has bolstered the Oriole infield. Blake has hurled nine consecutive complete games, winning six of them. Baltimore has also recorded fine support.

With Blake pitching expertly and contributing a home run to his own victory, the Orioles trotted over Syracuse, 7-3, to clinch 14-8 last night to strengthen their position at the top of the league standings. Blake drove Ray Starr to cover in three innings and had piled up a total of 11 hits, all but two of them singles. Smoky Joe Martin set the pace with his four-bagger over the fences.

The victory left Baltimore only a half game ahead of Montreal, who piece Montreal Club as the Royals and Buffalo had a day off. The Bisons were idle because of the Sunday blues as Newark hung up a 7-5 decision over Albany and kept the undisputed lead. The only afternoon game on the program saw the fast-hitting Rochester Red Wings thump out a 12-6 triumph over Toronto in a slugfest, which saw the winners put on an early six-run rally and the losers a five-run counter in the ninth.

Roy Blake's home run with two aboard in the ninth was the big factor in Newark's victory, sending Bob Bears ahead after Bob Lucas's circuit swat had given Albany an early lead. Lucas was the "goat" as well as a hero, fanning with the bases filled in the ninth.

Baltimore 7; Syracuse 3.

Crack Irish Golfer Provides Real Upset

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 20.—(AP)—Cecil Ewing, crack Irish golfer, provided the first upset in the fifth round of the British amateur championship today, winning two and one on Roger Wethered, former champion and one of the British Ryder Cup team.

Wethered developed a disastrous hook on the back nine to lose 2 up after playing strongly in the early rounds.

Hector Thomson, a Scottish favorite, boosted his own stock in the round of 32, beating Colin Brown, six and four.

Robert Sweeney, American-born resident of London who gained another Scottish favorite, Jock McLean, yesterday, was matched today with Edward F. Storey, three members of the British Walker cup team.

CURRENT SPORT

In a letter, your President of the O.R.L.A. and also of the O. O. R. L. and a resident of Deseronto, Ernie Hayward, writes to say that he is working out with the Belleville seniors. The lad, Ernie thinks, is not a flashy hockey youth, who has had some interesting experience around third base and should be O. K. If Stewart is of senior quality he will be received with open arms by the club. While at previous times the left-hand side of the local infield made pretty serious work, it is thought the senior team could pick up a couple of good ball players. Should all be pulled at about the 200 mark, well the chances of the Belleville seniors would start to look just about 50 per cent. bright now what the local team would have to do some good apple-knocking, who will not give themselves out very early in the season. Let's hope they are in which to relieve that fatigue for next spring's work. Also the Sunday batting practice and what-have-you, hold some more ball-players.

Sidney Johnson, manager of the Peterboro nothing, says his record corps gossamer, Bill Cassidy, Peterborough, "Why up in Cobourg on Monday they let the Cherries' hair grow when they signed their staff in the country," occasionally talking baseball with Manager Armour, of the Toronto baseball outfit. Well the head team is slated to meet the Peter in the Kiltie's City on the 24th and the fans is to be hoped that Peterboro baseball supporters will be on hand in force to greet the genial director of the Belleville players' hats as well. Peterboro's new park is a dandy and from it means the locals will have a big edge on the visiting nine.

Toronto to Kingston yesterday the Cobourg Chevies stopped in Belleville for their mid-day meal and we renewed old acquaintances with Fay Hurst, Mack Campbell, Doss Ogden, Theo Elliott, Frank McCallum and others. During the conversation Manager Armour and Fay Hurst stepped to the fore. "I've been in the collar this year enough in this league and we're going to show you some baseball this year," they added in unison. "Say what did you think of Jake Biddle and his five-hit against the Peter, eh?" asked Hurst and the arguments commence. Hurst stormed, and also did the rest as he did the night Belleville had Wallby when he was playing ball, when we said we'd take Bud Clancy, of last year's team in preference to Biddle any day in the week. Well, we said something yet this yet Biddle's the boy. Why he's had a bad one that is faster than, oh well, it's a dandy for the batters in this league anyhow. Hurst was right ago over Biddle, who throws a curve between a slow ball and a marble ball, that has plenty of hop, as the Peter and Cobourg batters will say right now. Biddle may be good, but it is to be hoped he'll never turn in another no hit-er in the same way he did to the O. R. L. scribe to be headed to-ward the Queen's hilltop for the suicide communities and is in the social the locals can improve sufficiently to keep in the running at least. With three league eligible for the play-offs, a good scramble will be on for that third berth.

All of those interested in "Old Country Football" are requested to meet at the Recreation's building Tuesday on the Circle Field on Thursday evening. Providing enough players show interest a team will be soon will be organized and entered in the district league.

Over in Picton yesterday the 1936 edition of the Picton Interna-tionals commenced the season's activities in grand style, and if yesterday could be used properly. The Picton nine trimmed the Peter to the tune of 5-4 in the opening game of the Quinte League Lake Shore League game. Picton counted five runs on the Belleville nine in the first two innings, while Peterboro came in the last about 50 per cent. Right now what He took Biddle's measure in the second game, when the Picton aggregation, who will not live themselves out very early in which to relieve that fatigue for next spring's work. UNOFFICIAL SPEED 32 KNOTS AT TIME

Liner "Queen Mary" Is Speeding Forward at Fast Clip

Aboard the R.M.S. Queen Mary (en route to New York), May 26 (CP)—The Queen Mary is maintaining almost perfect British mail liner's new record of over 32 knots an hour in the run to her destination, it was learned today.

Slight vibration, however, noticeable, especially aft, on the Cunard liner's second day of maiden voyage, continued at about 32 knots, 21 miles an hour, through the heavy seas.

There was heavy overhead vibration of the funnels, caused by heat, the Mary's record trip under speed of 32.35 knots, it developed, was not the limit.

The Queen Mary is expected to reach New York Saturday, probably before 10 this afternoon.

May's Record May, by Knight

(An official of the Cunard-White Star line in New York said the ship would try for a record of 4 days and 7 hrs. but that there probably would be no attempt to shorten the time, so as to make a record for one day's lesser.

Cunard-White Star made its preparations for the trip through the Panama canal at the request of the British government.)

A busy day at Cherbourg, as usual, records the Queen's departure, the record day for the record, but there was no official announcement.

One moment given for this delay was that heavy mail shipments had to be placed aboard the liner, that changing trains was the reason the Queen Mary left the port of Cherbourg at 12.58 a.m. (6.58 p.m. Thursday, E.D.T.), instead of at 10.30 p.m. as at first announced, but most official observers discounted this.

One of the liner's special cabins reserved previous to her maiden voyage for society world, is made on this trip available only, but an increasing number of the 776 first class passengers aboard, it was learned, is enjoying the additional comforts.

Calmness and weather prospects for the record trip to New York were good on the basis of present reports.

A more definite announcement as to a speed attempt was expected before the ship disappeared beyond further.

Should only a hope for a record, passengers' interest centered on how the Queen Mary would conduct herself at the speed of about 32 knots.

Lindy, Viscount Pull

On the first leg of the trip, across the English Channel from Southampton to Cherbourg, the liner attained a speed of 26 knots last night, with engines turning 180 revolutions.

As she turned out of Cherbourg early today and steamed west to-ward the Atlantic, the vibration was less noticeable, and the liner had risen somewhat in the opinion of those experienced in matters of a record of 30,773 tons.

Today's speedier demonstration from Southampton on land, sea and air, at the start of the 3,243 (11.34 a.m. B.D.T.) yesterday and saying into the Channel.

The ships, crowded as the start, cleared tube and the occasion to cheer the five aboard, Arriving there at 5.00 p.m. (4.00 p.m. B.D.T.) the Queen Mary added many to the original list of 2,139 passengers.

Leaves Cherbourg

She departed from Cherbourg at 12.35 a.m. (only 17.35 p.m. Wednesday, B.D.T.).

During the night, all public rooms of the liner were crowded, the last named, will be the guests of the Cunard Kingdom.

Every Dominion and Colony will have its convoy present. Every foreign country will be represented.

DOGS AND CHILDREN

Some ladies are always telling everybody about their children and other ladies are always telling everybody about their dogs. The only thing that can stop them being when they meet each other.

Dogs.

There are more different kinds of dogs than what there are children so for this reason parents, expecting to have children have to make up their mind to be mere easily satisfied than people just expecting to buy a dog.

Puppies look cute when they are first born and can run around about a week afterwards, while babies sometimes never look cute to anybody but their mother and if can run around for about a year and not so good even then.

This proves a few extra legs are sometimes more practical than a little extra intelligence.

No matter how smart a dog is it never gets smart enough to be entirely reasonable, probably being the smartest part of it.

When dogs work on their hind legs people think they are wonderful, but when children, work on their hands and knees nobody admires them for it, and if they want to attract a little extra attention they have to go to all the trouble of learning to work on their hands. But dogs working on 4 legs and children working on 2 never even get looked at, proving you never get much credit for just being nature.

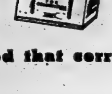
The tables were loaded with various and tempting dishes. Within for miles around gathered here that evening and enjoyed a visit with their old friends after they were able to move about with the kind of goodies they had partaken of a short while before. During the latter part of the evening Mr. Edward Flynn favored the crowd with a few of his merry songs which everyone enjoyed and applauded for. Above all a good time was had by everyone present and everyone bade themselves by bidding farewell to friends saying it was the best supper they had attended in a long while and they hoped that the Masonic ladies would keep up the good work and favor them with another supper such as before long again. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $30.00 which will be used to help redecorate Hall shortly.



Half-alive from One to Five?

It's EASY to see when another man is slipping. But it's harder to face it yourself. So it was with Jim. For months, he vaguely realised something was wrong with him. Tasks that he used to take in his stride had become a grind. He dreaded the afternoon hours most. Minutes dragged. Sometimes he felt too tired to get through the day. And worst of all, it showed in his work.

Sluggish days are often due to common constipation. It has helped to sidetrack many a promising career. It is a great enemy of vigor. Your pace slows down.

Most frequently, common constipation results from meals that lack sufficient "bulk" to exercise the intestines. So many people make the mistake of dosing themselves with pills and drugs that often do more harm than good. The real answer is to get "bulk" back in your diet. Scientific tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies soft "bulk." Also that this "bulk" is often more effective than the "bulk" in fruits and vegetables. This natural laxative food has been used with success by millions of people. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, with milk or cream. Sprinkle over other cereals, soups, or salads. Have your wife cook ALL-BRAN into muffins, breads, waffles, etc. Remember, it furnishes wholesome "bulk." And also vitamin B and iron.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN corrects only common constipation, makes no claim to be a "cure-all." It is much more effective than part-bran products. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

C.N.R. TO EXTEND EAST OF ROUYN, QUE.

Ottawa, May 28.— (CP)— Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Railways, said Wednesday he had advised Premier Taschereau of Quebec, the Canadian National Railways proposed to begin construction this year on a branch line into the New Quebec mining fields east of Rouyn. There was no desire to encroach on the proposed new C.P.R. line, the Minister said. On the other hand the Canadian National felt it should "catch its knitting". The C.N.R. line would extend for about 80 miles from Senneterre into the Rouyn district. It was proposed to obtain authority from the Dominion Parliament to build the line.

On Second Birthday Quints In Better Health Than Ever And Almost Up to Book Babies

Five Sisters To Perform Before Mike And Radio Hook-up

HALF HOUR OF FUN

No Cake or Candy Will be Given Babes on Second Birthday

(By A. N. Feiver)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Callander, Ont., May 26.—(CP)—To Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe laughing and dancing on an international hookup aren't as important as facts and figures, that prove the astonishing good health of the Dionne quintuplets.

So today, while others prayed the famous youngsters would coo and tap at the proper moments during their second birthday celebration this evening, the quint little country doctor took time out to keep the hospital chart straight.

He said his bouncing, sunsuit babies are in better health than ever, that although they haven't quite reached the height and weight figures the child training books set for sturdy-born, two-year-olds they are near enough—only a quibble would rise about the difference.

The quints are within 2.3 pounds of the weight the books say a single-born child who weighs 31½ pounds at birth should scale at two years. And these infants were not as everyone knows sturdy-born, and arrived two months before they should have.

Nearly to Normal

In other words, the litty, rat-like infants, who were given no chance to live more than a few hours after their birth on May 28, 1934, have almost caught up to the book babies, the sort that have every physical advantage from birth.

Today the Dionne youngsters averaged 21.8 pounds in weight compared to the 26 pounds the normal baby weighs at two years. Their average height is only an inch less than the normal height of 32.3.

They have gained only eight ounces in the past month but Dr. Dafoe thinks that is enough. He is keeping them on a diet, that is planned to build their bodies rather than put fat on them.

His ruling satisfied about their physical condition, there will be nothing to prevent Dr. Dafoe from assisting Yvonne, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Marie from singing and dancing according to schedule from 4.30 to 7 p.m. tonight over a Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission network.

Only those, who don't know the cleverly-artistic are counting on the youngsters to perform as the celebration program directors have planned. Those who have seen them toss toys around their nursery and break over five minutes during a movie scene without any prompting know anything may happen.

Nurse Jacqueline Noel, who has had more than a little success in teaching them a form of dancing and a humming, that some call singing, has promised to play the piano in the nursery and lead them in it, step or two and a holiday.

Before that Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare, Judge J. A. Valin of North Bay, (who gave them the playpen), and Dr. Dafoe (the guardians) will give little speeches and several spectators picked at random from the visitors will be asked to say what they think of the quints.

Half-Hour Celebration

The half-hour celebration is all that is planned to mark the quints' second birthday. The rest of the day will be spent as usual around the Dafoe Hospital and there won't be any candy or cake for the quints, who won't miss them because they have never had either.

It seemed very doubtful today the parents of the youngsters, Oliva and Elzire Dionne would attend the celebration. They failed to attend last year, when they were invited and it was reported here the searching had not extended them an invitation for today's celebration.

Quints' weights in pounds and ounces today with changes from April 28 follow:

	lb.	oz.	ch.
Yvonne	20	4	1 oz.
Annette	25	10	10 gain
Cecile	24	2	unch.
Emilie	24	6	4 gain
Marie	21	1	unch.
Total	119

CHARGE HOODED TERRORISTS ORGANIZED ON NAZI TROOPER BASIS IN U. S.

The Black Legion, a weird, hooded, black-robed cult of terrorists (UPPER RIGHT) who had delegated to themselves the power of life and death over wrongdoers, was brought to light in asserted "ritual slaying" of Charles A. Poole (LOWER LEFT), WPA worker, in Detroit. Sixteen reputed members of the legion are being held by the police in the slaying; and police reports state one of them has confessed firing the ball of fatal bullet into Poole's body, while six others were on the scene. Poole was stuffed out by the cuff the police say, because of reports that he had beaten his wife, an expectant mother. A baby son was born to Mrs. Poole the day after Poole's body, riddled with bullets, was found in a gulley in Dearborn township (UPPER LEFT). A state-wide investigation has been ordered on finding of documentary evidence that the movement was national and organized on lines similar to Nazi storm troopers in Germany.

FISH STORY WITH PHOTOGRAPHIC PROOF

Some anglers spend a great deal of time and money to get their hands on a husky little trout like this one, but Mr. J. S. Thomson, well-known Vancouver business man has one all his own. The trout, now more than fourteen inches long, was caught on a bent hook by Mr. Thomson's son several years ago, and has been in the Thomson garden pool ever since. He is very aggressive and takes food away from the other fish. On one occasion he killed an unwary goldfish which had stolen a juicy worm. He rises to Mr. Thomson's whistle, however, and will come right out of the water for a titbit as this photo shows.

The Missing Man

Mary R.P. Hatch

But providing he had done so, what was his object, and why did he neglect to go to his own home only a few rods distant? Some people in Grovedale discredited Osborn's statement, while others averred that he must have been mistaken, though, without doubt, they said, he thought he was correct in making it. On the other hand many believed that harm had come to the cashier after he left the building, while the bank officials thought the matter quite serious enough to call a meeting of the directors, the books, deposits and collaterals of the bank. People who had money in the savings institution got wind of the matter, and the pass-books began to come in so rapidly the directors pointed out somewhat that all should be attended to in due season, but that no irregularities had thus far been discovered, nor did they expect to find any, Mr. Hamilton was expected in three days now, when, no doubt, matters would settle in their old place. The bank examiner, meanwhile, would in any case scout the theory. For the rest, Mr. Hamilton's bookkeeper, Carter, Henderson and Deane, were responsible men.

And thus the matter rested, it it could be said to rest when half a dozen bank officials, aided by young Osborn, were industriously turning over all the bank books, looking up collaterals and deposits, which at one point or another, ran into several thousand dollars. But there were one or two evasive items to balance these books, hard to understand, and yet which might be made to come right in the hands of the bank examiner. It was too soon to say there was anything wrong. Besides, Mr. Hamilton was possessed of ample means, and would, no doubt, place matters on a sure footing when he returned. The pass-book which had been examined had been found absolutely correct, still, as I have said, the officials, with anxious faces and closed doors, pored over the ledger and cash-books from day to day, nightfall.

Constance knew nothing of all this and for there was no one to tell her. Mrs. Fry was very indignant at what she deemed the unworthy course of public feeling, and walked the whole length of Main street with a twenty-dollar bill in her hand, to be entered at the savings bank as a mark of her faith in the institution, past and present.

"If he came at all, it was to set some matters right at the bank that's my idea, and I don't care who knows it. And it harm come to him afterwards they'd better look out for the river or settin' folks to a-hunting of 'm up. I say," said she.

No word came to the letter Mrs. Hamilton had written, and the air by Tuesday night, which was just two weeks from the time Mr. Hamilton left Grovedale, was rife with a hundred rumors. At the station when the train whistled in, the platform was crowded with expectant people, but Mrs. Hamilton with her children and Mr. Carter were all there, waiting, and trying to look placid, and cheerful, but to little purpose. About twenty people alighted, but Vane was not among them.

"He will come tomorrow, sure," said Mr. Carter, cheerfully. "Come, Constance. She where you are stopping, Clare, For Heaven's sake, look cheerful, Constance" (in an undertone this was said).

"How can I look cheerful?" asked Constance, bursting down her veil.

"Will he come tomorrow, Uncle Carter?" asked Farley.

"I think so."

"Then what did the man at the station mean by saying he had gone off with the green-headed woman?"

"Green-headed woman? What do you mean, Farley?"

"I don't know. That's what he said; I heard him. Do people ever have green hair?"

"I never heard of such a thing. The man was talking so to plague you."

"No, he was talking to another man and I overheard him."

"You must have understood with your ears shown. Have some money, Ran into Smith's and get some candy for yourself and Clare. Cher up, Constance. Vane will be here tomorrow; if not, the day after, surely," he said kindly, for he noticed that she was deadly pale "But what could he mean by the green-haired woman?"

"Doubtless it is known that a woman with curiously tinted hair spoke to Vane as he left the street the morning he went away. She was a stranger and travelling north, but they let town about the same time."

"Oh, yes, that explains it. The man was joking, I thought so."

But Mr. Hamilton did not return the next day nor the second, and by this time his wife was thoroughly disturbed, as he had never before overstayed his two weeks' absence by so long a time. Besides, young Osborn's declaration that he had returned to the bank in the interval made the matter assume a very mysterious character.

The bank examiner was sent for, and a detective engaged to look after the missing man. It must not be understood that he was regarded in the light of an absconding cashier, for nothing yet had seemed to point seriously to this view of the matter. It was Mrs. Hamilton who employed the detective and it was to her he came for orders and to hear her her version of the matter, although he promised himself a talk with the bank officials and still partners later.

Mrs. Hamilton was very much unnerved when Mr. Bruce was shown into the sitting-room, and seeing this he did not immediately enter the business of his call, but chatted pleasantly with Clare, who was just beginning to take music-lessons, and was struggling with her "scales."

"Like music?" asked the detective amiably.

"No; I hate it—the scales, anyway."

"And just think, all the beautiful music in the world is hidden in the scales."

The little girl looked interested. "Can you play?" she asked.

"A little," he said, and sitting down at the piano he flooded the room with melody, for in truth he was a fine musician.

"Oh, you can," she said, but he did not answer, for he was studying the child's face, features, and head with great interest. Then he turned to Farley, who stood by, and perused him in the same manner.

"The children," he said, "favor their father more than their mother. Little girl takes after her father, the boy after you, I see."

"Yes, you are right. Do you believe in phrenology or physiognomy?" she asked, for she had observed his scrutiny.

"Not as a general thing, at least, in the very young. A person gets let us say, a stub nose from one ancestor, large eyes from another, a sweet smile from a third. Then how does this index character?

Time is eminently more successful. After a sufficient number of years have passed, the traits and peculiarities wear seams in the face just as a flood seams the earth. You know rocks are heaped in strange places then; there are deposits that grow wild, down where we looked for weeds, and vice-versa. But excuse me, I like to study children's faces to learn what they have inherited from their parents. Children's faces under the parents' characters much better than their own."

"They are good children, and their father is a good man," she said, proudly.

"I do not doubt it; and now, if you please, we will go over this matter as carefully and calmly as possible."

"Very well, Clare, you may take your brother into the garden."

As soon as the children went out, Mrs. Hamilton turned an expectant face toward the detective.

"Now, madam, have you any idea where your husband has gone?"

"None whatever."

"I am told that every year since your marriage he has been away in the month of May and stayed two weeks."

"Once he stayed but ten days; at another time he was gone fifteen!"

"Have you any knowledge of his life previous to his marriage?"

"I know his birthplace. It was Elmira, N.Y. I knew his mother. He was an only child. His father died when he was five years of age. The family was once exceedingly wealthy, I have heard, but Vane, when I married him, was only moderately well-to-do, as we say out here."

"No children but your husband?"

"No; but two died in infancy. Vane told me so."

"How does your husband appear when he goes away?"

"Sometimes he seems troubled, at other times quite cheerful. But this time he appeared more worried than usual. He seemed very much absorbed, and he talked by his sleep a good deal the night before he went away."

"Ah!" Mr. Bruce appeared interested. "What did he talk about?"

"Of carrying heavy loads, and he complained that nobody would help him. I can't stand it. It is too much, too hard," he said over and over again. I thought he referred to his business, which is very difficult to manage, for my uncle and Mr. Henderson are both disposed to leave all the details to Vane."

"Probably you are right. What else did he say?"

Mrs. Hamilton blushed and hesitated, and looked at his note-book. Mr. Bruce promptly closed it and put it in his pocket.

"You were saying, I think," he said, suggestively; but still she hesitated.

"After all, dreams amount to nothing—stray scraps of fancies, conversations and a confused jumbling up of what it would be too much to call ideas."

"I understand you," she said heavily. "You think what he said may be of consequence. I think so, too; but please recollect that when my husband spoke a woman's name in his sleep I did not mistrust his honor, nor do I now."

"Perhaps you will tell me what he said," looking her squarely in the face, for he perceived he had a woman of nerve and common sense to deal with.

"I will. He said, 'Lenora—a pretty name!'"

"Do you know any one named Lenora?"

"No, I do not, and I have never heard my husband speak of any one by that name."

Still you think you can explain it. I can see that," he said.

"Perhaps that would be too much to say" Mrs. Hamilton arose, went to the bookcase, and took therefrom a volume of Poe's poems.

"He liked them very much, and I found a book-mark at 'Lenore'."

TARIFF CHANGES IN BUDGET APPROVED

Another Milestone in Lengthy Session is Passed

Ottawa, May 28 (CP)—Another milestone of the parliamentary session was passed yesterday when the last of the tariff changes in the budget were approved by Minister of Finance, and Trade and Commerce Dunning. Minister of Mines, and Mr. Rodd, of Skeena. The latter, with unusually little debate, piloted through the final tariff debate was short and discussion of the tariff changes was limited.

A final protest against the reduction in farm implement duties without adequate investigation was registered by Mr. Gardiner, Macdonald, Liberal member for Brantford. He said it was the wrong way to make tariff changes as there was no telling when the effects might be on employment in implement factories.

At the same time Mr. Macdonald expressed the hope a tariff board investigation would yet be held. He expressed confidence the government would consider the matter done if an investigation showed there was a wrong.

Conglomerate Dewdney

Complications developed over the clause providing for free entry of tourists' purchases up to $100 in value. The clause was put in the exemption on liquor to a quart and opposition members insisted that under other laws it was illegal to bring any liquor into Canada. They said the clause would be misleading to a layman and suggested it should contain a clear explanation and prohibit the entry of any liquor.

Mr. Dunning and Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of National Revenue, were unwilling to make a change although they admitted they point had created a great deal of trouble. They promised to consult the law officers of the crown and announced that customs officers in any case would take steps to warn tourists against bringing liquor back from their trips abroad.

Today the House considers changes in the income tax law and the budget.

S. A. Chaplain Finds New Lingo

New York, May 26.—(AP)—A Salvation Army Chaplain with a daily re-mission symphony discovered Wednesday a list of words current in the lingo of those scoundrels who make crooks stiffs and others with empty pokes whose self-confidence ranges from a fiddle and fife to a smack or a lily-white.

Chaplain Thomas Stanyon, gave this glossary:

(It may be used to translate the final paragraph.)

Cosned-up—Drunk on cheap alcohol.

Mission Stiff — Hypocrite posing as sincere who attaches himself to any religious organization for material aid.

Fiddle and Fife—A suit of clothes.

Lily White— Liverwurst sandwich.

Lump—A package of food gotten by begging.

Headache stick—A policeman's club.

Pokey—The poorhouse.

Dumper—A cash register.

To get De Gat Heave Ho—To be thrown out of a place.

To scuff—To eat.

Pension Suggested For Widow, Family

Ottawa, May 26.— (CP)—The Government is being asked by Senator A. C. Hardy (Lib., Brockville) if it will consider granting a pension, gratuity or other assistance to the widow of Constable Alvin E. Samis, who was killed on Saturday in the liquor store hold-up by "Red" Ryan, a dangerous convict and criminal who was released from prison by the Province's authorities."

Hon. Raoul Dandurand, Liberal leader in the Upper House, is framing the question before his colleagues in the Cabinet.

'Red's' Lonely Burial in Ground Unblessed

Toronto, May 26—With only his two brothers and his sister-in-law as mourners, Norman Ryan, the unrepentant bandit and ex-convict, was buried in unconsecrated ground in Mount Hope Cemetery yesterday afternoon.

Six wreaths, sent by members of his family, stood at the head of the open grave, as the plain casket which contained Ryan's bullet-torn body was lowered.

By order of Archbishop James J. McGuigan, Ryan was denied the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church on the grounds that he was an "unconfessed" murderer. No priest was present, there was no Mass said, and there was no committal service.

Professional Diver To Leap from 160 Ft. Bridge at Windsor

Windsor, Ont., May 26.—(CP)—An international leap will be made from the Ambassador Bridge, linking into the Detroit River 160 feet below by Ray Woods, who says he is the only professional bridge-jumper existant. Woods will make the jump on June 5th, weather and conditions permitting.

A 160-foot jump is all in the day's work for Woods, who claims to be unlike the majority of persons who fall off bridges by accident, or jump from them because of a dare; he does it to give everybody up. He does it because he likes hurtling through the air with a complete lack of effort.

Up to date Woods has jumped from 183 bridges on this continent, five in Canada, two in Mexico, and the rest in the United States. This takes in some pretty famous bridges, like the Peace Bridge at Buffalo, the George Washington Memorial at Seattle and the Superior Bridge at Cleveland.

If he succeeds in jumping from the Ambassador Bridge, that will be his fourth international jump.

Major Bowes appears with his prize-winning members on the Rolls across today and Friday, with Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy in "Petticoat Fever."

Many Common Drugs Cause Of a Variety of Diseases

Manifest Themselves by Eruption on The Skin or Internal Organs

WARN PUBLIC

Medical Association Condemns Sale of Potentially Harmful Drugs

LONDON, Ont., May 26.—(CP) Many common drugs, formerly considered harmless, are now known to be the agents that cause a variety of disease states, Dr. George S. Williamson of Ottawa, told the 68th annual meeting of the Ontario Medical Association, here Wednesday.

These drugs, he said, manifest themselves on the skin in forms known of "drug eruptions", or by abnormal reactions of the internal organs.

Abnormal reactions will appear with the use of a small dose after the drug has been omitted for long periods, even years. This suggests that "some mechanism other than toxicity, cumulation or poisonous effects must be responsible," he said.

Reactions referred to he said, are those that follow administration of preparations ordinarily considered harmless and given in usual non-poisonous doses.

Many Serious Results

"Drugs in addition to their toxic action also possess sensitizing properties of varying degrees. Drugs of comparatively recent introduction have been responsible for many serious results of this nature," he said.

"Our offices are flooded with assurances of the efficacy of a multitude of untried and little-known preparations. In this connection Sir William Wilcox has warned that a 'glowing advertisement does not relieve one of the responsibility for the possible dangerous effects following administration'.

"The Council on Pharmacy and Chemistry of the American Medical Association condemns the situation whereby a potentially harmful drug is exploited to the public under a hundred different unintformative trade names.

"The question arises as to what should be the attitude of the physician with respect to these drugs. It seems desirable that they should be dispensed only by physicians in non-refillable prescriptions."

BELIEVE BOYS PUT OBSTACLES ON TRACK

Cobourg, May 26.—Investigation into what was believed to be an attempt to wreck a westbound train Monday night revealed it to be the work of three boys, aged 8, 7 and 5 years.

The boys it is thought, placed stones and spikes on the tracks, but these were noticed by the engineer on an eastbound train on the parallel track. The approaching train was flagged to a stop.

The boys had told their parents what they had done, and were made to remove the obstacles they had placed on the track.

ROWE IS ONTARIO CONSERVATIVE LEADER

Ready for an Election Banqueters are Told by New Conservative Leader

Hon. Earl Rowe Elected on Second Ballot Over Col. Drew

WILL WEIGH MATTERS

Tolerant Will of Majority Must Be Received Says Speaker

(By Harold J. Fair, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, May 29 (CP)—Conservatism's effort to regain power in Ontario is universal and delegates to the assembly convention are off to home constituencies after electing Hon. W. Earl Rowe as their leader.

The 63-year-old member of the House of Commons for Dufferin-Simcoe received the announcement of seeking a Conservative victory in the next election by defeating Col. Robert J. Manion, M.P. for Fort William, on the second ballot, 1,006 to 464.

That election, he told a banquet tendered him later, would come anytime Premier Hepburn chose because the party today is united and organized. He left him that we need to wait for organization, time we are organized and ready," he said.

Seven aspirants for the leadership, vacated Wednesday by George S. Henry, premier 1930-34, withdrew after the first ballot.

Former Mayor R. J. Stewart of Toronto; Arthur Mills, M.L.A., Oshawa; Harold E. Kidd, Toronto; Carleton; Leopold Massicotte, York South; Winfield Hodgkinson, Toronto to St. David.

Acclamation Seen

On that ballot Mr. Rowe obtained 762 votes and Col. Drew 430. Mr. Stewart, with 274, Mr. Kidd 204, and Mr. Hodgkinson 202. Mr. Massicotte received his withdrawal and Mr. Hodgkinson 202. Mr. Massicotte received his withdrawal and the announcement brought a chorus of hope and confidence that acclamation for a few moments.

Later, the leadership second ballots dropped out and Col. Drew was the first to congratulate the winner and moved the vote be made unanimous.

Prior to the voting the party committee dealt to repeal of legislation giving the Province the lion's share of corporation taxes. Mr. Rowe promised a square deal for public utilities in the banquet address.

"And whether repeal sounds good or not there is going to be repeal as sure as you are sitting there," he declared.

Rights of the majority would be restored when the Conservatives regained power. "We want the minorities to feel that they have their full support," he said, "and we will let them that for the next five years we are going to win."

Leader Important

"I realize the importance of the position you have conferred upon me," Mr. Rowe said, as he arrived at the banquet. "I realize its responsibility. I realize that I am going to weigh matters very carefully before I take a definite stand one way or the other on the province. For I am not going to be as reckless" as the present Premier had been.

"We must re-establish honesty in administration and we must have effective policies, not for the political expediency of a few but for the best interests of a people.

"And in doing so more has been made to improve conditions or methods in elementary, secondary and university systems. A committee appointed a year ago to investigate our whole educational system has not been asked for a report.

"The basic principle of option or choice as a privilege in separate school matters to direct certain taxes has been replaced by one of compulsion. I propose to be changing the very spirit of the settlement of 1863, when Governor Simcoe's system of Public School supporters' taxes toward the support of Separate Schools is contrary to constitutional rights long since accepted as a finality.

Municipalities Charged

"The liberalism left at the majority must be restored by special right for one religious minority are to be respected. I am convinced, that the present control by Ontario can guarantee fair play to minorities until a square deal is restored in Ottawa.

"The further evidence of reckless Liberal expenditure there is seen the vicious political manipulation of the Hydro system of this province.

"The Premier now kicks this $400,000,000 enterprise of public ownership around the province as a political football. He blames lower Hydro rates for political support, while forgetting to establish a Contingent for future security of power requirements.

"The present government was pledged to reduce our debt, and they have increased it almost $400,000 a day, or more rapidly than any government since Confederation.

"Politics not relief, is the game of tricks. The administration of a government should not be a vaudeville of political manipulation. We must lay broad and progressive plans for development of new enterprises and broaden the basis of taxation rather than new taxes."

Story of Gold Hidden in Tree 'Just Joke', Says P.E. Farmer

'Did Not Even Cut Down an Apple Tree', He Tells Ontario Intelligencer

$30,000 'NAMED'

Speculative rumors that a literal pot of gold had been found in the decayed trunk of an old apple tree said to have been cut down by Mr. Ray Roblin, Fort Milford, Prince Edward County, vanished into thin air today following personal contact with Mr. Roblin at his home by a representative of The Daily Ontario Intelligencer.

The sum, said to have been found, was variously estimated at from $50,000 to $80,000 and was reported to have been in the form of old coins.

"Good joke," chuckled Mr. Roblin, when the story was repeated to him today. "But that's just what it was, a joke evidently started by some one last in fun.

"I didn't even cut down an apple tree, haven't had anything any trees of any sort. Whoever started that rumor didn't have much to work on."

Then, there wasn't any pot of gold? "No man that ever saw apple trees and inspectors from the Dominion Department of Agriculture have put up to see if you really found something?" pressed the reporter.

"Absolutely nothing of the sort. The joke would even be funnier if there was anything to it. But as it is, it's just one of those stories."

Belleville residents who had heard the story were inclined to be linked with the rumor although earlier reports supported the ideal tale of a hidden pot of gold.

GIVE ACCLAMATION TO HON. E. ROWE IF SEAT OPENED

Liberals, Says Hepburn, Will Not Oppose His Election

PLACE IN LEGISLATURE

'I Ask Him Not to Be Impatient', Says Premier as to Election

Toronto, May 29 (CP)—If any Conservative member of the Ontario legislature resigns to open a seat for Hon. W. Earl Rowe, the new Conservative leader will not be opposed by a Liberal, Premier Mitchell Hepburn said today.

Admitting he made a mistake by not leading the Liberals in opposition from a legislative seat after his term-expired, Mr. Hepburn said with "Mr. Rowe's place is in the legislature.

"If any Conservative resigns to open a seat for Mr. Rowe he will get an acclamation as far as the Liberal party concerned," the premier said. "I don't want him to suffer for it did. I realize that even if he doesn't take a seat he will not be ridiculed as leader and he will take his place in the legislature and I realize now that I should have taken a seat in the house early after I became leader. I would have profited by that experience.

'I Will Take No Advantage.'

"But whatever Mr. Rowe does, he can be sure that, having myself gone through the experience of being defeated in Toronto, I shall not take advantage of him."

With regard to Mr. Rowe's challenge to Premier to call an election today Hon. Mr. Hepburn said: "Mr. Rowe was a member of a government that vacated the seats and was defeated would allow it. I assure him we don't try to emulate that example. I am not going to be impatient. When the right time comes there will be an election."

"Speaking as an older man," the Premier said with a smile, "I can-not help but be amused at the impudence of youth.

"Parliament will not be 40 until Aug. 12. Mr. Rowe is 43.)

"I think some serious again, the Premier went on:

"I have great personal regard for Mr. Rowe. I was a fellow student in Ottawa and lived him. It is unfortunate that he should be in opposite corners of the political ring.

"If it's just a question of office, and resigning a seat, I will, but if it's a question of expense, we are broke," Alderman T. H. Kirk said.

SERVICE STATION ROBBED OF $17

Police Believe Robbery is Work of a Transient

Believed to be the work of a transient who was seen loitering around the premises, a quantity of change, containing $17.00 was stolen from the open safe of Bridge Service Station, Bridge Street, sometime Thursday afternoon.

Mr. John Lloyd, proprietor of the service station, informed Plainclothes Detective Hart, who investigated, that a transient, a young man about 20 years of age, had stepped into the service station to wash up yesterday afternoon. Previous to this Mr. Lloyd had prepared the day's deposit for the bank and placed it, in a cash bag in the company safe.

After the transient applied at a nearby house for a night's lodging, later returning to the service station allegedly to procure change for a two dollar bill. It is believed the transient went into the safe and took the cash bag on a rear door, while Mr. Lloyd was serving a customer. Mr. Lloyd was unaware of the theft with the cash bag, the man is believed to have gone down the road and removed the cash bag containing $17.00.

The man later returned to the boarding house nearby and stated he had changed his mind and was going to Cobourg. Constable Isard and Mr. John Lloyd patrolled the highway as far as Trenton, but found no trace of the missing transient. The man was described as being between 26 and 30 years of age, about 5 feet 7 or 8 inches tall, fair complexion and carried a khaki bag. Surrounding police were notified to be on the lookout for a man answering this description.

ANNE HARDING VISITS MONTREAL

Accompanied by Her Daughter Plans to Sail For England

Montreal, May 29 (CP) — Ann Harding, recurring to movie stars' customary disguise—smoked glasses —strolled down the station platform between trains today and said that she was bound for England and why she would sail from Quebec:

"Canada in the spring, is too, too divine."

That's why she didn't sail from New York. She had not come to Canada to avoid any fuss. Reporters' accounts that might arise from the death of her former husband, the late Harry Bestry, seeking to force cancellation of an English moving picture contract.

"I'm not afraid of Harry Bannister's ghost, though he can be," said the blond star. "That's all I have to say except that I like the scenery here."

She didn't say why a lawyer accompanied her and a daughter, Peggy Bestry.

The trip to England, said Miss Harding, who will sail from Quebec June 3, was for the Empress of Australia, was being made only to fill a moving picture contract.

CRIME ASSOCIATE OF RYAN DYING AFTER GUN FIGHT

Edward McMullen, Wanted For Murder, Shoots Officer, Then Himself

TRIES TO ENTER U.S.

Positive Identification Made by Fingerprints And Tattoo Marks

Bellingham, Wash., May 29 (CP) —Death—last escape from the authorities that held him as a murderer —ended Edward McMullen today.

His bullet torn by a self-inflicted bullet, McMullen lay in hospital here, breathing his life ebbed slowly, almost imperceptibly from the wound in his skull. His pulse beat fairly strongly in the hand that clutched a death-dealing bullet into the heart of Immigration Inspector Charles M. Fiacha yesterday.

Attaches at the hospital here said the lieutenant-prisoner of Norman "Red" Ryan, slain leader in an Ontario bank-looting gang, would probably live long enough to die.

Federal authorities last night charged McMullen with murder, charged with murdering Fiacha in his abortive attempt to defect his way across the international border and escape Canadian police.

Officials here also offer sympathy to the dying McMullen here. A deputy sheriff stood guard outside the small, white corner room where he lay, and a nurse was standing by the side of the slayer. Dr. M. A. Sunderland felt there was nothing much he could do.

(Since the Queen Mary is traveling eastward, its hands and clocks were set back one hour during the long-day, thereby making 25 hours in the day.)

The Queen Mary's average speed during the period up to noon was 29.76 knots.

The ship is following "B" track which is a route of approximately 3,156 miles from Cherbourg to Ambrose Light.

The Normandie's best day's run in the west was 1,744 nautical miles.

Farther away on the Mall, contented Londoners, in the palace, stood members of the king's personal household.

Sir Gerald read the proclamation, declaring His Majesty's pleasure touching his royal coronation, and the solemnity thereof." The reading finished, the trumpets sounded with a reference to "the favor and blessing of Almighty God," and spoke of "our princely care for the preservation of the laws, rights and inheritances of our loving subjects."

CORONATION DATE IS PROCLAIMED WITH PAGEANTRY

DUKE OFFICIATES

Heralds And Pursuivants in Ancient Apparel Take Part

London, May 29 (CP) — With fanfare and ceremonies inherited from the immemorial past, the date of the coronation of King Edward VIII was duly proclaimed today. But modern science and usage intruded even into the medieval pageantry.

When the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, and his attendants proped out upon the hoary walls of St. James's Palace, there was immediately in front of them a radio telephone to carry to the ears of the listening millions all that was said in the king's name.

The proclamation set the date of the coronation as May 12, 1937. The date was announced officially in a special issue of the London Gazette.

Duke of Norfolk Attended.

The 37-year-old Duke of Norfolk was attended by heralds and pursuivants, trumpeters in tabards and other apparel concerning the origin of which even the college of heralds is not certain. The palace heralds were covered for the time being with crimson damask.

Not only the proclamation itself but also the music of the band of the horse guards, the subdued rustles amongst the beholders and even the audible clicking of cameras carried through the microphones to the far corners of the United Kingdom.

The royal standard flew over St. James's Palace, for the king still resides at York House.

Meanwhile, a fanfare blared from the silver trumpets of the horse guards in the garden of Buckingham Palace, with white-gloved hands, unrolled a long scroll nearly a yard wide, the sonorous tone he began his reading.

Eternal Light of Faith Burns In Liner Speeding Westward

Hurrying Present is Forgotten in Synagogue on 'Queen Mary'

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aboard the R.M.S. Queen Mary en route to New York, May 29 (CP) — In the little synagogue aboard the Queen Mary a light burns without ceasing. It symbolizes the eternity of the Jewish faith through centuries of persecution.

Today, as the great ship speeded westward on her maiden crossing of the Atlantic Ocean, Jewish passengers of all classes crowded the synagogue in common worship.

The Torah, the Jewish Bible, was the hurrying present by the everlasting past, was one of the smugness appeal. The Torah, the symbol of the speed of the liner—so early debated on docking regulations as D. Jacobinowsky, the Jewish chaplain, explained in Hebrew from the scrolls of the Five Books of Moses.

As one wandered about the ship, one thought not of Atlantic speed records but of those anglicized tribes of Israel whose names are inscribed on the panelling of the synagogue in Hebrew letters of gold. So one thought, as the great sea liner sped race gave the lesson.

The Queen Mary is the first British ship with a permanent synagogue.

M.P. and COUNSEL COME TO BLOWS AFTER HEARING

Fight in Quebec Legislature Corridors is Short One

'INSULT' TO PARTY

Hails Fill as Order is Sent For Provincial Police

Quebec, May 29 (CP)—Dr. Philippe Hamel, Liberal member for Montcalm and Fernand Choquette, K.C., counsel for the Quebec Liquor Commission, came to blows today as they emerged from a meeting of the Legislature's Private Bills Committee where Choquette had appeared as witness.

The fight in the crowded corridor didn't last long. Friends and supporters separated the opponents before any damage was done.

It started, witnesses said, when the Liquor Commission counsel expressed what Dr. Hamel considered an insult to his political party. There was a brief struggle, a few blows. Then friends crowded in.

The hall became more crowded, a call for police went out. The situation took on tense for a minute before Provincial Police officers arrived on.

Down the stairs came members who had gone to lunch at the cafe, Liberals from the Chateau Frontenac where Choquette and Dr. Hamel were lunching, and Conservatives by a double row of onlookers and friends.

Only another five minutes may be left for different destinations.

Waterfront Survey Started After Open Forum Discussion

Immediate Work Suggested as Part of General Plan

PLAN IS PROPOSED

Investigation with report to the city council of the immediate needs of waterfront development from the docks to the eastern limits of the city, together with a report of the question of a beach near Foster Avenue which it is said can be provided at a small annual amount of money was the task laid on a committee of Mayor Hill, Alderman Cushing, R. Moncrieff, G. R. Thompson and M. Callaghan, named at the Open Forum meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last evening at the Rotary Hotel.

The consensus of the meeting was that some step should be taken not only for immediate benefit but as part of a complete development of the waterfront, the plan which may extend over a number of years.

Plan is Close West Dump

Alderman Cushing promised that the West Side dumping ground at the bay head would approach would be closed and that all refuse thereafter would be dumped in one place where it could be made of use in extending the park area and making the beginnings of a waterfront.

It was to be regretted that untold pressure should be brought upon the railways to have the bay front brought up from a point five or six miles west to one the present dumping ground, to eliminate level crossings and to offer a new route for heavy truck use through traffic. He advocated having the trains of the C. P. when their home was destroyed by fire caused when an oil stove exploded.

Not To Spend Money

"All every meeting some one gets up and says 'We haven't any money to spend,'" declared R. O. Meighen, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, opening the supper meeting, "but that is not the object of meetings. We don't want to spend money or to put the city in debt. What we want is to get down to business and get our work and for the years which have passed. Plans may be twenty years ahead, but something must be done."

City Engineer Mott brought up the whole question of the beach and front on the East side from the harbor and docks to the far eastern limits of the city, suggesting a continuous shoreline, across the gap at the mouth of George Street thence easterly along the shore and in front of the great marsh or swamp to the far end. He said possibly a beach could be made at Zwick's Island. There is the suggestion of swinging the highway from the pumphouse to the island and thence to the new bridge road. There is also the question of cutting on the west side dumps. If all the dumping could be done along the waterfront we should soon have something to jump to West Belleville is detrimental and a great nuisance with smoke, it is burning all the time."

East Front Altering

The engineer turned to the possibilities of the east front development. He considered this one of the real possibilities which lay before the city.

A fill or revetment wall would be necessary. A sandsucker would not do the work as there is no sand. The bed is very coarse gravel and would require a dredge.

Mr. Mott stated that the beach near the dumping was rock from Foster Avenue down.

"Your idea, is first a revetment wall?" asked ex-Mayor Harry W. Ackerman.

"Yes."

Mackenzie Robertson interrogated—"what kind of foundation would there be for a wall?"

"Flat rock."

Mr. E. V. Illsey suggested that a beach far east was not near the centre of population.

Arthur Sills thought that Zwick's Island could be made a part of the waterfront system with a camp and the outlook over the bay.

Gravel For Wall

"Would the coarse gravel be fit for concrete for the wall?" asked O. R. Thompson, to which Mr. Mott replied in the affirmative. To another query Mr. Mott stated that he had not estimates of the cost of the wall. The measurement from the dock to Foster Avenue shows a distance of 1,600 feet.

R. Moncrieff wanted to know if it were practicable to clear up the shore line and leave the front as it is—that is, not to transform the front. Mr. Mott said that there were brush and trees. The brush could be cleared up.

The dumping grounds played no small part in the discussion as to the dump east of the George Street fill, the engineer remarked that there is supervision from eight a.m. to five p.m., but that after these hours people come to the dump and dump old cars, boats and other waste material so that there is a very high in one place. Signs if put up would be torn down, he said. He advised the closing of the west side dump as serving little purpose for the present time.

Mr. Illsey was informed by Mr. Mott that the dumping could go forward without the building of a wall.

Ross Neal referred to the condition of water in the bay.

Manzies Callaghan Gives History

Twelve years Maurice Callaghan has been working to get the fill started. Already between Bridge and Steele John Meyers, the fill has been carried on. The filling has proceeded slowly in the past two years.

Mr. Callaghan gave his experience last evening as he came as a boy to open forum. He told of the canal in the creek at the foot of South George Street. It paid a toll. He referred to a steamer ten or twelve feet deep off the foot of George Street upon which a dredge could enter. Water he said is shallow east of the dock. A temporary beach could be made here. This could be made part of the general plan.

No obstacle is to be found in the question of sewage, Mr. Callaghan

A.M Park Space

Approval of a plan of a wall from Front Street to George as Mr. Callaghan suggested was given by Alderman Thos. Cushing. He claimed that this would add possibly ten acres of park land to the city.

"I am going to cut out that dump on the west side", he stated. "We are going to starve out the rats. The city has appointed me a one-man committee on the question of that west side dumping ground.

He suggested that from the dock to George Street which would cost little.

Reginald Moncrieff would not allow the question of Foster Avenue beach to be forgotten. "Every day the weeds, get two or three cartloads of sand and there would be a beach. I do not believe in the principle of the construction of artificial beaches. I think that $20 spent here would do the work and it would take only two or three weeks to carry out.

Mackenzie Robertson declared beaches invaluable to any town. Holiday people", he remarked "want to be near the water. We should try and lay a plan of gradual improvement, and not spend too much in one year."

Driveway Planned

Arnold R. Thomson brought up the proposal of a driveway along the waterfront if a right of way could be secured. This would run near the present waterline near George Street to the present north-easterly around the swamp down through the hospital property. The driveway would be used only in summer and would make a fine natural park.

H. W. Ackerman pointed Miami Beach as a model of what can be accomplished in beach construction. A widening of 75 years ago last year there were 23 hotels of one hundred rooms each built and 56 apartment houses built there.

He went on to say that "a good bit of money has been spent here". Some of this might be paid to men in need on this plan of waterfront and beach development; You hear people say this will cost money. Well we are paying out on relief and should get some benefit of the money.

Several Proposals

O. R. Thompson, Dundas Street West, proposed:—

(1)—A row of trees parallel with the roadway to Prince Edward Co., and a row paralleling the railway tracks which would obscure the west dump from the highway.

(2)—A few odd trees planted on the dump to give it the semblance of a park.

(3)—Removal of signs near the highway in the city and just outside.

(4)—Planting of trees on land owned by the Highway Department near the Devil's Elbow curve.

(5)—Removal of the tracks from the right of way of the C.P.R. line from a point west of the cemetery crossing to a point east of Gibson's crossing on Dundas St. to use the C.N.R. right of way for this distance of ten or twelve miles. The roadbed to be used along with the railway bridge in the river mouth as a highway for heavy traffic of trucks and other through traffic.

Mr. Thompson said, "If you belong to anyone of the families which have been deprived of relatives through railway crossing accidents you will see the advantage of this." Particular reference was made to the cemetery crossing and the Gibson crossing.

"This plan would eliminate a number of level crossings in the city and just outside."

Park Extension Favoured

M. Callaghan paid a tribute to the "swampy, dirty, weedy waterfront" which greets the eye as one comes up the bay, set against the contrasting beauty of the back ground of hills.

He said that a park could be made in four or five days in one place. We have seven or eight parks in the city and not one near the water. I always associate parks with water. Victoria Park is a disgrace without a light on it. The Yacht Club has been trying to get it lit for years.

Mr. Hartly referred to the fact that the city, who had had confidence in the tourist business, is seeking to have permission to open a tourist information bureau here to serve Belleville and the surrounding country as well as the tourists.

CHARGE OF THEFT LAID TO CORRIGAN

Suspect Arrested at Carleton Place For Breaking Into Quinn's Store, Tweed

Michael Corrigan, alias Robert Nelson, who was arrested in Carleton Place by Provincial Police as a result of investigation into the breaking and entering and theft of clothes from Ray, Quinn's Tweed haberdashery, today appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., charged with breaking and entering and the theft of wearing apparel. Corrigan, who gave his age as 32 and his home address as Renfrew, was not asked to plead by Constable McIlroy, who read the charge as the prosecution asked for a remand for one week. Corrigan was later lodged in the county jail awaiting trial.

Gave Name as Nelson

When Corrigan was arrested in Carleton Place yesterday he gave his name as Robert Nelson, of Ottawa and is alleged to have been in possession of some of the goods wearing apparel stolen from Ray Quinn's store the night previous. Later today Inspector Frank Gardner of the C.P.P. announced clues had been picked up that are expected to lead to the arrest of Corrigan's accomplice in the Tweed robbery.

We have certain information that leads us to believe the clothes taken from Quinn's partner its principle have been located in Ottawa, they having been shipped there from Smith's Falls early yesterday," revealed Inspector Gardner this afternoon as he hinted at a possible early arrest of the second man implicated in the Tweed robbery, which was committed only 24 hours previously.

POLICE BLOTTER

A man giving his name as Hyman Hamlik, Toronto, was apprehended selling fruit and vegetables to local cafes without being in possession of a hawkers' and peddlers' license today. Constable Arnott escorted the man to the police station, where he was questioned and later instructed to either purchase a licence to sell foreign goods or leave the city immediately.

Miss Mazzanino and one Rose Ignicia graced the cell block at the police station last night. The transients were permitted to leave early today, but the drunk was detained long enough to appear in court and pay a ten dollar fine.

Fingerprints May Prove Valuable to Police

An unsuccessful attempt to rob the Imperial gasoline station operated on the Canniffon Road by Robt. Burks, was discovered about 7.00 a.m. today when an attendant opened the station for business. Two windows had been broken, but apparently the would-be robbers were frightened away before they could gain entrance and rifle the safe, that contained about ten dollars in change.

P. C. Evans answered the call and investigated. The officer found that first, the would-be robbers had broken the window of the front door, but were unable to unlock the door from the inside. Later the robbers removed a large pane of glass from a window on the west side of the building, giving sufficient room to permit a person to crawl through. The fact that nothing was disturbed inside lead the officer to believe the robbers had been frightened away before getting into the main office of the gas station.

Constable Evans held for further investigation a pane of glass that had been removed from the north window of the building. "There are finger prints on that pane of glass that may prove valuable towards the apprehension of the criminal," suggested the officer later today.

ALBERTA REDUCES BOND INTEREST

After June 1st Interest on Public Debs. Will be 2½ Per Cent.

Edmonton, May 26—(CP)—Interest will be paid June 1 at rates of from four and ½ half to six per cent on some $14,769,000 of Alberta bonds but interest accruing thereafter on the province's public debt will be paid at a general 3 1-2 per cent. due to conditions of a recovery reduction announced by the Provincial Government.

Hon. Charles Cockroft, Provincial Treasurer, made the announcement yesterday after the cabinet meeting and he declared proclamation of the Debt Adjustment Act passed at the present Legislature's first session would not be necessary as authority for the refunding was given by the Alberta Treasury Act.

"If there is no authority at the present time in existing legislation then it will be necessary to proclaim the Restraining Act and suspend its complete operation," Premier Aberhart said.

CORONATION IN MAY NEXT

The coronation of a king dates far back into Jewish history. Kings of Israel and Judah were crowned on accession to the throne and on the taking of the coronation oath. In old days they were anointed with oil by the high priest and so were consecrated to God. The ceremony which will place the crown on the head of King Edward Eighth on May 12th, 1937, is very like that with which King Richard the First of England was enthroned with some changes of course. The ceremony of the hallowing of British Kings has taken place since 1066 in Westminster Abbey, while the Scots kings were crowned at Scone in the ancient royal palace in Perthshire. The stone on which the royal Scots were crowned is the very one on which King Edward VIII will be crowned a year hence. This stone is supposed to have been the stone or pillow which Jacob used at Bethel in his wanderings. It was carried, says tradition, in the fifth century before Christ to Ireland, to be known as the Lia Fail, or stone of destiny of the early Kings of Ireland. Thence it was taken to Scotland and in 1296 Edward First carried it away to Westminster as an evidence of his subjugation of Scotland. This stone of Scone rests in the seat of the coronation chair, which has been used since the time of the first Edward.

At the coronation there will be but one chair for the present King is unmarried.

So next May there will take place one of the most impressive events in history when King Edward is consecrated, anointed and crowned in the ancient Abbey church as the ruler of a greater territory and larger population of peoples than ever came to the sway of any other ruler. The ancient kings and emperors had a simple empire as compared with that which will do King Edward obeisance on his coronation.

That his reign may be a reign of peace and progress and one of renown to set in still greater lustre the history of his peoples is the wish of the half billion of British subjects.

LOYAL TO THE LEAGUE

Three Scandinavian countries, Denmark, Norway and Sweden have joined with Holland, Switzerland, Spain and Finland, to see what can be done to save the League of Nations.

Several Great Powers who have had all to say have about ruined this same League.

No powers have given more unselfish support of the League than these seven powers named along with Britain. They have put national and regional interests below their League ideal.

One commentator says—

During the last decade the statesmen from these countries have increasingly protested against the tendency of the Great Powers either to disregard the League or to use it for national or imperial purposes. They have protested also against similar narrow tendencies on the part of the leaders of the different blocs within the League. At the recent critical meetings of the Council, the Foreign Ministers from the Scandinavian countries made it clear that if the League might be wrecked by the failure of these Powers to agree on a strong League policy.

"Now Mr. Munch, the schoolmaster Foreign Minister of Denmark, speaking for the group of seven countries, has summarized their attitude. They do not consider the League's recent failure to protect a small State against aggression is proof that similar attempts later will also fail. They have 'agreed to remain members of the League as long as possible, striving to preserve its universality and impartiality, but on the absolute condition that the League does not deteriorate into the instrument of some Great Power.' They do not despair, but are determined to avoid becoming the victims of the rivalries of the Great Powers.

"This is not a threat; it is a solemn notice to the Great Powers and to the regional blocs that they must somehow reconcile their conflicting policies if the seven smaller States are to continue to base their policies on the assumption that the League can be made into an effective instrument for European security."

Shall it be that the Little Powers shall lead the way, while the Great Powers fumble the most gigantic problems and issues with amazing lack of foresight? There are a number of other small powers in the Balkan Entente, the Latin-American block, and the Little Entente. These small powers know the value of international unity. They, if any might be expected to be those least satisfied with the status quo in which they are, but in fact greater powers occupy the place they might reasonably hold. Had they the same aspirations as some of the Great Powers the world would be far too small for half of them. They only want the world a place for nations to live in at peace.

The loyalty of the small powers to the international ideals thrown into the shadow down the selfish aims of some others, who have least need of expansion.

WANDERLUST

The highways and the byways, the kind
—sky folding all,
And never a care to drag me back and never a voice to call;
Only the call of the long white road to the far horizon's wall.

The glad seas and the mad seas, the seas on a night in June,
And never a hand to beckon back from the path of the new-lit moon;
Never a night that lasts too long or a dawn that breaks too soon!

The shrill breeze and the hill breeze, the sea breeze, fierce and bold,
And never a breeze that gives the lie to a tale that a breeze has told;
Always the tale of the ranges and new in the countries strange and old.

PERSISTENT CONSISTENT ADVERTISING has always been advocated in this column. Here is a tremendous force which most people recognize but few harness to their own advantage in the best way. Men bold enough to place complete confidence in publicity have won to fame and riches, others have used it tentatively and cautiously with favorable but not big results. Advertising of the right kind is not expensive, in fact it costs nothing, is free, practically, because unless advertising pays for itself it does not fulfill its mission. Advertising is an investment and dividends are paid little or big just in proportion to the skill and courage with which the investment is handled. However, for those who may think we present the case too strong we offer the reasoned opinion of a man who has not always seen eye to eye with the publishers of newspapers of Canada, Rt. Honourable R. B. Bennett, former Prime Minister of Canada, who gave the question of advertising close study and then presented his opinion as follows:

"Success in advertising may be summarized, according to my observation, in two words; MORE ADVERTISING.

"In other words if it is done spasmodically it fails; IF IT IS CONTINUOUS AND PERSISTENT IT WILL SUCCEED;

"Apart altogether from the mechanical attractions of the advertisement, and matters of that sort, I am directing my remarks only to the question of how you can make advertising succeed, and so far as I know the only method by which it can succeed is by MORE ADVERTISING.

"When the honorable member for Comox-Alberni (Mr. Neill) was referring to the advertising of Pears' soap I think probably he realized that the expenditure for that advertising ran into hundreds of thousands of dollars per annum.

"The appropriations made for that purpose are now based upon recognition of the fact that successful advertising means MORE ADVERTISING, that means CONTINUITY, that it means PERMANANCY, and that you cannot possibly succeed by a SPASMODIC effort."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

MAY 30, 1916.

Messrs. Harry Wallace, Herbert Bentley and J. Brooks of Kansask, Sask., are expected to arrive in the city today to join the 155th Battalion Band. Mr. Wallace and Mr. Bentley are former Belleville boys, while Mr. Brooks is a resident of Saskatchewan. All are fully qualified musicians and will add greatly in making the band more complete.

Dr. R. W. Tennent of this city who has been in the war zone for the past year, is expected to arrive home next week.

Sergt. Harry H. Ponton of the Heavy Artillery, No. 1 Siege Battery is home on a few days' leave.

Mrs. J. A. Floyd of Mattawa, Ont., is in the city visiting her aunt, Mrs. R. P. Hamilton, Cedar Street.

30 YEARS AGO

MAY 29, 1906.

The city gas works last year showed a clear profit over everything of $17,36.72. At present the output of gas is 4,000,000 feet per day as against 15,000 feet when the works were taken over by the Gas Company at the same time of year. The council is considering lowering the price and to extend the service in the city. Under estimated conditions it would be profitable to extend the service would take ten years to supply the needs of all prospective users. Under the circumstances it would appear that the proper course for the council to pursue is to submit a bylaw at once to the ratepayers which would give the civic authorities power to issue debentures for the $36,000.00 required for the work. We believe that when the matter is properly laid before them the property owners will be almost unanimous in favor of such a bylaw It must not be forgotten that the people who pay the taxes are the ones most interested and it is to them the proposition should be submitted.

Mr. and Mrs. John O. Lake of this city have received word of the death of their son-in-law, Cyril W. Rava, which occurred at Kerrugwa, Central Africa. The late Mr. Rava came to this city about two years ago and for several years he was a trusted employee of Messrs. Haines and Lockett, shoe merchants, having charge of the wholesale department. In early life he became imbued with the missionary spirit. On January 14th, 1891, he was married to Miss Annie Lake in Bethel Hall by the Rev. J. M. Hodges, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church at that time. They decided to follow in the mission work and chose as their field of labor Central Africa. On the 5th of February, 1891 they bade farewell to Belleville and after spending some time in England with Mrs. Rava's family, they sailed for Africa, arriving on the west coast on May 30th. They then proceeded 1000 miles into the interior where they have since labored. The late Mr. Rava was 32 years of age.

Mr. Paul Lalonde has returned home after a very successful season with St. Mary's minstrels. He will spend the summer here.

Stirling and District

Stirling, May 28—The principal, teaching staff and pupils of Stirling public school all assisted with the interesting programme arranged for their annual open day exercises which took place on Friday afternoon May 22nd. Under the capable direction of Miss Johnson, Miss McFall, Miss Preston and Mr. Weld the pupils gave a fine display of their training before a large audience of interested parents and friends.

The program began at three with a group of choruses by the pupils massed together and each group given by some of the pupils. Each number presented in a very pleasing fashion and those who gathered on the school lawns were greatly impressed by the talent displayed by the young youngsters.

At the conclusion of the program, the school rooms were open to the public to display examples of the work of the students. Manual training which proves very popular with the boy students is progressing at the Stirling school in fine and strides under the tuition of Mr. Wells and many of the objects on exhibition by the boys were attractive, useful articles for household use and also finished in such a manner that they were beautiful to look at.

The household science as taught to the girl students is also popular with the girls of all ages and their display of handicraft and needlework attracted a great deal of attention from the visitors.

The day was one which was very attractive, for in all schools there are some pupils with an outstanding ability for drawing and painting with water colors, Stirling giving attention to this rule and many of the works displayed by the students would be the envy of high school students.

The idea of an annual open day at the school is greeted warmly by the parents of the pupils. It stimulates interest in school activities and creates a bond of friendship between the parents and teachers

Anniversary Banquet of Frankford C.O.I.T.

A large number of friends gathered in Frankford for the banquet given by the ladies of the Frankford C.O.I.T. to the girls on their fourth anniversary.

The tables were artistically decorated with various kinds of cut flowers and the splendid dinner provided was fully up to the high standard remembered by those who attended. The dinner was carried through in a most efficient manner due to the splendid co-operation of the various committees in charge.

When the guests were all seated, Miss Ethel Wilson, on behalf of those present, presented the address to Miss Peter, Frankford lodge, who officiated as toast-mistress. Miss Peter briefly introduced the various numbers on the program. The toast to the King and Empire was proposed by Sister Oakey and responded to by Rev. Father Quinn. "O Canada" and "God Save the King" were rendered by Sister Oakey and responded to by Wright.

The toast to the visitors and responses were made by Sister Mildred Peter of Halloway L.O. B.A., and Worthy Matrons Cooke of the Stirling lodge, Miss Ethel G. Frost, veteran member of the C.O.I.T. and her fifty years, was proposed by Mr. Robert Morrow. The first toast to the girls' program was a reading by Miss Preston. Mr. Arthur Duncan then favored with a number of comic songs. An instrumental number by Mr. Melbourne was greatly appreciated. Rev. Mr. Lake of Frankford, then offered a few reading. Misses Dorothy Oakey and Orvanet Nason were heartily applauded for the vocal duet, and Don. Tripp and Hugh Burkitt contributed an instrumental duet.

Rev. L. McConnell gave the address of the evening speaking on "Loyalty", his address was most appropriate for the occasion and possessing a wealth of real food for thought at this particular time in the life of the organization. Several additional numbers were offered by the artists already mentioned and a vocal duet by the Kemp sisters was greatly enjoyed. After a brief address by Sister Stobbie by the visiting organizations and an expression of gratitude to the visiting artists, the gathering dismissed with God Save the King. Method was used throughout.

"Under Two Flags"

Four great stars, a cast of ten thousand, and a story that flames with intensity of Sahara's burning sands, bring one of the mightiest spectacle-dramas of motion picture history to the screen in 20th Century's "Under Two Flags", coming to the Belle Tomorrow, (Saturday) for four days, matinee daily.

Topping the star-studded story of flaming love and smoldering rebellion are Ronald Colman, Claudette Colbert, Rosalind Russell and Victor McLaglen, who lead a supporting cast of forty character stars and numberless extras.

The setting of the story is a sun-baked post of empire on the edge of the Sahara. McLaglen is the hard-bitten commander of a battalion of Legionnaires and his outstanding soldier is Ronald Colman.

McLaglen is the slave of the tantalizing "Cigarette", played by Miss Colbert. When he discovers that she has given her heart to Colman, he comes to hate his subordinate.

Colman, however, falls madly in love with the beautiful Rosalind Russell. Sent to a fortress in the heart of Arab territory, McLaglen persists in putting Colman in posts of danger, hoping that his death will remove the obstacle between himself and Miss Colbert. He records of his deed, and goes to Colman's rescue.

Just as the entire force seems doomed, Miss Colbert leads reinforcements or Legionnaires to their rescue, giving her life to send the man she loves back to another woman.

The supporting cast is filled with such superlative performers as Gregory Ratoff, Nigel Bruce, C. Henry Gordon, Herbert Mundin and J. Edward Bromberg, star of the New York stage making his film debut.

"Under Two Flags" was directed by Frank Lloyd famed for his direction of "Cavalcade" and "Mutiny on the Bounty".

The Belle Latest News Flashes and "Mickey's Polo Team" will be exhibited on the same program. On Saturday afternoon a new adventure of "The Fighting Marines", will be exhibited.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.15 "Under Two Flags" starts daily at 2.50, 7.30 and 9.30 p.m.

Grand Show Tonight

If you like to laugh . . . and who doesn't? . . . you will want to see the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature comedy at the Belle Theatre, "Pelticoat Fever", co-starring those experts at laughter-provoking technique, Robert Montgomery and Myrna Loy. The film eschews all precedent in setting its action against the ice-bound terrain of Labrador. The brilliant direction of George Fitzmaurice is to a large extent responsible for the unabating merriment of this exceedingly funny picture.

Major Bowes and his newest and best group of prize-winning Amateurs, Popular Science a clever screen oddity in color, and "Fisherman's Luck" - thrilling fishing expedition on the Briny deep, completes a splendid varied program of screen entertainment to be presented at the Belle Tonight, for the last times, with two complete shows starting at 7.10 and 9.15.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Desert Gold"

A drama tingling with excitement and suspense, Paramount's "Desert Gold" at the Capitol tomorrow only. The stirring tale of a white man's treachery in his effort to obtain the last of an Indian tribe's wealth is the basis for one of the most moving tales of the Old West. It is a story that only a master craftsman like Zane Grey could write.

"Desert Gold" deals with a young Indian chieftain, abducted and horribly tortured by a villainous mine promoter and saved from death by a young mining engineer. This rescue results in a lasting friendship between the young men which proves of great value later when the engineer and his sweetheart are in danger. Attacked by desert bad-men, a terrific battle ensues between them with the Indians, riding to the rescue. The young couple are themselves saved from death. The climax of the story makes a thrilling, fiery, romance.

Tom Keene is excellent as the young engineer who falls in love with Marsha Hunt, a charming and capable actress Monte Blue convincingly plays the mine promoter who kidnaps the Indian, portrayed by Larry "Buster" Crabbe, while the comedy moments in the picture are well carried by Raymond Hatton and Robert Cummings.

"Desert Gold" with its intrigue, its romance, its bitter fighting, is an actionful and colorful romance.

Added Attraction
"Wonder Bar"

Out-doing all previous sensational combinations of stars and specialties, First National's long awaited international musical drama "Wonder Bar, will be shown at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow only.

Kay Francis plays the leading feminine role opposite Al Jolson, who portrays the proprietor of the "Wonder Bar." Ricardo Cortez and Dolores Del Rio have the coveted parts of the two dancers, while Dick Powell and Henry Kolker have the roles of the American composer-orchestra leader and the husband of Kay Francis, respectively. Hal LeRoy, the sensational Broadway dancer, plays the role of himself in a thrilling dance sequence.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Slipper and Crawford by Financial Experts.

O'Brien Highlands Outlook.

A lengthy article on the O'Brien record high grade stripping. The Globe Mail in their current issue, reports in part as follows:

The policy of estimating the worth of O'Brien's new high-grade ore deposit is attracting attention. With the bonanza occurrence located and developed on both the 750 and 1,000 foot levels, it is now encountered on the intervening 875 foot level, and the question is not just what may happen. But as the shoot is clearly defined on both the upper levels, the 750 and 875, being near an iron, there is every possibility that the 875 level will carry good workings have computed the deposit to be indicated in fact, and in the conservative have far exceeded any estimates tentatively made by the engineers.

In view of the very considerable publicity which has been given to the O'Brien situation, and the attention of leading northern mining men, probably more experienced than any other group. The Quebec Miner, and assuming that this deposition is indicated to be the 8th level, and there is every reason to believe that it is, then we can have no hesitating in advancing the suggestion that O'Brien's new high-grade ore shoot, when opened up of at least 212,000,000 and possibly more in view of the fact that current calculations do not take into account the possibility of a continuation of the shoot below the 1,000 ft. level.

Stadacona Rouyn

Stadacona Rouyn's 200-ton mill should be turning over the first part of June, and returns in this direction and a complement of high assays from a diamond drill indicate an optimistic outlook. The mine is said to be developing well on the vein feed the mill. Her machines are now being operated. While the first mill unit is only 200 tons, plans for the 400 and 600-foot horizons, drifting on the 400 foot level and from 4th, 5th, 2nd and 1a levels. Values on the 400 foot strike and will results mill test to determine average. Management expects production during development stage will about cover mining, milling and development costs. The 5th level has been opened 200 feet vertically below the 4th, on dip of vein. The 5th level will be opened 150 feet vertically or 125 ft. on the dip below the 4th. The new shaft will be carried down another 100 ft. to open 6th level.

Sudbury Basin

That Sudbury Basin Mines, Limited would join the ranks of the dividend paying mines during the year end, was the information given to shareholders at the annual meeting. The amount and the date were not mentioned. The company is in a splendid position and it is could afford to make a substantial payment.

Normetal at New High

Normeta has been attracting attention of late. The issue has moved up to a new high since 1929. One New York source points out that eight of the upper producers in the American continent for which data is available, recorded 7½ pound cents per pound of copper in 1935, demonstrating the economic stability of the base metal production. The chief saving was in labour, fuel and supplies, freight, and taxes, which did not increase in proportion to the higher output.

Hamilton Traction

Standard Statistics take the following opinion on the shares of Hamilton Traction:

The relaxation of restriction on rentals automatically during the past year or so is reflected in the dividend of $0.30 a share in Canadian funds, to be paid July 15. This is the first distribution since September, 1935, when 75c was paid on common stock. A later crisis in the railway situation is distinctly possible. Moreover, the prospect for direct contrast to the declining trend, in earnings in the payment is in direct contrast to the declining trend, in earnings in the payment is in direct contrast to the declining trend, in earnings in the payment is a conspicuous attitude on the longer range possibilities of the stock under reasonably favorable foreign exchange conditions is justified, and speculative holdings may be retained."

million ounces of gold was produced, or 10% over the 1935 record.

Ranking in order of gold producers are the Union of South Africa, Canada, the United States and Canada, with Russia showing the greatest percentage of increase. In view of the large number of new mines being prepared for production in Canada, Australia, the Gold Coast, and the United States, further increases are expected in 1936 and 1937.

Prior to 1929 gold production was declining, because of the gradual depletion of known deposits and the increase in operating costs while the price remained fixed at $20.67 an ounce.

The first fillip to gold mining came with the onset of the depression. Wage rates and the cost of supplies dropped. The second boost came when Great Britain went off the gold standard, enabling producers in certain countries to obtain a substantial exchange premium. Improvements in practice have been taken when the United States' Government officially revalued gold from $20.67 to $35 an ounce.

Ladies' Aid Societies Hold 4th Annual Convention at Stirling

Three Hundred Delegates From Prince Edward and Hastings Attend

WORK REVIEWED

Over three hundred delegates and visitors assembled in St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, on Thursday, May 28, to attend the fourth annual convention of the Women's Missionary and Aid Societies of Belleville Presbytery, representing Prince Edward and Hastings Counties of the United Church, which was a decided success.

These ladies were cordially welcomed by Rev. Rowland, pastor of St. Paul's United Church, Mrs. Rowland and Mrs. C. Thompson.

Mrs. H. O. Martin was in charge of the registration of those in attendance, while Mrs. H. Jackman read the dinner tickets.

Mrs. J. A. Lott, president, presided, and the morning session was opened with community singing, Miss Mary Currie of Stirling, being song leader and Miss Ruth Ketcheson acting as pianist.

The was followed by the devotional period which was in charge of Wellington Division, Mrs. Mitchell read the Scripture lesson, Psalm 91, after which Mrs. Mayhew led in prayer. A duet, "Abide With Me Lovely are Thy Dwellings" by Mrs. Mayhew and Mrs. Rowland concluded the devotions.

The Secretary, Miss Audra Brickman, gave a detailed account of the minutes of the last annual convention, which were approved as read.

Delegates Welcomed

Mrs. H. G. Bailey on behalf of the congregation of St. Paul's W. A., extended a cordial welcome to the delegates and visitors present. She referred to the women of the church as the backbone of the congregation, and to the splendid women in the church. Many different activities and interests in our societies and there is much to be good that may be done, but always with a worthy motive and objective, other than financial. To those guardians of colour, Mrs. F. Harris, Wellington, fittingly replied.

Address by President

In presenting her address, Mrs. Lott, chose for her subject, "Fellowship and Prayer." She referred to the increasing interest in the work of Women's Associations as evidenced by the large number in attendance at this rally. Today there are few positions, that cannot be held by women; women are assuming more positions and discharging their duties well and nobly.

There's not a task to mankind given That has a greater weight of worth

Without a woman in it.

We must dedicate ourselves to the service of our Master and enjoy His fellowship with His disciples. For He has not say "I walk in the light as He is the Light, we have fellowship one with another." Our spirit will be a happier place to live in with every member of Christ's body being a vital living member. Our daily prayer should be "Lord, what is Thy will for me to do?"

Ladies' Aid gatherings should result in greater love and unity. Our meetings should be planned so that the greatest good may be derived by the greatest number of souls. Our Lord's last words to earnest Christians; filled with wisdom, the Holy Ghost will come with power to God, and stirring toward higher levels.

When we commit a wrong, we are sorry; the next time we make a mistake we decide to approach God with our trouble, and find in Him, loving forgiveness for other we have noticed the motto "Prayer Changes Things" and the story of the story of two sons, who found the spirit of their father's funeral after the death of their father in His life-time praying for the salvation of their souls, illustrated this common proverb. She closed her address with the words of the old familiar hymn "Fight the Good Fight, with all thy might."

Mrs. Edgar Lane and Miss Helen Lane, Wallbridge, accompanied by Mrs. Hilton Storey, delighted the audience with a duet "The Master walks in the Garden".

Reports Presented

The reports of the different societies represented in the Belleville Presbytery, were presented by the Secretary. Forty-eight societies reported while twenty-four those receiving showed increased membership over last year. A total of seven hundred thousand dollars was raised during last year. Money was raised by teas, chicken suppers, tag sales, systematic giving, freewill offering, dues, collected, sewing bags, travelling shirt, conundrum paper, programs, catering for clubs having booths at fairs, bazaars and ball games, ice cream socials, sale of quilts and quilting for Indians, travelling bathtub, penny contests, apron sale, anniversary dinners, sale of donated grain, eggs and fowl, banquet supper, Jiggs' Supper, sale of homecooking, etc. These societies are doing a great work in the upbuilding of church and community as evidenced by their reports. Some of their projects have been redecorating the church and manse, repairing those buildings in repair, providing new lights installing the hydro into church and parsonage, buy a frigidaire for the parsonage, donating substantial sums to the Trustee Board of the church, paying the sexton, or acting as janitress to curtail expenses, buying hymn books and choir, organ and music, pay telephone account, supply flowers for each Sunday service, bought piano for Sunday School room, contributed to Church Fund and Salvation Army Debt Campaign, Flowers and fruit were sent to those who were ill in the community and bereaved members, flowers and letters of condolence. All societies are welcoming strangers and visiting committees visit the sick.

Mrs. G. F. Lott's Address

Mrs. G. F. Lott, Tabernacle Church, Belleville, then presented a paper prepared by Mrs. Asher Taylor, instead of using a text, she chose as her subject "Growth."

"So oft they go, all clasping hands

Young helping old, as life declines,

Old helping young, is that not so?

All helping All—through life we go.

Wherever we go, west or east, we find in our Women's Associations some very practical saints whose lives are filled with love expressed as "hundred horse-power" personality. These persons often prove to be the filling power in a community, church or organization, possessing unusual gifts of grace and power. They go about their tasks of love and service with a certain ease and naturalness that makes them very dear to "second nature." They are always busy people, with their share of life-work to do, but this in no way prevents their finding time where others accomplishing needs to be done for the church or community, or for a sick neighbour or for some needy cause that would fall without a helping hand or a consecrated gift behind it. Their work is done without fuss, worry or display, without flattery or exhibition and is performed only to make things "go forward." One of the greatest joys that on modern life is the need to get on with people, to get on and to go along and to do work that must be done in this world. Surely we know there is no one to render kindly service without understanding ministry in our churches but we find them and all the vast army of others who claim to be followers of Jesus. Do we fully understand how dependent God is upon human hands and brains and hearts for the doing of His work?

The speaker compared our lives with a house. That house is our body, our personality and may become a crowded house—too crowded, perhaps of self. What is the most rare thing this house contains? It is the one thing we cannot afford to be without, the compassionate of that Other, who lives with us, until He gives up His life for us. Sometimes we find ourselves in the position of one who gives house-room in a guest and he or she goes to sit with that guest. Time spent unwisely our House of Life clutter-ed up and unnecessary daily duties block up the doorway to our peace of mind. Since spaciousness and liberty do not stay in our literal house, but have to be reestablished, how much more is it essential in the House of the Soul? How are we to set about it? Think the matter over clearly and decide whether these tasks are necessary to your daily life. God is present with you in the House and will help you in the ordering of the House of your life and will so govern it, that the crowded rooms will be freed of superfluous cares and irritations and unwillingness.

A motette from Madoc United Church, comprised of Mesdames Kennedy, Bread, Hamm, Lough, Wannamaker and Henderson, with Mrs. Whytock as pianist, sang "I'm Believing and Receiving."

The president read the nominating committees were then appointed.

Address by Beatrice Jones

Miss Beatrice Jones, Redeemville then addressed the convention. She referred to the anniversary last Thursday of Ascension Day, its significance, the gathering together of the band of people in prayer following Jesus' ascension, the formation of the first church at Jerusalem. Some women are taking such an active part in all spheres of life, let us honor the work we find to do no matter how small the task may be. One task is to serve our fellowman. Jesus came to earth to serve. Let us do likewise. It is our duty, obligation and privilege to serve our Master. The speaker closed her address by all to, attend church regularly accompanied by their families.

Grace Church, Trenton, Program

The quiet hall hour was conducted by members of Grace Church, Trenton, with Mrs. (Dr.) Campbell as leader. "Jesus the Very Thought of Thee," was sung after which Mrs. Campbell read the first eight verses of the fifteenth chapter of John's gospel. She chose for her talk "Quiet Times." Christ has called "Abide With Me." It is true in our everyday life, as well as in business that our minds are preoccupied with worldly affairs but we cannot bear fruit unless we abide in Him. Jesus' life was busy with His teaching, preaching, healing and He found it necessary to get apart and commune with the Heavenly Father. How often we read He went away to be alone, so we need to go apart, to tell God of our needs, to listen to Him and rest in Him. Christ should be our best friend, one whom we love to be with, to enjoy His fellowship, to diligently study; to do His will. We are commanded to love the Lord with all our heart. Our duties often would shut out this fellowship, unless we planned our daily tasks. We are all the same spiritually, minded as He breathed on us all the same and may we all realize the necessity of growth in our spiritual lives. Being a Christian requires study and takes time, the same as the skilled musician needs second constant practice. Our motives need sincerity mean most to Him. The Bible is God's word. Let us make use of it and listen as He speaks to us through it. Study God's word. Take one attribute of God daily and ponder it over and over; God as a Creator, God as our Father, God is Love, and God for Jesus. Mrs. Campbell's closing thought was "Daily receive into the sanctuary for they testify Me".

Mrs. L. W. Ryckman then led in prayer. This was followed by a solo "I heard the Voice of Jesus Say" by Mrs. C. Denille, which brought the morning session to a close.

Serve Delicious Dinner

The ladies of St. Paul's Church served a sumptuous dinner at noon in the basement of the church. The tables and room looked very invitating with floral decorations of Illies-of-the-valley and purple Illacs.

The afternoon session was opened with a song service under Miss Currie's leadership and Mrs. Rowland as pianist.

Program By Fathers.

Fathers conducted the devotional period. Mrs. (Rev.) Burton read Psalm of the fifth chapter of St. Luke's Gospel. She chose for her story dedicatory. "Let Your Light Shine." Christ has called "Abide With Me." It is true in our everyday life, as well as in business that our minds are preoccupied with worldly affairs but we cannot bear fruit unless we abide in Him. Jesus' life was busy with His teaching, preaching, healing and He found it necessary to get apart and commune with the Heavenly Father. ALLOW NO PROFIT IN PILGRIMAGES

Vatican Rules Holds That Pilgrims Must Preserve Religious Character

By Andrew Berding
(Associated Press Staff)

Vatican City, May 28.—(AP)—Swearing complaints against pilgrimages went into practice today for the first time with the arrival of hundreds of pilgrims to celebrate Pope Pius' 59th birthday, Sunday.

The rules provided that the "pilgrimages must at all times preserve their religious character and be considered as true and proper acts of Christian piety".

Consequently they must be completely distinct from trips organized for pleasure or mere touristic motive. Such pilgrimage was accompanied by a priest as spiritual director.

The congregation ruled that all idea of profit in pilgrimages

The congregation forbade the clergy to arrange the technical organization of the pilgrimages. This was left to "trustworthy and expert laymen".

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfast and ma said to pop, "How about dinner this evening, Willyum?

Let's have it at the usual time, pop said, and not a bit later. Naturally, silly, I mean what shall we have, and now before we go any farther, and in fact before we even start, I don't want you to breathe the name of liver and onions, wish is invariably your staple track loss whenever I mention food.

I wasn't even thinking of liver and onions, nothing was further from my thoughts and nothing would give me less pleasure, pop said, and he said, Good, I'm delighted to hear it, would you consider having chicken in the middle of the week for a change?

Meeting a change from Sunday, pop said, I'd consider anything except liver and onions, my thumbs are down on that dish, so please dont bring the question up again.

I dont intend to, so why do you persist? ma said. You surely enjoy a nice lam stew, unless you've developed a taste for veal in very good at this time of year, she said, and pop said, No is he liver, pork, nerty, but not for me, thanks.

Well, then, what do you realize you haven't made a single suggestion? ma said, and pop said, If I did I'd have the liver and onions, you may rest assured on that score. The very finest republic that it's rather peculiar, isn't it? he said.

GOOD HEALTH

will go quickly if you neglect disordered kidneys. Backache, painful, suppressed urination, swollen joints, nervousness and the Cold Pills are soothe and strengthen your kidneys.

Not to me, I've been repelled by the thanet for years, hee hee, pop said. It's been a long while since we had a duck, she said, and pop said, I suppose there are people in the world who never had a duck, and the way I feel now I wouldn't shed a single tear if I never had liver and onions again.

I declare I've got a good mind to order it just to be contrary, ma said, and pop said, Well, you're running the house and I suppose you have me in your power, and I'm not in a position to interfere, and give him the order?

O hush up, Pa, ma said.

Whch he did.

Clyde Beatty Fined; 'Cruelty' to Lions

Animal Trainer and Hammer Smashy Clash Over Pistol and Whip

Pittsburgh, May 26.—Clyde Beatty, trainer of wild beasts, was arrested at the circus grounds on a complaint sworn out by the Humane Society charging him with cruelty to animals.

Although denying the charge, he pleaded guilty at hearing before Alderman Ray E. Schneider and paid a fine of $20 and costs. An assistant, William Backus, was fined a similar sum.

Two constables took Beatty into custody after his afternoon performance. E. E. Smith and M. J. Teuber, agents of the society, said they warned the trainer after his first performance that "cruelty" in his wild animal act would have to stop.

Among other grievances, they said he used a whip-cracker to agitate his lions and fired blank shots in to their faces.

"If I fired a gun into the animal's face the way they said I did, it would put him deaf," said the trainer said. "The whip does not hit the animal. It's merely the noise to attract attention.

"You can't train wild animals like you do dogs. You can't pet them on the head. You have to make them know that you are the master."

Beatty asserted that he had only one other complaint in his career, a Buffalo three years ago.

"If I were actually hurting the animals they would object," he said. "I have been training animals for fifteen years. This is the first time I have been arrested.

CANADA IS MOVING TOWARDS MODEST BUT EFFECTIVE AIR FORCE

Ottawa, May 26.— (CP)—Canada is moving towards attainment of a modest but effective air force and is making progress with development of Trans-Canada Air Service, Hon. Ian Mackenzie told the House of Commons last night as he was closely questioned by members before his departmental estimates were approved.

The defence Minister said he believed the government should have a small but good air force and a start was being made this year. The vote for the air force was increased by $1,000,000 and three new fighting planes of the latest design would be purchased.

At present Canada has only ten machines fighting planes and even these are slightly obsolescent. There are a great number of planes which are reasonably efficient but not of the latest type.

A decision will shortly be made as to whether private or government owned machines will be used in the proposed Trans-Canada Air Service, Mr. MacKenzie told the House. The Airways will be completely equipped with emergency landing fields, airports and harbors.

Charges of extravagance, inefficiency and general uselessness were levelled at the Aviation Service of C.C.F. members, but in a general defence of the department Mr. MacKenzie had support from Hon. Grote Stirling, former head of the Department and Conservative leader. R. B. Bennett.

Grant MacNeil, (C.C.F., Vancouver North), charged eight obsolete planes had been bought by the Government from an Ottawa Company for $2,000 each and distributed to flying clubs. He said the same planes were offered for sale at bargain prices years ago and were of a type long discarded.

The planes had all passed inspection by technical officers, said Mr. MacKenzie. They were of a type requested by the Flying Clubs as they were suitable for instruction.

Empire Day Programmes

Rawdon, May 24.—A special programme based on Empire Day and Peace was presented by the pupils of S. S. No. 4 Wellman's on Friday afternoon with about forty-five in attendance.

The service opened with "The Maple Leaf Forever" and Donald Mc read greetings from Dr. Slipp, Minister of Education. The school sang "My Own Canadian Home" and Dorothy Hinds recited "Green Trees." Gerald Taylor sang a solo and Jim Watson gave "The Flag is Passing By" the school sang "The Flag and the Song of Peace."

The junior pupils gave an action chorus entitled "The Orchestra," and Doris Pollock recited "I'm England."

Another recitation "The Children's Gift," was given and the juniors rendered "A Flag Exercise."

Miss Grayson, teacher, then recited "My Duty to Our Flag" and the school sang "O Canada."

A patriotic exercise and drill entitled "Canada East and West" was well portrayed by eleven boys. A pageant "The British Empire" proved of interest.

Rev. Roy H. Rickard, Colbourne, was present and gave an interesting address on "The British Empire" and urged all to have courage within their hearts a love for all nations and all peoples. He also rendered a vocal solo "There is a Land."

Mr. Rickard also dedicated the "Model Peace Chart" and offered a prize for prayer for better understanding of all nations. This chart has been highly prized and will hang on the walls of the class room.

The service closed with "Salute to the Flag" and "God Save the King."

The pupils of S. S. No. 7, Fourth Line school opened Friday afternoon to a combined "Peace and Patriotic programme" in charge of their teacher, Mrs. M. Hayton.

Several of the pupils gave readings pertaining to Empire Day and also selections on the theme of Peace. The school rendered a number of choruses most appropriate to the afternoon programme.

The main feature was a "Radio Broadcast" with each child representing a country and broadcasting a message.

During the afternoon the children spent a short period in art when the Peace Flag" was drawn as their model. A chart of the British Empire was also used and studied. The composition period on Friday was based on "Gratitude to Children of Another Country" and as the pupils of this school have been very interested in Japan it was to them that they wrote Christmas greetings and two were forwarded to Toronto. During the year the children of this school have sent two portfolios to Japan and received one in return so they are naturally interested in Japanese children.

This goodwill and patriotic programme proved very interesting.

Mr. Arthur Overy, Toronto, a representative of the Upper Canada Bible Society had charge of the service at Mount Pleasant Sunday evening and chose as his theme "The Message of God to the World in Christ" He ala, delighted with

The Missing Man

by

Mary R. P. Hatch

Mr. Bruce took the book and read with not unattractive accent:

How shall the ritual then be read?
—the requiem how be sung?
By you, by yours, the evil eye:
By yours the slanderous tongue
That did to death the innocent
That died, and died so young.

Two's verse is very melodious, but that is one of his poorest poems still it might have touched your husband's mind. Did he take many notes when he went away?"

"No, very few, and he took none of the children's wants, and pretended to bring them what they asked for."

"Do you think he visited the bank the twenty-second?"

"That I do not know. Mr. Osborn says he did; but if so, it seems as if he would have come home, even if obliged to go away directly."

"What sort of a young man is his Osborn?"

"A most respectable young man, of a good family and careful bringing up."

"Given to pleasure, like fine horses, fine company, and the like?"

"Doubtless he does. Most young men do; but Tony Osborn is hardly one not dissipated."

"Glad to hear it. So many young men are."

After a few more questions, Mr. Bruce took his leave, assuring Mrs. Hamilton that, without doubt, things would be got of her husband' affairs hung.

Then he went straight to the Union House to learn what he could about the strange lady who had spoken to Mr. Hamilton on the street, for he had heard the meeting commented upon.

CHAPTER IV.

DISCLOSURES

Mr. Bruce, the detective, met with no difficulties in learning what he wished to know regarding Miss Anderson, of New Jersey, who, it appeared, by some unaccountable freak of nature, had been given emerald hair as a head covering, and stranger yet, in spite of this, was a beautiful woman. Mr. Bruce for reason of his own, chose to go to Miss Talbert for information, and was amply rewarded. He was told in as few words as possible all that was known about the strange lady. Finally, Miss Talbert, asking to be excused for a moment, left the room and returned immediately with a fine, hemstitched handkerchief with an intricate embroidered design in the corner.

"And what may that be?" asked the puzzled detective. "Her handkerchief?"

"Yes, she dropped it in the hall as she went out. One of the girls saw it drop and called to her, but she did not hear."

Mr. Bruce looked helplessly at the design.

"I wish her name was here," he said.

"Why, it is. It is there quite plain. All those leaves and scrolls are but embellishments to the name."

"What is the name? It is Hebrew to me."

"Mary."

"Are you sure?"

"Yes, quite sure," replied Miss Talbert.

"Then," thought the detective, "the woman is not likely to be Lenore, and Mrs. Hamilton may be right. Poe's poems are haunting, certainly; but somehow I felt as if this woman was the Lenore of his dream."

"Perhaps you had better say nothing about my inquiries," he said to Miss Talbert upon leaving.

"Very well. I will remember your caution," she answered, and she watched him with some curiosity as he went down the street and turned the corner. "He is going to the bank," she thought; and she was right.

Arrived there, he found that the business being carried on was all of an inward nature. Practically it had been suspended for nearly a week, and now affairs had taken a livelier gait under the examination of Bank Commissioner Winch, who arrived the day previous. He was very busy, but stopped to talk with Mr. Bruce when he learned his errand.

He said the pass-books had been combed by rapidity, and four hundred out of six hundred had been examined and found correct. Agents were out collecting the others, and hurrying them in as rapidly as possible. The directors of the savings bank were busy in straightening out matters, and it would be impossible to remove the injunction for a week or two.

"Does it appear that Mr. Hamilton has fled with the funds?" asked the detective.

"There has been strange work, strange work," said the commissioner. "Up to a late date everything seems to have gone all right; but since then affairs have taken on a different aspect."

"Since when?"

"Since the twenty-eighth of May, and perhaps before that day."

"Did he take money with him?"

"No, he presented an Being cashier and treasurer as well, he had the right to take charge of all deposits, notes and cash. Young Osborn says he took a lot of stuff, as he called it, to the deposit vault in Boston. We have just heard from some of the stuff, Mr. Bruce. You may as well know it now as later."

"What do you mean, Mr. Winch?"

"Simply this: It developed this morning that previous to the twenty-eighth of May, Hamilton allowed a note payable to this bank making the amount five thousand instead of five hundred, and depositing the note with the First National Bank of Boston, as collateral for money. Whether he has done so in more than this instance it is impossible to say."

The commissioner faced about for this statement and scanned the countenance of the detective as if for confirmation of the grave state of affairs.

"Many such notes?" asked Bruce.

"Lots," said the commissioner, briefly.

"What does Osborn say?" asked the detective after a pause.

"Looks sober and says he doesn't know what to think about it. He professes to think there must be some mistake. Still he affirms, and it rests on his word alone, it seems, that he saw Hamilton enter the door on the twenty-second; and he says that it may turn out the note was taken from Hamilton, altered, and presented at the bank by some one, professing to be Hamilton himself."

"Such things are done, but not in a bright, wide-awake banking house like this."

"Well, the directors are in a terrible state of excitement. With other notes sowed broadcast over the country it is not to be wondered at."

"Of course Hamilton's bondsmen will settle."

"Yes, they have signified their readiness to settle. Mr. Carter, and Henderson, too, say they believe that dark as it looks, the matter will clear up."

"There must be a foul conspiracy back of it, then," said the detective. "Looked at in one way, it is as clear a case of dishonesty as I ever knew. Still," recollecting himself, "a new phase of the matter may arise any moment. Anything look like complicity on the part of Osborn?"

"No; the president found a letter under his door this morning, without any postmark. It relates to Osborn, I believe."

"From Hamilton?" asked the detective with alert gaze.

The commissioner nodded. "It purports to be. I can't tell you what was in it, though. The contents have not been made public except that it exonerates Osborn of any complicity in the matter of which he might be suspected."

"A confession, then, almost, of crime on Hamilton's part?"

"No. It is a guarded letter. You will have to ask the president about it to know more. Perhaps he can tell you; I can't."

Bruce went directly to the president's house, found him alone, and stated his errand. The president showed him the letter at once.

"I found it in the hall this morning just inside the door, where some one must have thrust it last night. There is no postmark, you see."

It was a plain envelope with a type-written address to C. W. Hastings, President, Savings Bank, Grovedale, N.H. The letter ran:

Mr. Hastings: You are no doubt afraid that the savings bank funds are stolen, but such is not the case as far as I know. If on making such examination as you desire, you find deposits not credited in the bank books, you may rest assured if I failed to make the entry it was a mistake, and if others have done it I know nothing about it. As for Osborn he is as honest as the day. I am unable to return at present, but shall do so as soon as I can. Show this letter to my wife.

THE TARZAN TWINS

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As the mad elephant rose upright, Tarzan clung desperately to that rough, mottled skin, but Oudah shook violently and Tarzan slid off. Oudah whirled. His trunk struck Tarzan a heavy blow. Then the beast raised a giant foot to crush his victim to death!

Baadu, the cannibal warrior, watching from the distant jungle, saw Gudah, the Terrible raise his foot. He saw that foot descend, and he heard the elephant's wild cry of triumph. That was enough for Baadu. He concluded that the unconquerable Gudah had claimed another.

Baadu knew well the sensational climax of tree drama which had been played so often in the Vale of Death, and he need not see it again. He was more anxious to bear the joyous news to Galla Galla, his chief; for Baadu expected a suitable reward for his encrgment of Tarzan.

With gloating delight, Baadu coursed homeward through the forest. His hastening footsteps beat out a threbbing rhythm on the jungle trail, and in time with his footsteps he mumbled: "Tarzan is dead; Gudah killed him! Tarzan is dead; Gudah killed him."

Giants Taken For Double Loss by Festering Bees

(By Sid Feder)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

For a club that's supposed to be limping with injuries, packed with doddering old men and due also to blow sky-high before long, the revival of "Murderers Row" certainly how doesn't fit into the rest of the New York Yankee picture this season.

The power they've shown since the start of the campaign, which has them riding two-and-a-half games in front of the American League pack as a result of their just-concluded "crucial" series with Boston Red Sox, has the experts guessing—and wondering how long it can last.

The series with the Sox, which they lost two games to one after taking yesterday's dizzy finale 10-6 was only marked a continuance of the return of the batting bey-day of Ruth and company, but moreover definite traces of brass on the gold-plated Boston roster—particularly among the pitching department.

For, of seven pitchers tossed in against the Yankee bats, only Wes Ferrell in the opening game was able to check the bombardment.

Giants Lose Lead

While the Yanks were stretching their American League lead, their New York neighbors, the Giants, lost their one-day option on the National League first place by bowing out to Boston Bees in a doubleheader, 4-3 and 8-4. The Gothamite, although losing out 7-3 to Jim Weaver's tight pitching for the third place Pittsburg Pirates, retained the lead unchanged.

Behind the Giants, the Cubs held fourth place by an 11-3 win over Cincinnati Reds in a battle featured by two fist-throwing episodes at home plate, while the Dodgers climbed out of the League cellar with a staggering 13-10 conquest in the Phillies' debut.

In the American League, meantime, the world's champion Detroit Tigers sank into fourth place when the Chicago White Sox trounced four hits in the ninth for a 6-5 triumph; Cleveland took third with a 4-3 win over the St. Louis Browns, chiefly on Odell Hale's homer with the bases loaded, and the Athletics gained an even break with the Senators by taking the opener of a doubleheader 4-3 before dropping the nightcap 5-0.

AMERICAN TENNIS STAR IS ON SPOT

Davis Cup Series Opens in Philadelphia Saturday

By BOB CAVAGNARO

Associated Press Sports Writer

Philadelphia, May 29.—(AP)—Cecil Mahe, cocky California blond, probably will find himself the most important American figure on the scene when the United States and Australian Davis Cup tennis teams open their three-day series at the Germantown Cricket Club tomorrow.

Deep thinkers of the racquet pastime are generally of the opinion that the doubles match will decide this American zone final.

Mahe and his fellow Californian, red headed Don Budge, undoubtedly will oppose Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist, Australia's ace doubled duo of the tandem battle.

Knowing Budge's proficiency with the stringed weapon, Crawford and Quist naturally are expected to concentrate on Mahe. For that reason Mahe now is regarded as one of the biggest question marks ever to stroll forth on this historic turf.

If Mahe can hold his practice form against the Australians he and Budge are given a 50-50 chance of winning.

The series will open tomorrow with singles.

HOGAN IS SIGNED

Newark Bears Lose Lead When Defeated By Orioles

By The Associated Press

The clubs in the International League which haven't been able to crack the Newark-Buffalo monopoly on the lead, that includes the other six, in hopeful—have begun a new series of efforts to bring about improvement by means of player trades.

There has been dickering from time to time ever since the season started but a fresh outburst of trading has come within the past few days with Baltimore Orioles, second division leaders, figuring in most of it. In the last couple of days the Orioles have secured Les Powers, first baseman, from Newark on option and Henry Oana from Syracuse in a straight trade for shortstop Kath Molesworth.

Albany Senators, shy on catchers because of Major League demands, signed up J. Francis (Shanty) Hogan, son of the largest and loudest backstops on record. Further developments in the trading business are expected from Toronto's Maple Leafs, boss of 16 of their last 19 games. In the near future, Cliff Oakley, club president, admitted last night several changes could be expected and that he probably would have further information to announce at Buffalo tonight.

Bears Drop Lead

With their revised lineup, the Orioles went out yesterday and belted over a 9 to 3 decision over Newark to drop the Bears out of the league lead. As the Toronto-Buffalo and Albany-Syracuse games were postponed because of cold weather, the Bees put Newark a half game below Buffalo. The fourth-place Montreal Royals remained ahead of Rochester Red Wings by a scant Rochester Red Wings 9 to 8 in a night game.

The two newcomers at Baltimore Powers and Oana, contributed a home run apiece to the Orioles' victory. Powers added a pair of singles and Woody Abernathy also hit for the circuit, while Molesworth, lanky Orioles elbower, held the Bears to eight hits. But Rochester errors and Montreal's eleven hits off three pitchers enabled the Royals to come through and score eight of their runs in the last three innings.

Inclement Weather is Disrupting Schedule

By The Canadian Press

Inclement weather is disrupting the Can.-American baseball schedule. Last night the Rochester game against Watertown was postponed by cold and Wednesday night rain washed out the Fredericton-Saint John fixture.

The result was only two scores to put on the records today. At Ottawa Norman Ribbs pitched Perth to a 6-3 victory over Ottawa Senators and in Ogdensburg, Oswego took the homespun for a 5-3 ride. Ribbs allowed only three hits while his mates caught the slants of Cliff Johnson for 11. It was bad ball weather. Cold handicapped players and spectators alike but in spite of this there were only three errors.

Brosseau and Robell who shared the mound duty for Ogdensburg were wild. They allowed 10 hits and frequent pauses while Crisan held the opposition to five.

British Amateur Golf Down to Semi-Finals

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 29.—(CP Cable)—Hector Thomson continued his advance in the British Amateur Golf Tournament, today, moving with three others into the semi-final round of the championship.

Thomson eliminated Gordon Peters, West Scotland player, 1 and 0. Another semi-final entrant this morning over the historic Royal and Ancient course, James Ferrier, the Australian champion, also moved into the semi-final round, downing Morton Dykes 2 and 3. Ferrier ousted Robert Sweeny yesterday, a day after the young American-born player had won out over Mick McLean.

Cecil Ewing, only Irish survivor in the quarter-finals, defeated D.H.R. Martin 2 and 1.

G. Alec Hill eliminated Cyril Tolley after a sing-along battle, which ended on the 19th hole.

IT'S ROUGH BUT IT'S ALL GOOD CLEAN FUN

'Tis fun playing Gaelic football but the players in this game which saw a scoring Carson County Ireland) team pitted against a selected squad from Gotham, seem to be taking it very seriously. McGoldrick, of the New Yorkers, has just received a shove from I. Blessing from the Ould Sod, which made him drop the ball. But that was just a minor incident in the fracas. New York and the Cavan "shoys" ended up tied, nine-all. The game was played at Yankee stadium.

McQUINN, HANDLEY RETURN TO LEAFS

Players Will Give Added Punch to Attack of Team

Toronto, May 29—(CP)—Manager Ike Boone says happier days ahead for his Toronto Maple Leafs today. Through a player transaction the International League Club has acquired George McQuinn and Lee Handley, two clever young infielders in return Cincinnati Reds recalled Les Scarsella, hard-hitting first baseman.

In an effort to strengthen his club as they walloped dangerously near the bottom of the heap, Boone welcomed the deal. He regretted Scarsella's departure but figured the new players would give Leafs the added punch necessary to get out of the rut.

Scarsella left last night to join Cincinnati in the National League while Boone expected McQuinn, a first-baseman, and Handley, a third-baseman, to join the Toronto Club in Buffalo today. When previously with Leafs, the two new players were ranked among the best infielders in the League. Both players have performed frequently with Reds this year and Handley boasts a .330 batting average.

K-Y SOFTBALL

The Juvenile section of the local Ki-Y Softball League swung into action last evening with two well played games. The Roughriders staged a last inning rally to score seven runs and nose out the Aces 11 to 10, while the Pirates defeated Christ Church 18 to 8.

At Queen Victoria School grounds the Aces assumed an early game lead over the Roughriders, but living up to their name the latter rode rough-shod over the Aces with a final inning rally that resulted in a one run victory for the "Riders", who only allowed the Aces two tallies after the second inning.

At Queen Alexandra School grounds, however, the Pirates kept adding to a six-run lead gained in the initial frame until they amassed 18 big runs, while the Christ Church nine could only push five counters across home plate. Dodd Kit-Kat Kintzes sizzled a large gallery of appreciative spectators.

The line-ups—Roughriders—Warren, Mully, Peela, McMillan, Mc-Carson, Ling, Sherry and Peoples. Aces—Adams, Schrack, Century, J. Stona, Logie, Gariepy, McBride, Mitchell, W. Stona.

Score by innings:—

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

While in the vicinity of St. Michael's Academy the other day during the recess period, we naturally stopped long enough to take a gander at the kids playing "scrub". Over around first base we saw a little gaffer wearing a fielder's mitt on his left hand, which led us to believe the youngster was naturally right-handed. Suddenly we saw him throw the ball, after he had caught it, with his gloved hand. Taking closer observations we discovered the youngster would catch the ball in the gloved-hand and without removing the glove, the queer part of his deliveries was the fact that when he tossed the ball to an infielder he would toss it under-hand and with his bare right hand, but when he threw the ball for distance or speed, he used his left hand and fielded even as much as covering the mitt. The lad seems quite versatile and goes about his ball duties with gusto, even if his technique is unique. Although this lad experiences little difficulty in throwing the ball from his gloved left-hand, we do not recommend it as being good practice for the general run of teen-aged players, however.

Is the South Hastings Baseball League detesting its own purpose?

X X X

This question was recently brought up by some of those who originally were instrumental in launching this splendid rural loop. "In the first instance the league was formed to give the boys and lads residing in the villages, and to encompass the league, a chance to play a little baseball and also to give the villagers and farmers from the surrounding area a little recreation of their own," stated one official today.

X X X

"We had a good little league and our own boys were enjoying themselves. The country-folk around Foxboro, Shannonville, Madoc, Latta and Canniton turned out splendidly to witness the games and till we were drawing perhaps larger crowds than senior baseball was in Belleville, did the league succeed then? Some of the clubs began to import players from mid-league towns and more particularly Belleville. What I'm thinking is that eventually those imports are going to be the ruination of our league. After all the league was originally formed in order to give our own lads a chance to play a little baseball, but when imports are brought in, well, then our own boys have to be dropped from the line-up and therefore we are killing the local interest that has built up the league to its present status," added the official.

X X X

There is much to what the South Hastings League official says. The best blame local players for catching on with teams in the South Hastings League if they like to play baseball sufficiently well to get out of their way to join teams not in the county. On the other hand the officials of the South Hastings League is only building up for a larger-sized and heavy let-down by permitting the wholesale importation of players into their league. The C. O. B. I. and other amateur baseball leagues have suffered from the self-same thing from the "importation bug," a parasite that eventually takes a drastic toll.

Gayly decorated and in splendid surroundings the new dance pavilion at the Belleville Arena Gardens will be opened on Saturday night with the Commodore Orchestra in attendance. A fine polished floor with evergreens and streamers for decorations, as well as special lighting effects makes the Arena Gardens dance pavilion the last spot to dance and enjoy an evening's recreation. Dancing will continue throughout the summer months at the Arena Gardens.

Jimmie Stewart, the aspiring bobber next to Belleville by A. A. Elliott on Wednesday for a try-out with the Belleville Senators, Inspector and Manager Alex Weir to the point, that he invited young Stewart down to practice this evening and may sign him for tomorrow's game in Peterboro. "Stewart was certainly pick up ground balls on either side of him with ease, if he can hit senior pitching he will surely catch on and will doubtless prove a decided asset to our club," predicted Manager Weir today. Coach Ray Fez would not state definitely which pitcher he was grooming for Saturday's C. O. B. I. game in Peterboro, St. Louis is ready to return to the mah after Monday's game, while both Johnnie Harden and Ernie Smith are eager to face the Petes, added the head coach-agement this afternoon. The locals expect to face Whitehill, brother of Red Ruffing, Whitehill of the Washington Senators, a portsider.

When the local interscholastic athletes journey to Napanee for the district senior double track and field meet next month, the St. Michael's Academy team will be minus the services of Jack Wilson, who won the district sprints last year at Kingston. Jack, one of the ablest athletes at the Academy, has been confined to his home through illness which will make it impossible to participate in sport for sometime. He was an interested spectator at the Academy Field Day sports on Thursday, Lost athletes from the B.C.I. and V.S., O.E.T., and St. Mike's will compete at the district interscholastic athletic meet at Napanee on June 6th. The Collegiate will conduct their annual field day next Thursday.

Walt Gerow and Ernie Gilbard are finding the going a little tougher than they expected for their Napanee squad in the C.O.B. I. Lack of hitting power, especially in the pinches, when the base paths are populated, has cost the Gilbards both games to date. Why Skipper Gerow does not give Tommy Fairfield, his crack catchman, to hurl against the more weaker clubs makes sense.

X X X

While comparing Ken "Jake" Biddle's no run no hitter of Monday last in Cobalt, the Peterboro sport scribe dips his pen in poison to pass on the following informative item out of the pale: "Speaking of no-hit games in the C.O.B.I., we are told this a.m. of some pretty fair chucking done by one Jack Williams in the loop playoffs between Belleville and the Petes back in '22. The first game was in the Quinte town and saw Mister Williams throw a no-hit 3-0 shutout as he fanned 18. That was a Wednesday. He came back Saturday here and allowed three hits and shutout the locals again by a 2-0 score, fanning eight. The third tilt was in Oshawa and ended 13-0 for the Chief as he was nicked for the grand total of two hits whilst fanning 13! When Lefty Biddle pulls off a stunt like this in the Central League, he can be compared with the all-time hitting greats of the loop. Otherwise, he may be little more than a flash in the pan and somehow we don't believe so."

X X X

That's all very fine but did the Peterboro and Oshawa boys ever hear of the pitching feat accomplished by one Freddy "Lefty" Goyer, also while pitching for Belleville? Freddie struck out 21 Toronto Cubs batters in a three game series in 1918, during which he pitched two two hitters in succession. We also have reasons to believe that Fred Goyer still holds the league record for strike-outs, something like 34 strike-outs during a league fixture. Yes, we had some good pitchers in years gone by in these har hills.

X X X

Harry Moore, sports columnist of the Trenton Courier-Advocate, has apparently become basketball-minded. Harry attended C.O.B.I. games in Belleville and Napanee on the holiday and succeeded in the fact that Trenton ball players are gracing Belleville and Napanee uniforms. Harry says championship pennants are today more necessary in Napanee than in Belleville, but apparently Harry can't figure any too high. You see Harry, old topper, Belleville seniors alone, disregarding Junior and Intermediate clubs who have won diamond honors, have annexed seven C.O.B.I. pennants and two senior O.B.A.A. Cups, a record no team in the easiest part of the province can boast of, with the possible exception of Peterboro in the minor series.

CHARGES ANN HARDING ABDUCTED THEIR CHILD

FULL CONTROL OF TRENT RIVER IS GIVEN PROVINCE

Power Development Will Assure Eastern Ontario Reduced Charges

BACK TO NIAGARA

Continuous Power at Queenston Will be Developed

Toronto, May 30 (CP)—Ratification with the Dominion so to rights on the Trent River and Welland Canal "happily and satisfactorily settled", Ontario went on today with its program of power development, while those in the eastern part of the province were assured of reduced charges.

Ontario has obtained full control of the Trent River at reduced cost, and the Dominion government's charges for water for the Welland Canal for use at Deep Falls are cut in two, Attorney-General Roebuck announced yesterday following his return from a conference with federal officials at Ottawa.

"The full control of the Trent River at reduced cost and with added power will result in lower charges and additional service to the users of the eastern district," he said. The reduction of water charges was a vital element in the Hydro Commission's program of Niagara development.

LEADS ONTARIO CONSERVATIVE PARTY

HON. H. A. M. ROWE

Here is a studio portrait of Hon. Earl Rowe, newly-elected leader of the Ontario Conservative party.

Can Handle Shortages.

"The Commission has plans for the development of contingent power as a measure to meet shortages, if new water is started to completion, will supply the steady demand of the present, will be ample for years and the further development basin capacity at Deep Falls and Niagara available, some time in the future, the furnishing of an additional 100,000 horsepower to handle short periods of daily demand.

"This settlement agreement is a major step in the Commission's policy of "back to Niagara", he said, speaking of the importance of possibilities of building a great reservoir at Ottawa Lake.

The dispute between the two governments reached a head at the point where the Ontario Commission had refused all payments for water rights, both on the Welland Canal and the Trent River. It was explained.

The "all-Canadian settlement," he said, the Dominion government recognizes the undisputed right to the amount it has been paying for Hydro services, and has agreed on the dispute by agreeing to pay an additional $250,000.

The Attorney General also spoke of possibilities of developing power in Northern Ontario, but the realization of such plans were not under consideration now, as the possibilities of development there was in the remote future.

KING CRITICIZES MILITARY NOTE IN BENNETT'S SPEECH

Suggests He Struck a "Jingoistic Note' in Advocating Military Preparation

BETTER UNDERSTANDING

Believes Foreign Problems Could be Solved by Promoting Friendly Relationship

Ottawa, May 30 (CP)—The coast national convention of the Twentieth Century Liberal Association today will hear an address by Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of Defence, after listening last night to a speech by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, urging, among other things, efforts by Canada to promote international understanding.

He expressed the conviction that Conservative leader R. B. Bennett had attended the London, Oct., conference ago the gravity of some present day tendencies in Europe.

Nevertheless, he interpreted Mr. Bennett in his speech at London struck a "jingoistic note" in proclaiming that Canada should be ready to defend itself by military measures from possible aggression.

He claimed the effective and wise way for Canada to further her problems was to seek means of promoting understanding between Britain and other countries. In these connections he recalled the negotiations by the previous Liberal government of Canadian ministers to Washington, Paris and Tokyo.

Deals With Unemployment.

The Prime Minister dealt with the unemployment situation and the Government's help in the outlook.

"Canada, But, he suggested, the dual spectre of a past war coupled with unemployment problems left by during shadow over the lives of citizens greater than any of the nations who had not known war and its ravages.

He declared there was no single solution to these problems but that all helpful agencies must unite. Such solutions were to be found. He said he felt no better service could be rendered than to set the stage on the right path in a political party determined to do right.

"Liberalism," he said, "is a living thing which can be destroyed only when you destroy the love of freedom in the human heart." He contrasted the Liberal attitude with that of Communism, Fascism, Italy and Russia where, he said, the individual existed to serve the state. He urged Canadians to do their utmost to defeat these views wherever they encountered them.

Actress and Child at Sea, Ex-Husband Takes Step To Regain Possession

Famous Screen Star Slips Away on Earlier Liner

PURSUIT BY PLANE

Ann Harding on Way to England For Screen Contract

Quebec, May 30—(CP)— Harry Bannister, former husband of Ann Harding, swore out a warrant today for the arrest of his stage and screen star on a charge of abducting their daughter, eight-year-old Jane.

The charge was laid under Section 316 of The Criminal Code regarding abduction of a child under 16 years of age. It was laid at the police court office where Bannister appeared with his lawyer shortly before the noon hour.

The tall grayhaired husband of the actress who followed her by plane from New York yesterday after she had made known her plans, to sail on the Empress of Australia this afternoon, ignored newspapermen as he walked from the police court office. He was followed by his lawyer, he was sought by reporters all morning without success until discovered at the court three hours after they left their hotel suites.

Miss Ann Tahse Warrant.

An officer with the warrant left the court house immediately, followed by reporters. It had been rumored all morning that Miss Harding and her actress had left Quebec aboard the liner Duchess of Atholl as announced late night by her lawyer who said he had "cancelled Miss Harding to change her plans and go on to Hollywood."

"Instead," he said, "I cancel her to sail on the Duchess of Atholl, which left Quebec early last evening. She phoned her and the officers aboard the ship have been told as it passed Quebec on its way from Montreal. She did that because she feared there might be some delay through police action taken by Mr. Bannister to prevent her from sailing to England where she has a moving picture contract.

Beaulieu Is Conference.

Beaulieu, Que., Bannister immediately went into conference to discuss plans for serving the warrant. Earlier they had visited the liner Empress of Australia, upon which persons the opinion that Mrs. Harding had not sailed on the Atholl. Bannister said he has real, what he would do next can say is, however," he told newspapermen, "I have not cancelled my booking on the Australia. I don't say definitely that I am going. But certainly I have not cancelled my reservation."

Pursuit Plane.

Quebec, May 30.—(CP)—Harry Bannister was undecided today if he would continue his pursuit of his former wife, Ann Harding, across the Atlantic Ocean.

The Quebec newspaperman waited today in his hotel, pending advice from his attorneys on whether he would charge Miss Harding. He started in New York yesterday, 15 hours ahead of the liner on which she would board the liner Empress of Australia, due to sail from Quebec at three o'clock this afternoon, 18 hours after Miss Harding and her seven year old daughter, Jane.

boarded the liner Duchess of Atholl from a tender in midstream.

"WAN" Yer Alone.

"I haven't decided on my plans yet," he said. "I'm waiting for my attorneys to make some decision probably this afternoon."

So far, he said, he had not cancelled his reservations on the Australia on which the plane and screen star was due to sail with her party until she learned her husband was flying after her from New York.

Then she and her lawyers sprung a surprise. They changed their booking to the Atholl leaving Quebec late night from Montreal.

GIGANTIC LINERS PASS ON OCEAN

But Rivals for Speed "Coal Do Not Sight Each Other

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aboard R.M.S. Queen Mary, en route to New York, May 30.—(CP)—The British liner Queen Mary today broke the record of the French Ship Normandie for mileage in a full day's westward run across the Atlantic Ocean.

The Queen Mary's officers announced she had covered 766 miles in the 25 hours between Friday at noon and today at noon (Ship's time).

Normandie's record was 758 miles but she covered it in a short day of 24 hours, two minutes, last June. The French liner therefore still leads in average speed per hour.

The British giant of the seas averaged 30.67 miles per hour during her record run. The Normandie's average speed for the slightly shorter time was 31.27 knots.

Queen Mary and Normandie passed on the high seas today with an exchange of wireless greetings.

The two giant liners did not sight each other.

"Everything is going according to the plan," said Sir Edgar Britten, captain of the British liner. "Our results far exceed expectations.

"We are not out to show off or aim at fantastic records."

Lapp and his wife, Grace, who has admitted she was a "Colonel" in the Women's Auxiliary of the Black Legion, left their summer cottage near Algonac yesterday, investigators said, and have not appeared at their home here.

"They didn't say where they were going," Mrs. Lapp's father, Fred Reeves, told detectives at Algonac. "I don't think they were going to Detroit though."

Also sought for questioning is Jack White, one-legged former Detroit policeman, Ricca said a Black Legion leader known as "Peg-leg" has been mentioned in at least three phases of the inquiry.

PREMIER WARNS ATHEISM IS FOE

Rt. Hon. W. L. M. King Tells Young Liberals of Propaganda

Ottawa, May 30.—Sinister influences in Europe which seek to destroy the Christian religion and liberty and to undermine and destroy Canada's democratic way of life must not be allowed to gain a foothold in Canada, Liberal Leader Mackenzie King told a great audience here last night.

His far as it is in the power of the Government to do so, Canada will be kept sacred from such endeavour," he declared.

Gratification that Opposition Leader R. B. Bennett had stressed the gravity of some present day tendencies in his recent speech was voiced by the Liberal Leader. Not only in Canada but in other countries there was a tendency to treat lightly the forces which menaced never be disregarded, he declared, of home, of church, of state training and thought were held too lightly. In some countries of Europe there was a deliberate organized movement on foot to destroy the very foundations of human society.

Russia he was informed in recent letters, was calling a "convention of the godless," during which it was planned to put on the radio broadcasts aimed at destruction of many of the sacred things of life.

Propaganda was to bear sacrilegious and blasphemous things in every letter met with Scots galore. "The Scots of this province and the Canadian Prairie lands seem to be a Scotch people," he declares.

The author's Scottish star and brain glow with renewed fervor when he reaches the Maritimes.

"This is indeed an annex of Scotland," he writes of Nova Scotia.

"The people I met there are ready to discuss theology by the hour, as the church spires attest. The 'Old Religion' was taken there by Highland families of Jacobite clans. Its hold is still firm. Its authority is like a post-war dictatorship,

Sixty-Three Writers Aboard Queen Mary

On board H.M.S. Queen Mary, en route to New York, May 30.—(CP)—Sixty-three writers are aboard and wireless facilities are being used extensively.

British and American writers comprise the party, which is likely to be augmented by writers from other countries, including Canada. In addition the Queen Mary has a full list of passengers, but a dozen countries, and British, Canadian, American and Norwegian and Danish announcers are on board.

A liaison officer attached to the purser's staff is on hand to co-operate with newspapermen, but the bulk of the news is obtained from the ordinary bulletin boards, and in exploratory journeys around the huge vessel. One can always find new stations to visit. There is no lack of variety.

Never was a ship so deluged with wireless greetings, and the Queen Mary's modern equipment is quite unable to handle ordinary messages except at certain periods, as high as 20 hours. But now the corps of operators is catching up, and delays are smaller.

"Hideout" Bungalow for McMullen's Use Uncovered

Wife of Gunman Unaware of Husband's Real Identity

Vancouver, May 30 (CP)—While Edward McMullen lay in a Seattle hospital fighting for a life he may lose later on the gallows, British Columbia police announced today they had uncovered a mysterious property in a man and woman who gave the name of Manson and said they had driven here from Ontario.

(City police revealed they had received information from Ontario police that McMullen was going under the name of Manson.)

The new tenants had paid their first rent with three $10 Bank of Montreal bills.

In the house, police discovered numerous newspaper clippings and papers partially burned. A business card was found bearing the words "Peter Golf Game—Edward A. McMullen, agent."

Found Receipt Book.

They found a maintenance receipt book made out in the name of Mary J. McMullen, the name he gave to immigration officials at Blaine as that of his wife before he left on the run and shortly after his futile attempt to flee.

On the floor of one of the rooms officers found a Vancouver newspaper with the headline "Red Ryan's Henchmen," "Red" Ryan had apparently intended as a personal souvenir.

The Burnaby hideout, a five-room cottage, is surrounded by a security fence and shrubbery. Police say the hiding place of Constable John Lyall of Burnaby.

Vancouver police revealed they had interviewed Mrs. McMullen after she had been released here after questioning several that up to the time of the shooting she was unaware of her husband's real identity.

Near-by police officers said, Mrs. McMullen announced her intention of going to Seattle to visit her husband. Police, however, said she had not crossed the border yet and believed her still in Vancouver.

ANGLICAN ART AUTHORITY DIES

Rev. Percy Dearmer Claimed His Originated Unknown Soldier Burial Idea

London, May 30 (CP)—Rev. Percy Dearmer, who claimed to be the originator of the idea of burying an unknown soldier in Westminster Abbey, died suddenly last night.

He is generally believed, however, that this commemoration of the dead more than one mind.

Dearmer, 68 years old. He was considered one of the greatest Anglican authorities on art and music in relation to church worship and practice. His efforts were particularly directed to a revival of the Catholic that they had strayed considerably from primitive usage in much of their present-day ceremonial.

He performed highly valuable work as joint editor first of the English hymnal and later of songs of praise.

Dearmer had been canon of Westminster since 1931 and professor of sacred theology at King's College, London, since 1919. He was widely travelled. In 1915, during the war, he was chaplain to the British Red Cross in Serbia. In 1918 he was on a mission of help to India. He returned in India, Japan and the United States between 1917 and 1919.

Dearmer edited or wrote many books on ecclesiastical and other subjects. They included the 1928 edition history of the English church, a popular collection of the prayer book, "Art and Religion", a Shore Hand-book of Public Worship", "Christianity and the Crisis", published in 1933).

'Leave to History and Ghosts Places of Primitive Deeds'

Memories of MacDonald Show Nova Scotia Scottish Annex

GODS AT NIAGARA

(By Thomas T. Champion)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 30.—(CP Cable)—Stanley MacDonald offers a host of pleasant impressions of Canada as a book of essays. "At Home and Abroad," published today, "the critical embraces more or less informal wanderings in Canada, Newfoundland, England, Ceylon and Algeria, which half are concerned with Canada.

These wanderings obviously happened over some years back, the impressions appear to have been set down there and then. Now a former Prime Minister's ruminations on the scene of the Plains of Wolfe and Montcalm were a trifle disturbing.

Niagara Approach Ugly

"Why do men smooth and trim the places, where great primitive deeds were done," he said. "It is hard in live through that morning of wild alarm and mad assault upon unsoda and trim grass, to see that tall, lank figure arrayed in all the finery of his command, Major Nelson at Trafalgar.

"There are places where, hags like of first ought not to be built and street laid out but which should be left to history and ghosts."

MacDonald is also regretful over the approach to Niagara, with ugly, dusty, dirty, smoky erections on the United States side," Niagara itself he describes as an emotion of deep stupendous.

Thunder and Lighting.

"What is the use of recounting its material dimensions," he asks. "It is a thing to drive one back like thunder and lightning to those tremors, which man strives to calm by putting gods into the heavens".

Of course the tourist cannot enter met with Scots galore. "The Scots of this province and the Canadian Prairie lands seem to be a Scotch people," he declares.

The author's Scottish star and brain glow with renewed fervor when he reaches the Maritimes.

"This is indeed an annex of Scotland," he writes of Nova Scotia.

"The people I met there are ready to discuss theology by the hour, as the church spires attest. The 'Old Religion' was taken there by Highland families of Jacobite clans. Its hold is still firm. Its authority is like a post-war dictatorship,

RATEPAYERS OF THURLOW MEET

Request Made Township That College Street be Hope be Prepared

Ratepayers of Thurlow Township held a second of a series of regular meetings in the Thurlow Public School on Thursday evening, which was marked by an excellent attendance and keen interest in many matters under the control of the Association. The meeting, which was presided over by President W. Means opened with the reading of correspondence which proved to be of great interest to the members present. A letter from Mr. David, President of the Ontario Board of School Trustees and Ratepayers Association of Ingersol and a copy of his address at the convention, which was enjoyed by all. Also a letter from Prof. C. Kirkpatrick, O.M.E.A., who deeply sympathized with the Thurlow Association and admitted, that it was the greatest aid for the development of consumption of surplus products and a benefit to public service to farmers.

Another letter of importance was then read from the Mayor of Belleville, Mr. Wallace C. It was explained by the Chairman to the members, that this city had given their taxpayers a 10 per cent. abatement, as a letter was written to the Mayor asking that it was accomplished.

Short Explains

It was then explained in the letter that the complete story of how Milwaukee reorganized its municipal affairs, and its sources, is contained in Short's book, "The Modern City Government, it was written because of the unlimited knowledge regarding the city's accomplishment.

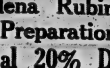
The reply to the memorandum, which was presented to the Hydro Commission, by the Belleville Deputation, Messrs. Weise, Nickle and Turner, was read, explaining what was being done to reduce service charges in rural power districts, and the expectation, that greater use of electricity by the farming community, would enable the Commission to continue reductions, until the service charge entirely disappeared, but this could only be done by greater use of electricity in the rural power districts.

A letter of sincere thanks, and heartfelt appreciation, for the generous co-operation and interest shown by the Thurlow Rifle Dr. Faulkner was read. Also one from the Town Clerk pleading their co-operation with the Association, which was greatly appreciated by the members.

Moved by Mr. Gray, seconded by Mr. Jenkins, that the Association be asked to repair East College St., to the Abbey—Carrier.

Considerable discussion centred around this matter for the impassable and disgraceful condition this road was in and that it should be seen into at once.

The Secretary then read the report of the meeting held to ask the number of residents on College Hill.



The meetings closed by a few remarks by the Chairman, in thanking all concerned for the fine spirit of co-operation; in accomplishing what has been done by the Association and its members, and the untiring efforts for the benefit of all in the Township.

BROILERS BRING SIXTY CTS. PAIR

Offering of Fowl on Market Heaviest For Some Time

Sprigs of pale-tinted lilac blooms in profusion, and the first offering of the season, contrasted with the ruddier tones of spring vegetables on the Saturday market today, in spite of cold weather, crops are growing fairly well, in the vegetable line, with little change in prices except a slight raise in the tender boxed and potted plants.

Today's offerings of spring fowl were heavier, with broilers paying handsome, selling at an average price of 60 cents the pair. Larger fowl also found ready sale at prices ranging from 70 cents each to $6 and $1. with average pairs held at $1.20 and $1.75 cents. Colder weather was also held responsible for streamlining prices in the egg market. Although the average price ranged from 18 to 18 cents for a few instances, the larger eggs commanded a price of as high as 20 cents. Butter remained about stationary at 21 cents the pound, with prints and rolls in some instances selling at 45 cents.

Tomato plants, due to the demand, following the recent heavy frosts, reached a higher price of $1 per hundred, but little change was noted in other boxed plants that with green onions, at 15 cents for 20 plants. Cauliflower was quoted at 20 cents for the same number.

Potatoes, although scarce, held their own with little marked change, selling at an average price of $2 to $2.30 the bag for registered variety and from $1.40 to $1.80 the 90-pound bag of the common table kind.

On the south side of the market little pigs were again offered in large numbers, ranging in price from $5, $6 and $8 according to size.

Manifold Phases of Education At B.C.I.&V.S. Presented by Students as 'Open Night' Held

Over Three Thousand Visit School, While Classes in Progress

BRILLIANT AFFAIR

Parents Come Away With Truer Insight of Work Being Done

Three thousand citizens went back to school last evening, when they spent several interesting hours seeing behind the doors of daily school life at Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School. The occasion was "Open Night" when scholars and teachers demonstrated to the public the activities, which make up the school year at this institute of learning.

Doors were open at eight o'clock and from then on all is crowded, dark and silent at the school found chaos in progress in each floor as teachers took up the work of the last period of Friday's studies. Visitors wandered from floor to floor and door to door absorbed in the multitude of subjects that comprise the various departments of the school. Academic subjects were a little in the background, however, as the exhibits of vocational and commercial enterprise, laboratory and art rooms captured more of the interest of the work. A typical school scene was in progress throughout the night and the only difference between it and that of an ordinary day was, of course, the three thousand spectators.

Physical Training Interests

First engaging the attention of the visitors was the exhibition of physical training in the gymnasia. Regular gym classes were shown re both girls and boys and the public could see just what is being accomplished for the physical well being of their sons and daughters. The girls' class, under Miss Allen, gymn work by 3A Collegiate ...gymnastics, rhythmic country dance, Field Day practice, all occupied thirty, relay games were played by forty girls. The boys' class demonstrated a march, Miss Eunice Reid gave a tumbling number, basketball technique was shown concluding with a five minute game and badminton was played to determine the winner of the civic championship.

The boys' program opened, of course, with gymn work by 4A Collegiate demonstrating Danish gymnastics, combining and rhythmic work, followed by a period of Field Day activities, 4B nine-thirty twenty-two boys took part in a demonstration of the fundamentals and technique of basketball play, these being applied in a game.

After the crowds had watched the regular work of the class rooms, the program in the auditorium claimed the interest of all, but as the available standing room was soon at a premium, many had to forego the pleasure of this part of the evening's entertainment. The visitors were welcomed by Mr. MacLaurin, principal of the school, and the program opened with selections by the School Band under the direction of Mr. Ross Hunter, following a program that has been made by this group and their program was carried out in finished style.

Fashion Show Presented

Against a summery background, a Fashion Show was presented by the sixty girls of the Vocational Department, who were modelling cotton dresses, which they had made in class. This was followed by a well enacted costume play directed by Miss Banting, the charming Elizabethan costumes being the work of the Vocational girls. The play "Elizabeth and Maid-ich" had the following cast:

Queen Elizabeth: Rita Alexander
Sir Walter Raleigh: Frank Cowan
Sir Robert Naunton: Donald Matthews.
Dame Katherine Ashley: Kathleen O'Neill.
Ladies-in-Waiting: Kathleen Lafferty, Isabel Ireland, Dorothy Hannah, Corinne Manzie, Geraldine Soash.

Costumes of the modernistic play, "Twin Pipes" designed and finished by the Vocational girls were modelled by Mary Forster, Rita Richards, Bill Hutchins, Doug Crowley, Jim Moon, and Dick Logie.

Wedding Party Climaxes Show

The climax of the Vocational girls' program was the Wedding Party, which showed not very latest and loveliest bridal creations and wedding attendants; all executed by the clever fingers of the sewing classes. The bride was beautiful in a regal fitted gown of palest bridal satin, with long train, and veil that fell in filmy clouds from a Juliet cap of lace, which was given away by Mr. MacLaurin and attended by the bridal bridesmaids who made a stunning picture in their gaudy frocks of green, blue, orchid, with picture hats in the same delicate shades, two dainty flower girls in blue, two shy little boys in green. The handsome groom's attendants presented a smart appearance in uniform and the whole party was led by the orchestra. Those taking part in the scene were Miss Mary Sinclair, groom—Jack Brine, Graham, Groomsmen—Jack Brine, Bridesmaids—Audrey Cornell, Pearl Bull, Dorothy Laplain, Evelyn Tooley, Evelyn Bedell, Constance Crewe, Ushers—Graham Diamond, Alec Williams, Frank Lancaster, Bill Galley, Jack Gilmour, Flower girls —Margaret and Jean Manhall; pages—Billy Walker and Hugh Cameron.

The remainder of the program was devoted to a skilful demonstration of typewriting, the pupils members of A and B Commercial forms typing at the rate of 40 words per words a minute illustrated how typing is first taught in music, so that scholars will acquire rhythm. As they develop their own speed, the music is not used. The typists were:

Kathleen O'Neill, Geraldine Soaft, Betty Ridley, Winnifred Shirland, Helen Bishop, Ruth Stevenson, Ena Evenson, Thelma Langabeer, Eileen Staples, Ruby Donnelly, June Lyons, Alice Bedard June McKenna, Jean Pealling, Albert Quigley, Kenneth Waller, Gregg Haight (a) Victoria.)

Speed Test Given

A speed test was shown by 3rd and 4th Commercial forms and the flying fingers of the pupils achieved speeds of from fifty to over sixty words a minute. They were: Jean Bleakley, 62 words, Lillian Marcus, 60 words, Jean Hamilton, 60, Raymund Thompson, Verna Garrison, Jean Graves, Ray Lundberg, Gyvia Wallbridge, Jean Hamilton, Ray Thompson, Roy Thompson Dorothy Bone, Jean Bleakley, Dorothy Bone and Vera Keegan.

The stage arrangements for the program were in charge of the following: Assistant stage manager, Harry Eastlake; Stage electrician, Howard Kolrash; Stage hands, Owen Cook, Harold Mackey Elliott, and Bill Hastings; Properties, Mrs. Peterson and Mrs. Pearson and Mr. Ferguson.

Throughout the day unsmiling visitors centred about the Technical departments of auto-mechanics, carpentry, electricity, machine shop and draughting. The exhibit in the woodwork department was of high praise as the perfectly finished articles, including tables, fern stands, slipper bones, coffee tables, book cases etc., showed the projects on which each year's students are engaged. The demonstrations in the Science laboratories were watched with interest and many lingered in the pleasant atmosphere of the library.

Most of the women found their way to the third floor, where the special work of the girls' vocational department was on exhibition. The sewing classes had completed cotton dresses with an air of delighton, embroidery, knitting and children's garments that resembled the work of professionals in finish and design. Of special interest was the embroidered table covers for the Argyll colors by the third year Technical girls. In a scroll of white were the words embroidered in black "Open 1917."

Cooking Class Visited

Cookery classes were in progress and the cafeteria was also open where the delicacies cooked by the girls being purchased by the visitors, who also found delight in the practice apartment, which each girl learns how to keep in spic and span order.

The Art Room had special appeal and the work is of a very high standard. Beside the usual art project were drawings of Oriental costumes, historical costumes and cooking utensils, painting on glass and pottery being a new feature of the art class.

The entire evening passed very quickly for the visitors, who are indebted to principal, staff and pupils for a true insight into the manifold phases of education as accomplished at Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School.

Sacrifice of Children Reported at Woosung

Shanghai, May 30 (AP)—Grim and fantastic reports that 1,500 girls and boys were to be sacrificed to Chinese gods in a religious orgy caused a panic at Woosung and led to police inquiry.

The reports, gaining swift credence among the mystic and ignorant, had it that a special band of bandits had been organized to kidnap 1,500 children and throw them into the Chientang River at Zahow, where the Hangchow-Shanghai-Nanking express train is due to be derailed by a head-on collision.

This was necessary, the strange rumors said, because engineers could not be induced to drive the train.

The frightened people of Woosung believed that a number of boys and girls already were missing from their homes.

Train Strikes Farmer

Napanee, May 30 — Wellington Craig, a farmer residing on the Belleville Road, was rushed to the hospital in Napanee Friday morning, as a result of severe injuries received when the truck he was driving was struck by a C.N.R. Flyer at a westbound C.N.R. freight train.

Craig, who is about 55 years of age was driving north, and stopped the truck owned by a freight train going east, and as this train passed the crossing, it is supposed that the man did not see the approach of the west-bound train.

The truck was demolished and the driver was thrown a considerable distance. It is feared he may have a fractured skull.

Lord Burghley Sets Mark Around Deck

Travels Third of Mile Without Running Equipment On Its 52 Seconds.

On board H.M.S. Queen Mary, en route to New York, May 30 (CP)— The passengers are settling down to normal life at sea as the Queen Mary ploughs through calm seas at a steady speed of around 28 knots.

The more athletic find stimulus in Lord Burghley's record round the promenade. The great Olympic hurdler covered this slightly less than a third of a mile distance, unrationed and without changing into running apparel, in about 52 seconds. It is a record that won't be broken this trip.

Others find consolation for the derby they missed at Epsom Downs in backing wooden horses of strange lineage, like mere sawyards and forward over water jumps in obedience to the lever of the dice.

Purchasers throng the shops in "Piccadilly Circus". Many buy the costumes in which the latest customs made in Europe. Many find joy in the daily movie shows. Others exploring the third class quarters refurn full of wonderments at the luxury of everything. For the Queen Mary the century of the old steerage idea departs. Third class is forward where vibration is scarcely noticable.

MRS. J. ORRILL, TRENTON, HURT

Sustains Broken Ribs And Driver of Car is Arrested

Mrs. John Orrill, Trenton, sustained ribs broken to the extent of three fractured ribs and bruises of an internal nature when the automobile in which she was riding turned over and pinned her beneath the wreckage at the eastern town limits of Trenton. Shortly before 4 p. m. last evening, an automobile driven recently by, John S. Lowrie, 284 Campbell Ave. Trenton, went into the south ditch and turned over twice, completely wrecking the top of the vehicle.

Motorcycle Patrolman Bert Delaney investigated and promptly arrested Lowrie on a charge of criminal negligence, placed him in custody with bail not having been decided at a late hour last night. Mrs. Orrill was attended by Dr. Johnston of Trenton, who announced that three ribs had been fractured. She was reported to be resting comfortably today, however,

The Lowrie car was badly wrecked during the accident, the top and body being completely. It was a new Ford sedan. Motorcycle Patrolman Delaney stated today the vehicle was out of control a distance of some 400 feet prior to the crash, he said.

ANN OUTWITS HER EX-HUSBAND

Changes Liners And Starts With Child on Way to Europe

Quebec, May 30.—Ann Harding apparently took a long lead last night in the race from her pursuing former husband, Harry Bannister, repeatedly seeking to prevent the screen star from sailing for England with their 7-year-old daughter.

Overtaken last night in Quebec by Bannister, who had flown from Newark, N.J., Miss Harding sailed aboard the liner Duchess of Atholl, instead of on the liner Empress of Australia, due to sail this afternoon.

Miss Harding came here from Montreal, where her divorced husband arrived from Newark by plane a few hours after the star and her party had entrained for Quebec.

Bannister and his accompanying lawyer made only a brief stay in Montreal, then raced back to St. Hubert Airport and took off in their chartered plane for Quebec.

Miss Harding and her party booked in at the Chateau Frontenac on arrival, and made plans for the processing tour today prior to the sailing of the Australia. Word reached here that Bannister was en route, Reports said his accompanying lawyer left quietly. There was only a curt announcement that Miss Harding and her child had sailed on the Duchess of Atholl.

Miss Harding, equipped with a court order that gave her custody of the child for six months, and another for later, the Department said, was imported, but most of the canoes, rowboats, sailboats and motor launches used in hiring out or loafing are made in Canada. There are worth about $514,000 a year.

Swimmers and beachloungers, who don't go near the water need about $6,000 bathing suits and 34,000 bathing caps a year for which they pay about $668,000.

Of the tackle, the Department said, was imported, but most of the canoes, rowboats, sailboats and motor launches used in hiring out or loafing are made in Canada. There are worth about $514,000 a year.

THE NEW CONSERVATIVE LEADER

Hon. W. Earl Rowe, the new leader of the Conservative Party in Ontario was given an tumultuous welcome on his call to the leadership at the convention held in Toronto on Thursday. The enthusiasm which his candidature had met and his popularity even before he was definitely announced as candidate, must encourage him as he steps into the office which the Hon. George S. Henry has been holding since the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson resigned the leadership. The convention was a continuation of that movement in Mr. Rowe's support. His election was a foregone conclusion in the minds of many members of his party.

Since the general election two years ago, Mr. Henry has been carrying on as leader. The party has taken little before deciding to call a convention. But now all uncertainties are cast aside and the party has its new chieftain.

Mr. Rowe's long wide acquaintance with the people and the problems of Ontario and his leadership will be watched with interest by both parties. He is a well known farmer. He was appointed to the cabinet by the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett just before the last election. He was at one time a member of the Ontario Legislature and is possessed of a pleasing personality and presence.

Col. Drew made a good second in the race for the leadership. His campaign was a brief but vigorous. With seven in the field and such outstanding candidates as Rowe and Drew, it was but natural others obtained considerably smaller votes.

Both party leaders are young. Premier Hepburn is nearing forty and Rowe being 42. Youth is known for its zeal and vigor and the new leader should be typical of the energy and enthusiasm of those who have not yet reached middle age.

CRIME DOES NOT PAY

Rarely does a gang go to pieces as suddenly as the gang which Red Ryan led. Ryan and Harry Cheevers were shot to death in Santa last Saturday night in a hold-up after Ryan had slain a police constable. Thursday night Edward McMullen wanted in connection with a Markham murder, shot himself by accident in the head as he was trying to shoot his way across the border into the United States. With his head wound he was lingering yesterday in a Seattle hospital.

Chased by his own fears McMullen thought he found Canada too hot for him and sought refuge in the United States. But, like Ryan, he made a public enemy of himself by a short time U.S. customs officer dead, when he was questioned and tried to shoot another and failed, and if he recovers he will undoubtedly be made to fall through the trap at Ballows.

Gangs are desperate when they did what members of Ryan's party did. It is now not safe for gangsters on either side of the 'line.

The sensational end of his old pals and the news that the order was out for his arrest in the Markham murder case will probe following Ryan's death gave McMullen fright. He knew the calibre of Canadian officers—they would get their man. So he tried to get out of the country.

In the last analysis these men showed the gang instinct of fear, and selfishness developed to the lowest degree, where humanity practically disappears. Two gallant officers of the law are dead, the price of society's safety from coward bandits.

The gangster has been dealt a heavy blow in Canada and in the United States as two of one gang are dead and one is perhaps dying. These men who had to have the thrill of robbery and who carry guns to shoot police down are revealed as the most despicable of mankind.

THE CONSTABLE'S FAMILY

The question of pension or compensation to the widow of the gallant Police Constable Lewis of Sarnia who died protecting life and property against bandits has been brought up.

There is not a lover of law and order but deeply feels that as the man gave his life in defence of liberty and law, his family should not suddenly find all income at an end. When he went to face his duty he did not stop to question whether if he laid down his life his family would be allowed to go without protection.

Lewis with his associates of the Sarnia force showed that Canadian policemen are braver than thugs and gunmen, they threw their undefended bodies against armed men, not knowing whether the bandits were armed or not. Gunman do not perform anything heroic, but policemen do.

Families of police officers all over Canada and the United States feel with Mrs. Lewis and her family in their loss of a noble husband and father, not forgetting that theirs might be a similar fate, for the gunman has not pity of plea or person.

For the honour of the country it is hoped and expected that some adequate guarantee will be given from whatever source should act.

THE COTTAGE OF DREAMS

A little moss-tiled cottage,
Way down a winding lane,
Where one might live quite close to earth
And Nature's solace gain.

An open hearth and many books,
A window with a view;
A garden plot to tend and keep,—
A trusty friend or two.

And in the garden one would grow
Sweet mignonette and musk,
And glory in their fragrance
When day steals into dusk.

This little moss-tiled cottage,
A perfect dream would be
If one might crave, only or two,
And glimpse, far-off—the sea.

VANCOUVER'S GOLDEN JUBILEE

promises to be something all Canada can be proud of. Vancouver was founded and developed by lusty men and women, clean in character and clever in the execution of their great task of building up a great city on the Pacific coast, and in helping to develope the wonderful resources of Canada's farthest west province, British Columbia. Canadians will go west this summer in crowds to help Vancouverites celebrate its Golden Jubilee, which is but a symbol of the amazing growth in wealth, wisdom, importance and population of all Canada. July 7 to September 7 will be devoted to the Jubilee program, which can be made a very useful, instructive and educational and interesting vacation opportunity for many Canadians to see and know their own country. A train load of members of Parliament will journey from Ottawa to Vancouver, it is expected, to take part in the Jubilee, and the whole world will be represented here for the Men of the West will have something worthwhile seeing for all. The Vancouver Sun, evidencing the spirit of progress which prompted the Jubilee, issued a special number, April 25, 1936, not of fifty pages only, but of sixty-six pages, brimful of interest and information. "Vancouver's Fifty Years of Growth, from Towering Trees to Towering Buildings", is the text of this monster message of that bright and shining luminary, the Vancouver Sun. Here in Vancouver is a population of 310,117, is the terminus of two great Canadian transcontinental railways, and northern terminus of the Pacific Highway, and is served by 65 regular steamship lines. Vancouver harbor has ninety-six miles of waterfront. Vancouver is the chief business centre for a province that production of $50,000,000, including that mining industry which had an output of $50,000,000 last year with dividends of nearly $10,000,000. Recreation is not forgotten with 95 park sites, 11 bathing beaches, 10 golf clubs, 40 tennis clubs, Ten High Schools, 49 elementary schools, 3 junior high schools and 23 private schools provide plenty education, and for the stranger within the gates who brings not his own blanket roll or tent, there are 124 hotels and 18 tourist camps. And that, my friends is a bird's eye view of one of Canada's greatest cities.

PHYSICIANS HAVE ALL KINDS OF PATIENTS with resultant variety of experiences. One physician told one time that the worst disease doctors had to contend with was ignorance. Intelligence can sometimes give the medicos a jolt as witness the retort of Voltaire, French philosopher, to his physician, during a severe illness: "You are trying to convey drugs of which you know little, into a body about which you know less to cure a disease of which you know nothing at all." Of course medical science has made great strides since Voltaire's day.

Following Instructions

"Be yourselves," the teacher had directed, "and write what is in you."

"In me," the essay of one boy began, "there is my stomach, lungs, heart, liver, two apples, a piece of mince pie, three sticks of celery, a lot of chestnuts, and my dinner."

Poet's Corner

Far down in the twilight ages,
At an hour in the dawn of time,
While creation by long, slow stages,
Emerged from the mist and slime,
God aided His struggling creatures
With dower of His boundless love,
To some He gave, say our teachers,
The wonderful gift of wings.

The fish sought their prey in the waters,
The beasts on the solid ground,
But above these sanguine slaughters
The feathery hosts were found.
As their wings grew light and stronger
They rose to the south, to the two,
Till, beloved to earth no longer,
The birds of the air flew free.

To man, as His crowning guerdon,
God gave a living soul,
With with it many a burden,
And the urge to a far, high goal.
Feeble, but growing, growing,
The longings of high desire,
Flickering, faintly glowing,
A spark of immortal fire.

And ever as years rolled onward
And the centuries slipped away,
Have the eyes of men turned sunward,
Each, just in their degree,
To be free of these clods that fetter!
To float in the boundless blue!
Let the wide, wide world be better
Of the deed—and the dream comes true—

But only in part. No pinions
Outgrew from that keen desire.
For the fetters of earth's dominions
Man must toil as well as aspire.
So he fashioned for his flying,
From metals and gases and wood;
And after long years of trying,
He knows that his goal is good.

To-day, with joy he will piloted
His craft through the trackless air;
Through a sunset of rose and violet
He mounts in triumphant prayer.
He races across the ocean,
And slights over Foreign strand—
Nay! Dowered with this power of motion,
The world is his native land.

Even we who are little and lowly
Have dreamed in the still, blue night;
With air-ships we, too, are holy,
Have dared in a birdlike flight.
The deep sea, the earth, the heavens,
Have floated above the flowers,
Waiting centuries—celebrate its
Impelled by our innate powers.

This is the dream supernal—
An earnest of spirits wings
In the Absolute, Life Eternal,
Beyond our knowledge.
We shall traverse the ultimate highways—
We, faint and weak from the goal!
For the beautiful, boundless skyways
Are the bourne of the questing soul.

DEATH OF MOSS CALLED ACCIDENTAL

Oxford, England, May, 30.—Scotland Yard last night announced the theory of accidental death in the case of Thomas Patteson Moss, Toronto student at Oxford, was "officially closed."

"I am firmly convinced it was a case of accidental death," declared Chief Inspector Jesse Bennett, head of Scotland Yard's detective bureau. Bennett and Yard detectives working on the case and the Oxfordshire Coroner.

"I think Moss was dead of suffocation before his body was burned. He must come to be at a point remote from the college in what we have to solve."

Bennett also said that as far as he could see, the question of violence was ruled out.

Parliament Hill Hears

By Wilfrid Eggleston

Add to your collection of naive admissions in the House of Commons:

"I do not want to take up any further time because I know we should be conducting the business of the committee. However, since everybody else wants to talk, I am forced to say something or the people in my constituency will think I am dumb. I do not want to be considered a dear mute, and I must say something at times or next year some of my friends will say that I am not on hansard and I may not get any notice."

This came from Irish Dave Spence, of Parkdale, Toronto, the outstanding authority on asparagus and roses and other horticultural matters in the House.

• • • •

The member for Rosetown-Biggar possesses a very military name and at the same time a passion for peace, which sometimes mixes things up. He was christened Major James William Coldwell, the Major standing for an old family name which it was decided to perpetuate. To get around the difficulty of a pacifist bearing such a misleading name, he managed out west to get his friends to call him "Jim." Hardly anyone knew what M. J. stood for, but I wormed it out of him in 1933 when I first interviewed him.

The other day, on the defence estimates, the member for London, F. C. Betts, not being aware of the above, proceeded to twig the Saskatchewan member about being such an opponent of expenditure on military matters, and at the same time of having gone to the polls as "Major" James William Coldwell.

It was slightly unfortunate, as an interruption, and the C. C. F. member was able to set his interlocutor straight with a flourish.

I sometimes look down from the Gallery on the House and speculate what it will look like some years from now. Who will be in the front benches then? Which of the obscure back bench members will be leading the government or the opposition? Will the small war hawk in the South Back corner? Will J. S. Woodsworth, or Gordon Ross, or Archibald Mitchell, or someone like that be ruling with a rod of democracy? Or will someone not even in the Commons yet be the centre of attention?

Nobody can answer those questions. But I amused myself for a few minutes looking back 20 years to see where we were. Leaders were then, and to what extent the commentators of the day saw their brilliant future.

Some of them, of course, were already shining. Quoted in Morgan's "Canadian Men and Women of the Time" (1912) were such illuminating lines as these:

Of R. B. Bennett: "One of the coming statesmen (Rate Hon. A. G. Blair): "one of the most promising young men in the Dominion." (Mr. Blair, Empire).

Of the present prime minister, who had already gone a long way, the Canadian Courier was quoted to this effect: "A virile upright man" while Saturday Night, in 1910, said: "A feather in the cap of Sir William Mulock, who discovered him and gave him a start."

Arthur Meighen was described as a lawyer and legislator, and the Toronto News says he is a remarkable lawyer, a master of detail and clarity of expression."

The "Who's Who" of that day contained nearly 8,000 names. It did not, however, mention Ernest Lapointe, H. H. Stevens, T. A. Crerar, C. A. Dunning, F. J. Cardin, W. D. Euler, nor several other leaders of to-day. Nor was there any mention of Mackenzie King, who was then 43 inside the present speaker of the Commons, Hon. Pierre Casgrain.

The speaker of the Senate has been, however, Walter E. Foster is described as a merchant, but his learning toward public life is foreshadowed by the comment: "A Liberal and a great admirer of Laurier and Fielding; advocates a maritime union."

• • • •

One would hardly expect to see such promising young men in it as Hon. Norman Rogers, and of course he is not, having been only a high school pupil at the time. But there was a student at Acadia when Mrs. Grace Dean McLeod Rogers, who is described by Dr. Thomas O'Hagan as: "Unquestionably one of the most gifted women Canadian writers."

The "south-east corner" was represented by at least one man, already notable in 1911. Rev. J. S. Woodsworth (death) was the way he was described. The sketch went on to say that he had "actively engaged in philanthropic work;—believes in the necessity of practical Christianity that will meet the needs of modern civilization."

Our 'elder statesmen' were of course already famous. Concerning Sir George Foster the sketch simply said that he was "a man of Welsh descent, and that the name was originally Asperley — a fact which the parliamentary guide seems to have missed. It was further stated that Sir George's family came to Canada in 1836, and that if they weren't on the Mayflower, they were only a few years after it.

• • • •

Hon. Raoul Dandurand, described as statesman, lawyer and capitalist, was "relatively the most prominent French Canadian" and was lauded highly in the contemporary press as a "man of great executive ability."

C. H. Cahan, similarly, was given extensive space, and spoken of as "a courageous, ready and powerful speaker", which he still is. Another quotation says of him: "as promoter of various industrial corporation lawyer, a great success."

Hon. Charles Marcil, the dean of the present house, was of course already a man widely known, and is described as "a wholesouled, genial, hard-working politician."

Dr. Arthur Beauchesne, the Clerk of the House, finds a place in Morgan along with his father, who sat for Bonaventure at one time. The present Clerk is described as a "graduate of Laval University, and to edit a new journal in Montreal, to be started in opposition to Le Devoir.

HOLLYWOOD

And so this is Hollywood! It was more difficult to enter than the British Parliament, London, England, or than Congress the White House at Washington. Hollywood is not at all as you think it is.

As you go westward by street car or bus from Pershing Part in the centre of Los Angeles and about a block in size, you pass through Hollywood and then on to Santa Monica, the school city on the Pacific Ocean. All these areas are as level as a table, but, all along the way, you see in your right a continuous chain of hills similar in height to the hills around Frankford and Stirling but not as disconnected. Many beautiful homes are built all along these hills up to the top and also on the level ground at their base. The hills in the vicinity of Hollywood, which is about ten miles west of Los Angeles proper, are called Beverley Hills, one of the most famous residential districts in the world. We shall describe this region later in another article.

Hollywood and Los Angeles are so closely built together that you never know when one ends and the other begins. Even the former has an area of several times that of Belleville. The various moving picture studios are scattered all over this extensive area mostly at a distance of five to eight miles from each other. We visited most of these famous studios, and after getting as close as possible by regular routes of street cars and buses, we always had two or three miles to walk after that with the result that we obtained a blistered heel at every attempt. This in itself was a very unusual occurrence for us, and seemed to indicate that we were on a wild goose chase.

The external appearance of movie picture studios is always much the same, a cement wall about twenty feet high with the tops of buildings sticking up inside here and there irregularly. A large, double, steel gate with open bars is the main entrance, and it is guarded by a uniformed policeman in uniform. A door on one side admits to the administrative offices, and one on the other side to the casting office, where extras are engaged daily. Inside the walls are large buildings, also guarded by stalwart officers too. You may have a glimpse through the barred gate as you stand in any one of these offices for a time.

In all our visits to these premises, which suggested penitentiaries to us, we were careful to be neat in appearance, and to have our business cards in the morning. Our work began in the various gate promptly at 9 a.m. In this way we saw the various performers cross the threshold for action. Some were accompanied by a chauffeur in a car, while others in all grove up to one or other of the entrances in automobiles, some fine and some just junk. The chauffeurs accompanied them into the office in quest of expensive cars and were driven about by a darkie chauffeur. Those who were climbing the ladder of success were in the habit of using "company" cars. The car would stop close to the desired entrance, and when the occupant alighted he would say to the chauffeur, "Wait, Heller; they hald hands for a moment or two, kissed a couple of times and then one got out without a smile, passed me as if I never existed, and entered what seemed to me a death chamber. Sometimes the man got out, sometimes, though less rarely, the woman, but the one remaining in the car drove to the nearest gate, and waited there for hours. The story of some facts to be related in this article, such casual incidents have left a jar-reading significance on us.

One little girl, not Shirley Temple, but almost equally famous and well known, came one morning to the casting office accompanied by her mother. She was pale and nervous and clung to her mother pathetically for several minutes, as if she dreaded the ordeal which was before her.

We had a front seat on the left side of the office, and the whole drama ever known to this old world. But what of its business aspects, where Heart and Phase are the only considerations?

For the first time in five years our Belleville Press Card which had hitherto opened every door in the world, was very nearly useless. After going into waste paper baskets in Hollywood. We interviewed every available official, guards at the ponderous gates, and others entirely of a pickle-dish order, but the same verdict was always replied coldly, "Sorry we cannot help you", with a bored expression as if to say: "Just go away and leave us alone." Our experience was not unique by any means, as when in a difficult spot and always realizes that defeat is his only dis-grace. In all our visits to these premises we never met with a single case of publicity manager. Invariably he was a handsome young man, with an abundance of smiles and leisure, the only one we found in every place as far as we can see. He always carried a pass and a guide, and for a couple of hours we were conducted over the twenty to fifty acres of wonderland. Whatever is the setting for the picture that is being taken when a mere child. My mother went with me to the photographer's and saw the set of the Hotel, with many chairs and scenery which was to form part of my first picture. But imagine my joy when the picture was finished; everything seemed to be changed, except the scenery and the name of the picture. This child-hood delusion came back to me often as I visited Hollywood studios recently. We were always in a hurry to get away from the gate, and not upon us in the various moving pictures. Usually the scenery is dirty and shabby, it runs the risk of being spoiled if it is not made of heavy yard (heavy cardboard) or light lumber without a ceiling, and so fragile that a gust of wind would blow it over. Streets and buildings are simply cardboard fronts, and in many cases only the front is there to create the illusion. Material used in one picture is often used in others in various combinations and arrangements. Even the most magnificent palaces which you go inside the high walls. We were shown much equipment used in many pictures, and in every case you could see that it was made or altered to produce the desired result on the screen. The stars have individual dressing rooms, while the extras in common herd are crowded or less hundred together in a restaurant within the walls of each movie location, so that the performers may eat when hungry without changing their costumes. We were told that a few years ago the stars would known stars (not behind glass partitions) as scenes for new pictures were being taken. Nowadays, they will go anywhere to secure a setting but their work, and do not know apparently when a stranger enters their set or leaves. Several different pictures are under way in each movie centre at the time of our visits, and in their equipment, as well as cast. Of course some pictures requiring special natural scenery are taken outside the studio on the ocean, in the desert and sometimes even in foreign lands.

SOME GENERAL IMPRESSIONS

We have been able to give only a very few details concerning Hollywood, and now give a few general impressions:

1. Unless you have friends or influence in Movieland, your chance is only one in a thousand for securing work. Why should you come? Even Fame and fortune have always been carefully guarded for the privileged few. Talent is not a factor in their selection.

As we visited the various studios we found groups of people standing on the sidewalk near the casting office. Day after day they go and come there, hoping for a chance to act as an "extra" or as a "super."

The writer on one occasion entered a casting office and addressed the guard:

"Do you need a Buffalo Bill, or a St. Peter, for any picture just now?"

"Put it at the moment, both if you have your name and address, your application will be given consideration at the proper time."

Not one in a thousand is ever called to work.

2. Movie studios are very busy places and strangers are not wanted. Officials use civil language, but their tone says clearly, "Get out and Stay out".

4. The studios, scenes, equipment, make-up, and performers constitute such a disillusionment that moving pictures can never be the same to you again.

In our next article we will tell about our various visits to such homes as those of Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Harold Lloyd, Tom Mix and others. The home life of stars is interesting too.

BAD SPELLING

Most of the newspapers in California not only lack dignity of outrage appearance, but their contents are deplorable also. All headlines are extremely sensational, and the spelling is bad, especially such words as "Dareffied", and "Insquested", which should never be spelled with two "s's."

For a test and also a little amusement, I walked along thronged Broadway here in Los Angeles with note-book and pencil in hand, and as people waited to cross at intersections, I asked one here and one there how to spell "Philadelphia" explaining that I was writing for the press newspaper in Canada, and that I did not wish to have the reputation of being a bad speller. Men and women, young and old, took my request in good humor, but faithful efforts to help me. The following are a few of the spellings actually given: "Ballidale", "Filadilfia" and "Hallidagh". A lovely darkie girl replied with smiles and blushing humility: "O honey! I never was any good at foreign language."

MURDER FOR A DOLLAR

Further investigation reveals the fact that Los Angeles was founded in 1781 as a mission by the Spaniards, and that several other places such as Santa Barbara were similarly founded. This helps to understand to some extent how the "City of the Angels" came to be crystallized into its present condition of wickedness.

From all our previous articles about this city of paradise, you might justly gather that we believe it to be both a friendly city and a good city. But yesterday (May 21st, 1936) I received a shock. While standing on busy street admiring the gorgeous flowers in a store window, a motherly woman with gray hair passed by and then retraced her steps to my side. She was carrying a basket filled with small bags of pop-corn.

"I would not blame that beautiful diamond necklet for the store if I were you," she whispered nervously, "they murder here for a dollar." I thanked kindly for the warning and proceeded to more carefully.

I checked up on this alarm at our hotel and at the restaurants where we eat, and received always the same reply: "Yes, it's true, but they murder here for more than a dollar."

More will follow in a few days.

Best wishes to all.

Belleville S.A. Band to Play To Prisoners in Penitentiary

For First Time District Band to Play in Portsmouth

34 BANDSMEN GO

On Sunday morning the Belleville Salvation Army Silver Band will journey across the bay to Kingston, and from there will go to the Portsmouth Penitentiary, and also to the Reformatory, where services will be conducted.

The band will be met in Kingston by Major Smith, the S. A. Officer in charge of the district, and Capt. Fred Sharp at one o'clock the Band will render a Sacred Concert in the Grand Theatre on Princess Bay, this being the place where the Salvation Army Services are conducted. The Service here will be in charge of Major Smith assisted by Sergeant-Major Hart of Belleville.

Initial Visit of Band

Sharp at 3 O'clock the Band is scheduled to give another like service in the Penitentiary Chapel, and at this the institution some seven hundred prisoners are expected and this will bring a great deal of blessing to those who are there, and it is a very rare thing for a band to enter this large and strictly disciplined institution.

At various times Salvation Army Bands have appeared in the prisons but for the Army Band of Belleville it will be the first time, and the Bandsmen from this district has participated in such an unusual event, and officials are looking for a very interesting visit.

Only Salvationists Admitted

Owing to the rigid discipline of the institution, only members of the fully qualified Salvationists is allowed to play, but the Band is complete and have to be dressed in full Army dress, and only the musicians will be permitted to enter, the remainder will compose the ranks of the Band.

The Band is under the personal direction of Bandmaster David Wardle, under whose management the Band has been for 29 years, and during that time the Belleville Band has traveled to many places in both the U.S. and Canada kind. It will be remembered that Bandmaster Wardle was in Toronto, and this was a highlight in his career, when he was presented with one hundred of people who packed the different buildings to played by the Band, and a sample of its many adventures. Its only object being to bring cheer to the hearts of those who are sick and all it comes in contact with. There is no doubt many thousands have been helped and encouraged by the Band through the untiring efforts, and its fine crowded choirs of bandsmen.

To Play in Kingston Citadel

Immediately following these two events, the Band will be the guests of Major S. A. Hunt, at a supper in the Y. P. Hall.

At 8 o'clock the Band will, with the Kingston Band hold a regular open-air Service, after which there will be a Festival Service in the Salvation Army Citadel, when a great Salvation Meeting will take place with both bands in attendance. This will be in charge of the Commanding Officer Adjutant Gennery of Kingston.

Great Final Festival

The great final gathering will take place, when at 4.30 P. M. at Belleville Citadel, Festival will take place, and will be given by both the Kingston and Belleville Bands, and the Kingston Band will be under the baton of Bandmaster Jack Hughes, and the many items will be in the selections given by the Belleville Band under the leadership of Bandsmen under the leadership of Bandmaster Wardle, renowned cornet soloist. This group is noted for its very soul-stirring vocal selections.

We are sure that this event will be of interest to the public as a whole, and we always are kind to this organization, who tries to bring cheer all and promote a more increasing love for God, and a little ease to striving humanity. If you are in trouble consult the Army Officer who will be pleased to assist with help and with thought that no hour is too early for the Salvation Army.

FIREHALL WALL YIELDS RELICS

Lead Package in No. 1 Hall Preserves Records of Year 1889

Followed with age, but in perfect state of preservation, several interesting relics of days gone by in this city, were unearthed today at No. 1 Firehall by workmen now engaged in the construction of a new wall in the building. Encased in a lead package and carefully soldered, was found in the front of the hall the collection of old time documents contained in the corner stone when the old Fire Department-in the year 1889, the date of the construction of the hall.

Imperishably recorded on a copper plate combined with the handle of documents and papers are the names of members of the old time firemen, all of whom served the city in that year: W. H. Campbell, Chief; Jas. Ormond, Assistant Engineer; Jas. McCurdy, Secretary.

No. 1 Company: W. J. Brown, Foreman; Robt. Wood, 2nd Comm.; Robt. Symonds, Geo. Brown, Geo. Johnson, T. Symonds, Wm. Wilson, Robt. Wood, Alex McCoy.

No. 3 Company: Thos. Seagar, Foreman; Wm. Dafoe, Thos. Cox, James Shapen, Thos. Bulger, F. Bateman, Wm. Thomas, Robt. Mitchell, James Coy and Paul Lalonde.

No. 2 Company: Wm. Lidster, Foreman; Geo. Frost, Saml Jones, Wm. Graham, Thomas Bell, Mickey Dwyer (No. 3 Hose), Jack Bradford (Driver No. 3 Hose), Geo. Bradford (Driver No. 2 Hose).

Mechanics connected with the building, whose names were set out in the copper plate were E. L. Palen, architect and superintendent of construction; Chas. LaPoint, contractor; Thos. Thompson, bricklayer, and Jas. Wilson, plasterer.

Among the effects were a number of old Belleville papers dated 1889, a copy of "Rules No. 40 and 41 of the Metropolitan Section of the Fire Department of the City of Toronto, dated this day, May 14, 1889."

Of the list of names contained on the copper plate it is believed that only two men are alive today, Frank Bateman, of Bell's Corners and James Coy, former resident of Belleville, now living in retirement in Hamilton.

The souvenirs are being treasured by Chief Lynch and members of the department for inspection by older residents.

Gold to Lead Canada to Prosperity Sees Mining Exchange President

According to mining experts who should know, Canada's future prosperity is looking to be a matter of record.

Gold is Canada's foremost industry today and the various provinces are combined with the basic gold standard, what happens to all the gold being mined. It all goes to Ottawa, for a law put through shortly after Britain left the international money standard makes it necessary to send all the newly mined Canadian gold which the mint receives the current highest price for their gold as set by New York and London markets.

No Gold Coins Minted

Apart from a small amount of newly-mined Canadian gold which cannot be economically refined in Canada and which is therefore exported under license for treatment abroad, all the product of Canadian gold mines is refined at the royal mint at Ottawa. According to G. Y. W. Howard, secretary of the Toronto Stock Exchange, the purpose of the mint is not interested in turning out new gold coins, no gold coins having been minted since 1919.

"The gold is not retained in Canada. Its function is international. It is to be sold in the world markets by the mint," Deputy Minister Clark pointed out. "The mint receives only handling charges for selling the gold for the mines."

Asked if the gold is used to pay off the national public debt, he stated that this cannot be done, since the mines receive the current highest price for the gold in the world markets. In other words, Canada's gold profits, the result of production, go to the individuals and companies who own the mines and not into the national finances.

Silver mined in Canada is handled in somewhat similar manner, it being sold as a commodity in the world markets rather than to the United States treasury through the Bank of Canada, though mines may sell it in world markets if they prefer.

In a recent radio talk, Hon. T. A. Crerar, minister of mines, stated that Canada's mining industry produces $1,000,000 in new wealth each most industry today and the various provinces are combined with the basic gold standard, what happens to all the gold being mined. Weddings

BEARE—REES

A pretty church wedding was solemnized at the rectory of St. Christopher's Church, Oshawa, when Rev. J. A. O'Neil, on Thursday when Miss Mabelle Beatrice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rees of Mrs. Dale of Bellamy, became the bride of Mr. Ernest Beare, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Beare, of Oshawa. The bride was attended by Miss Violet Varrin, and the groom by James Dale, brother of the bride.

The bride was attractively attired in a lovely gown of white satin cut on princess lines, with a large white picture hat and matching accessories, and wore a corsage of red rose and lily of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a floral printed chiffon gown with a pink picture hat and accessories to match.

The bride is a graduate nurse of the Oshawa hospital, Brockville, and has been on the staff of that institution for more than eight years.

After the ceremony the bride and groom left by motor on a honeymoon trip to Belleville, where the groom is engaged as a salesman.

Red Cross Workers are Gratified With Results

Objective of $1,000 To Carry On Work of Society Will Be Reached

Heartening assurance responses to the annual appeal for funds, the local Red Cross Society is confident of reaching the objective of $1,000 necessary to carry out the many activities of the Society this year. Canvassers have met with sympathetic response and the residential and firms on whom they called last week, Red Cross Week in the city. Abroad the treasurer has received over one hundred dollars from those who have completed their canvass. A number have not yet reported to the treasurer, however they do, it is expected that the high objective will be reached.

President I. G. Hedley and his committee are very grateful for the co-operation of the citizens in general. The significance of the week was brought home by motion pictures shown at both theatres and an article Red Cross window at the Canadian Department Store. Red Cross flags were flown during the week on the staffs of the City Hall and the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

The local branch of the Society was especially active last winter, when in addition to their regular and extensive program, they gave emergency service to families in the flood area. For this purpose there was a special grain on their funds and the sum collected during the week was very welcome as it combines their program as followed in the past years.

HEALTH and PSYCHOLOGY

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Calamity hunters are to be found everywhere, flourishing in the office, the factory and the home. You meet them even on vacation. So many people are "fed up" on calamity that they have to get away from it. Then you run across a successful man or woman who was hopeless or despairing? Conversation with these types soon dries up the glowing, downcast eyes, don't you immediately suspect there is something wrong somewhere?

The atmosphere created by pessimistic and cynical individuals, and the feeling that chronic grumbler, "guilt-type" and calamity hunter inflict upon you want to get out into the fresh air after five minutes contact with them.

On the other hand, bodies and minds that are healthy and adjusted radiate an optimism that is contagious, too. People of this sort you never want to get away from.

Like a germ disease, skeptical, pessimistic people spread the virus of melancholy to all who are willing to listen to their gloomy ramblings. Like a germ disease, also, the troubles lies within themselves.

By nature all of us are hopeful. We may shake and fret and fume when things go awry — a severe illness, the financial disaster or the death of a beloved one, may even make us feel that there's nothing more to live for. Yet, despite rebuffs and reverses, the average man or woman rallies in the course and passes especially onward. We may be knocked down, but we rarely take the count.

It isn't so much what life really is, but what we look in that vitally matters. Happiness and despondency are actually only points of view.

Our unfortunate friends who forever see black have the wrong slant on life. They would have you believe that conditions in general are intolerable and that the world is going to the dogs.

In reality, gnawing at their souls is their own intolerable state of mind. Unconsciously, they see and interpret events according to their own morbid mental processes. Such people are sick!

Pessimists and cynics often claim that they are the best interpreters of the world. Chesterton has an answer for this argument. "The optimist sees more clearly than the pessimist," he says, "and the man who sees clearly is the man who alters it most."

And Helen to Stevenson: "A happy man is always a better thing to find than a five-dollar bill."

Root pessimism out of your system if it happens to be there. It is merciless thing to think doleful thoughts and, when it becomes a habit, the individual becomes a mental invalid.

Counteract pessimism with optimism. Fight black thoughts that lead to despair at every turn.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

The Intelligent regulation of one's food is essential to health. The woman who would thus regulate her own and her family's dietary must become familiar not only with the different foods available and their values, but with their caloric content. This means the amount of energy given off when food is oxidized (burned) in the body. There are many popular dietary books in which this information can be found, and these should be consulted.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Bobby "Plan to All Men" Shies Girl to Rebellion

Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"Mary Lou" is wearing off from the job of being charming to every man she meets. She is getting a reputation on "charm" as it was practiced in her mom girlhood, and which her daughter thinks today is a bit out-moded.

"Do you think she is making a mistake? and which type of girl do you think is more popular — the girl who always remembers her manners or the give-and-take girl who forgets all about them.

"Mary Lou's letter, which gives her side of the story:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Mother has always insisted that I should be equally nice to all men — those who bore me as much that I could scream, and those whom I happen to like. She thinks it's a girl's job to be nice to men, and not to seem to, until she marries or becomes engaged.

"But this business of working a three-time-a-day meal and charming to every man who comes along has got on my nerves. And I don't see the sense in it. I have the participation of being popular or not. Personally, my preference is for a man, one who will not be in the least humble when he comes to court me.

"After this I'm going to let the other girls do the entertaining. Entertaining. Pay myself, I'm going to be natural — and if natural means being rude, I can't help it. Anyway, a man who doesn't interest me isn't going to get a smile, and the man I spend an evening with will be one I selected myself.

"More than likely, I shall die an old maid.

"Mary Lou."

Mary Lou will probably not die an old maid; girls who are natural and independent seldom do.

Indeed, I wonder that one doesn't hear this girl's complaint more frequently; that there isn't a great deal of rebellion against being too nice, too many hours on a stretch, to too many young men who have nothing to recommend them.

Girls are human beings under their perennial chatwrarmore who call but never suggest even taking them to a movie. They come to family supper, but never dream of bringing a box of candy, and sit like stuffed owls and expect to be entertained. It's queer what mothers, like the famous Daighieff-produced ballets on consolidating. The autobiography is simply told; it does not emphasize in his words, "very lyrical outpourings or intimate confessions." Boris and Capell, reviewer on the Daily Telegraph, London, call it the most pleasing interest. "Indeed it will probably rank among the best books of the books written by the great musicians about themselves and their art."

C. W. Thurlow Craig presents in packed performance a rollicking tale of an Englishman's adventures among horses and men in the unbroken country, Northern Argentina. The Brazilian state of Mato Grosso, "Matto Grosso" to the natives, is one of the two sections of the country which the Indians have held away, where old time cow customs are still practiced in the grand manner. In this book, Mr. Craig tells of his life on the Estancia El Oran Chaco as a cattle buyer and ranch foreman, finding friends and cattle rustlers, lovers and murderers, and learning much about the Argentine Indians and their customs. "Time changes," he says, "but I do not think it has altered the Force the Chaco is a civilized country. Not in my lifetime, perhaps." The book is published by Seeley Service & Co. Limited, London.

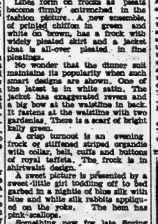
Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Aiden)

Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

It's no use dodging prints, for they are everywhere. A charming evening frock is of silk crepe printed in a sprawling floral design in red, green, blue and mauve in a soft, mottled treatment. The bodice has wide revers and a deep cowl back and the square decollete is very flattering.



Lines form on frocks as pleats and panels are introduced in the fashion picture. A new ensemble, of printed chiffon in green and white the dress has a fitted bodice, widely pleated skirt and a jacket that sees over the dress in front panels.

Don't confuse that the dinner suit maintains its popularity when such smart designs are shown. It is of white satin. The jacket has exaggerated revers and fully cut sleeves, while the skirt is fitted at the waistline with two wide pleats in the back. Perfectly grey.

Evening turnout is an evening frock or stiffened striped organdie with collar, bell cuffs and buttons of royal taffeta. Finish is a tiny shirtwaist design.

A sweet picture is presented by a sweet-little girl toddling off to bed garbed in a nightie of blue silk with bloe and white silk rabbits appliqued on the yoke. The hem has picot edge.

Something new for late Spring and early summer wear is the Chesterfield coat, double-breasted and with wide revers, made of rough white woollen.

Good Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My mother and father will be married fifty years next month and he would like to have a few invitations in regard to a lunch for the family and a reception for friends.

What hour would you suggest for the reception for friends? Should invitations be sent?

We cannot do anything expensive, but we do want a nice and pleasant day for our loved parents.

Daughter.

The simplest type of celebration for this occasion, and one of the most charming, is the afternoon reception, a tea or buffet supper gathering, as tea hour, four to seven. I suggest this for your party.

You might ask the relatives and close friends by telephone and write notes of invitation to others.

For your menu for the four-to seven party, you have a few appetizing food-accessories that are customarily served at tea-time tea, with coffee as an alternative; simple sandwiches of various kinds; and small cakes, perhaps some frosted. I suggest serving from the tea-table, instead of having the guests come to the tea-service at one end of the room, and another friend to preside over the coffee service at the opposite end. Have all the cups ready before these places. Then have piles of plates with small napkins between every two plates. And serving dishes with the sandwiches and cakes.

If you would like to have a more charming if you could have a wedding cake for the centre decoration of the table. If you wish to have ice cream as dessert you might cut the wedding cake and serve slices of this with the ice cream. Or this might be the dessert for the family luncheon party.

You don't give me much information to go on for the luncheon menu, as to number of guests and so forth, but for the first course you might have soup, served in bouillon cups, or slices of melon, or a fruit cocktail, or a shrimp cocktail. For the main course it might be most convenient to have a casserole, a chicken casserole, for instance, for this could be prepared early in the day. Or boned chicken or lamb chops, or a roast chicken. Mashed sweet potatoes with marshmallows on top, which has a pretty appearance. Peas or some other green vegetable. Hot rolls. Then as I suggested above, the dessert might be ice cream and slices of the wedding cake. Or any other dessert for which you are famous!

SECRET MARRIAGE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We have been married for nearly three years, and for certain reasons we have not been able to tell our friends. We are both past twenty-five.

Do you think it is too late to send out engraved announcements, or would you think that we should notes telling our friends that we are married? Many many of our friends live out of town and we cannot see them personally.

Yes, I do definitely think that it is too late a time after your marriage to send engraved announcements. It would be much more in taste to tell those relatives and friends who live near, and to write notes to those who live out of town. Then the happy news will spread soon enough.

BRIDGE TABLE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a three-piece living room set in library table and two lamps and a radio in my living-room, and I would like to know if it would be proper to have bridge and tea there in a corner of the room where it will be handy. The bridge table and chairs are covered with maroon leatherette, which my furniture goes beautifully. We entertain quite a bit, and it would be most convenient to have the bridge set ready for the playing of cards.

L.C.

It is "high fashion" in interior decoration these days to keep the bridge table and chairs set up in a convenient corner of the living-room . . . and especially if they are good-looking and in harmony with the other living-room pieces. So by all means do this.

Library Corner

The story of European art during the glamorous years of the grave great rulers, Diaghilieff, Nijinsky and Travinsky, already begun by biographies of Diaghilieff by Haskell and of Nijinsky by his wife, is now completed with the biography of Igor Stravinsky. His life covers the period from 1880 through the years of the World War. The story of the man who molded the ballet through the years of the third of a century. Born near Petrograd in 1882, he grew near hearing music, by choosing law as a profession, until on the advice of Rimski-Korsakoff he devoted all time to music alone. A symphony and some orchestral pieces were his first productions, and in 1910 he wrote The Firebird for the Diaghilieff Russian Company, delighting musicians and the public with the success. Petrushka, easily of his compositions. From then, his is a story of continued successes, chiefly in the ballet. His Sacre du Printemps, from Igor Fokine's ballet, and his famous Daighieff-produced ballets are considered. The autobiography is simply told; it does not emphasize in his words, "very lyrical outpourings or intimate confessions." Bathroom

In almost every home there is one particular room that is decidedly neglected. It is to the bathroom that I refer. Is it not a fact that last year's bat been to your new winter coat . . . is dated right now? Is your bathroom? And we'll wager that this particular bathroom of yours is in almost every home . . . it's the bathroom every time. It is so easy to let home-like touches creep out of the room in the club, call it quits and get to work on the new dining room dream. It is hoped this news you be the means of making you see that the bathroom is the most livable room in the house, and the blank face of the bathroom is not to be the accustomed of the average housewife. And attention it is getting, too, as a walk through the home furnishing departments of our larger stores will show you. You will go back home . . . to take stock . . . the wherewithal to do your best for the family system.

These days there are such grand things you can do in the way of fixing up the bathroom. The old tiles that white and more white is the only thing . . . the only sanitary thing that . . . for the back is a tale of the past. Color touches the modern bath. Not too dark a major color since you will want good light for shaving purposes, but the walls and ceiling are pastured and there must be light and privacy of it is to spend hours at the dressing.

For example, get some grey paint . . . there are shades and shades of it, each more striking and appealing than the last . . . but be careful, get a warm soft grey with plenty of depth. Your paint dealer will help you gladly in your choice. Picture the walls of soft grey paint; dark, iron grey linoleum on the floor (most of it with a tile to the tub) and a white ceiling. Hang the walls; for your important fixtures a yellow red . . . a rose that is not too pronounced with your own two heads by the means of a reliable lacquer or enamel, your woodwork grained in dark red . . . this last needn't be a complicated job, and the results are simply not expensive and the accompanying are not expensive and the accompanying are not expensive and the accompanying are

McMULLEN WILL LIKELY RECOVER

Canadian Desperado, Acme of Physical Perfection Says Doctor

Seattle, May 30.—(CP)—Dan McMullen, desperado wounded at the hospital here as John Albert Arthur Fraser of Vancouver, but identified by the authorities as Edward McMullen, gunman associate of the slain Norman F. "Red" Ryan, remained unconscious today but physicians said he probably would recover.

Dr. Walter Kelton, attending surgeon, said: "He's the acme of physical perfection, so far above the average man that he will probably recover, although he will never be well."

McMullen, or Fraser as he is known in United States authorities, was brought to the hospital in Bellingham, Wash. yesterday, less than 24 hours after he shot down immigration officials at Blaine, Wash.

The officials' intention to search McMullen when his arrest was made to satisfy them sent the burly former railway worker of Wyoming, Utah, for one of the two guns he carried.

Reward Not Sought

Bellingham, Wash., May 30.—(CP)—No attempt will be made by United States Immigration and Customs Inspectors at Blaine, Wash., to collect a $1,000 reward offered by Ontario authorities for the capture of Edward McMullen, gunman associate of Norman F. "Red" Ryan, McMullen, wanted in Toronto for the slaying of Kevin Stockbridge at Markham, Ont., is in a Seattle hospital with a self-inflicted bullet wound in the head after he shot and killed Immigration Inspector Charles Fluchs at the Blaine Customs House, Thursday.

Brockville Constable Moved

Brockville, May 29—(CP)—Intimation of an early transfer to Belleville has been received by Provincial Constable T. P. Robinson, who has been stationed here for the past eight years and who has also served as high constable for Leeds County. He is likely to be succeeded by Constable W. J. Carey, of Cobourg.

Dangerous Man

Vancouver, May 30.— (CP)— R. Tucker, Dominion Warden at Kingston Penitentiary, said today he knew Edward McMullen as "Red" Ryan would have "gone straight" after his release as parole if he had not come under the influence of Edward McMullen, partner-in-crime of the late gang leader, and now dying from self-inflicted gun wounds in a Seattle hospital.

"I think Ryan would have gone straight had he not met McMullen on his release from penitentiary", said Tucker. "McMullen is a dangerous man as Deputy Warden at Canada's largest penal institution, Kingston Pen., I had many dealings with him. He was cold as ice, silent impassable as the Rock of Gibraltar. I had a bright future when he left penitentiary. I have no doubt he but others. I regret very much that Ryan was from the path of rectitude. He was the most dangerous man I ever knew in Kingston."

If it had not been for McMullen, Tucker said, Ryan might never have resumed the life of crime that led to his death in a hail of police gunfire on an airplane hold-up of the Sarnia, Ont., Bayer store last week.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Next Time We Love"

It is always an outstanding, pleasant screen event when Margaret Sullavan is starred in a new picture. Her latest offering, the Universal film "Next Time We Love" by Ursula Parrott, came to the Capitol Theatre on Monday. From the title you know that it is a drama of love, its sequences are lighted with the love of laughter; shadowed with the reality of life.

Beginning with an impulsive marriage, the photoplay unfolds the dramatic happenings which follow in its wake. The wife becomes a famous star on the stage and screen; the husband pursues a career as a foreign correspondent. The husband's best friend falls in love with the wife, but don't try to guess the outcome of this triangle.

While the husband is hunting for important news to cable his paper, the wife is scoring a hit on Broadway. The screen shows the events happening in Europe and abroad; the bubbling triumphs of the wife's stirring. Against these contrasting backgrounds, the most disparate stands out, painted in sure strokes, with quickening action and stirring tempo. There is the wife's unconsciousness for her husband; the man's' whirling from one place to another, seeking news. Possibly he is driven by wanderlust, by the love of excitement.

The high point of the story is reached when the wife can no longer endure the lonesomeness. When the husband's urge to search the face of the earth almost brings their love to ruin. "Next Time We Love" is a picture of heart throbs, of ; exquisite tenderness, of soul satisfying drama. See it at the Capitol.

Everybody will be discussing this picture and you will be telling your friends about the film of the month before they tell you.... We suggest that you plan your theatre party now.

AT THE BELLE

"Under Two Flags"

Motion picture fans who breath heavily inflated Ronald Colman in "Beau Geste" and who adored Fredric March in "Anthony Adverse" in One Night", have a great new treat in store for them in "Under Two Flags" at the Belle. The picture brings these two titans of the screen together in one that surpass either the most magnificent of their past triumphs.

Produced under the personal supervision of Darryl F. Zanuck, this classic, emerging power, humorous love and searing conflict set in the Sahara comes today to the Belle Theatre. Based on the novel by Ouida, famous French Foreign Legion, a lovely flirt, she toys with the affections of Victor McLaglen, Legionnaire major, until she meets Colman, a member of the ranks. Then she inquisitively loses her heart to him.

The drama gains in power and intensity with the appearance of Rosalind Russell, a fragile English beauty. Before her arrival at the desert to help stem an Arab revolt, Colman has reclared his love for her.

Rumored in by hostile forces, Mclaglen vengefully attempts to destroy Colman, whom he believes has come between himself and Miss Oilbert. But Colman saves the day by a daring ruse, and a magnificent charge of the Legion, led by Miss Colbert, results in the defeat of the Arab forces.

The magnificent supporting cast of forty character stars includes such prominent players as Gregory Ratoff, Nigel Bruce, C. Henry Gordon and J. Edward Bromberg. Frank Lloyd, director of "Cavalcade" and "Mutiny on the Bounty" directed this production which called for thousands of extras and its sweeping and magnificent natural backgrounds.

The Belle Latest World News Flashes, and Mickey's Pals, a clever and funny Mickey Mouse cartoon, complete the exhibition of the feature attraction.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.00 p.m. Sunday show starts at 2.30, 7.30 and 9.30 p.m.

Belief in the power of the subconscious, of soul satisfying dreams, of soul salvation through the universal appeal of the love of man and woman, is the theme of "Strange Interlude" which comes to the Belle Theatre on Friday and Saturday.

Based on the famous play by Eugene O'Neill, which won the Pulitzer prize for drama, "Strange Interlude" is a picture of deep human interest. Starring Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Robert Young, Alexander Kirkland and Ralph Morgan, the picture is a faithful adaptation of the play which ran for many months on the New York stage.

Norma Shearer, as Nina Leeds, is the central figure around which the story revolves. Her love for Gable, Young and Kirkland, and the tragedy which follows, is the theme of the picture.

Nina Leeds is a woman who has been disappointed in love. Her father, a professor, has failed to understand her. Her fiance is killed in the war. Her husband is a man who is unable to satisfy her emotional needs. Her children are a disappointment to her. Her life is a series of disappointments

BELMONTS LEAD INDUSTRIAL LOOP

Three Interesting Games Played in League Friday Night

Three more games of interesting softball were played in the Bell industrial Softball League last evening, the Belmonts, Wire Mill and the Belleville-Sargent annexed victories.

At the Cricket Field Oy Berrigay's Belmont Restaurant nine won their second consecutive victory and elevated their standing to league leaders, when they downed the Consolidated Optical team by the score of 9 to 8 in an interesting and well-played game. The Belmonts scored four runs in the fourth frame to clinch the honors. Fenner pitched the winners, pitching splendid ball throughout and Dafoe afforded air-tight support by his usual clever work. Hamilton in the Optical, pitched equally as good, however, but the Belmonts bunched their hits and scored runs. A couple of miscues made by the "eyeglass manufacturers" helped those credited with three strikes outs and only one walk issued, that being by Shortt.

The line-ups—Optical—Tuttle c; Hurst 1; Gibson it; Semark ss; Thrasher 2b; Risher lb; Day 3b; Shortt rf; Hamilton p; Cummings cf.—Morgan 2b; Amo ss; Cooper rf; Harrigan c; Purcell lb; Townsend cf; Dracup p; B. Morgan if and Trapp 3b.

Score by innings:

Optical—4 1 1 0 2 0 1 —8 runs. Belmonts—4 0 0 4 1 0 0 —9 runs. Umpires—Rawdon and Henn.

Wire Mill Victorious

At the College Field the West End squad bowed to the Wire Mill 13 to 5 in a drubbing, it being the first win for the West Ending and the first taste of defeat for the losers. The West End team gained an early game ascendancy when they scored a quickied their lead despite the fact the Clare team made a determined rally for three runs in the sixth. Earl Clarke hurled for the West Enders and was forced to the limit, as his team mates kicked in with six flaming errors, whilst the Clare team only booked the apple for three miscues. The winners got their 13 Class 15 to 6, however, thanks to the opposing pitching of Clarke. Latchford's fine fielding for the losers made him a stand out, while on the mound Clare starred.

The line-ups—Class — Latchford, ss; McGuire, 2b; Bissell, cf; Kiser rf and p; Sharpe c; Moon 1b; Blackman lf; Mallhiot 3b; Hamilton and Bellis lf. West End—M. Clarke 2b; D. Pully rf; Brown 3b; Clarke p; Ling lf; A. Pully cf; J. Canning c; Emerson rf and Booth 1b.

Home Runs Help

Home runs materially assisted the Bell-Sargent "rockbreakers" in downing the Corbin Locks 21 to 10 at the Trenton Ball ground in the final game of the night. The Bell-Sargent bowlers hit long drives into the air, a tie for first place with the Belmonds by virtue of their perfect consecutive victory last night. Tom Hughes, hurling for the Bell-sargent masterfully assisted his mates by batting two home runs, while Fred McGuire, Cecil Robinson and Westfall also hit for the circuit for the winning side.

Assuming an early lead the Bell-Sargent "rock breakers" experienced little difficulty in downing the weakened Corbins outfit, who were minus several of their regular players owing to their having to work. Graham, Corbin pitcher, shared the hurling labours for the Corbin nine.

Three games are scheduled in the local Industrial Softball League on Monday night with Class resting, Bell-Sargent at the College Field, Belmonds and West End clashing at the Yeomans St. grounds and Corbins meeting the Optical at the Cricket Field.

The line-ups—Bell-Sargent—McDonald, Anderson, Darrah, Hughes, Martin, Bushell, Robinson, F. McGuire, Westfall, C. McGuire and T. Hughes. Corbins—Sirven, Smith, Graham, Jenkinson, Allen, Thompson, Samain, Jenkinson and F. Graham.

Score by innings:

Bell-Sargent 3362323—21 runs
Corbins—0100000—1 run
Umpires—Oliphant and Fisher.

Yesterday's Stars

Al Smith, Giants—Pitched hitless ball for seven innings and let Boston Bees down with two hits as New York won 3-0.

Goose Goslin and Clarence Philippe, Tigers—Between them banged three runs as Phillips nosed out Chicago White Sox 3-2 in 10 innings.

Chuck Klein, Phillies—Had homer, double and single, batting in five runs in 10-3 win over Brooklyn.

Dixy Dean, Cardinals—Drove in winning run and pitched shutout ball in relief role as Pirates were defeated 8-7.

Curt Davis, Cubs—Had Chicago scout with Cubs by night pitching in 5-1 victory over Reds.

CANNIFTON WINS OVER FOXBORO

Wilkins And Ashley Hook Up in a Wound Duel

Canniffon, May 30 (Special)—The Foxboro Leads lost their opening game of the season here Friday night when Canniffon "imports" nosed out Doc Blakely's boys from Foxboro 3-2.

The win elevates Canniffon into a tie with Latta, each having won two games against no defeats.

Canniffon's new players from Belleville showed up to advantage last night as they were well in the field and at bat.

Hitting when hits meant runs was the main factor in Wilkin's first win of the season. Although outhit eight to six, Canniffon made their hits when when they hit for extra bases in the pinches.

Considering the roughness of the diamond the infield, on which games played well, Canniffon hooting the ball for two errors and Foxboro one. Canniffon kicked in with a fast double play in the ninth. Honours are credited with three strike outs and only one walk issued, that being by Shortt.

Wire Mill Victorious

At the College Field the West End squad bowed to the Wire Mill 13 to 5 in a drubbing, it being the first win for the West Ending and the first taste of defeat for the losers. The West End team gained an early game ascendancy when they scored quickied their lead despite the fact the Clare team made a determined rally for three runs in the sixth. Earl Clarke hurled for the West Enders and was forced to the limit, as his team mates kicked in with six flaming errors, whilst the Clare team only booked the apple for three miscues. The winners got their 13 Class 15 to 6, however, thanks to the opposing pitching of Clarke. Latchford's fine fielding for the losers made him a stand out, while on the mound Clare starred.

The line-ups—Class — Latchford, ss; McGuire, 2b; Bissell, cf; Kiser rf and p; Sharpe c; Moon 1b; Blackman lf; Mallhiot 3b; Hamilton and Bellis lf. West End—M. Clarke 2b; D. Pully rf; Brown 3b; Clarke p; Ling lf; A. Pully cf; J. Canning c; Emerson rf and Booth 1b.

Home Runs Help

Home runs materially assisted the Bell-Sargent "rock breakers" in downing the Corbin Locks 21 to 10 at the Trenton Ball ground in the final game of the night. The Bell-Sargent bowlers hit long drives into the air, a tie for first place with the Belmonds by virtue of their perfect consecutive victory last night. Tom Hughes, hurling for the Bell-sargent masterfully assisted his mates by batting two home runs, while Fred McGuire, Cecil Robinson and Westfall also hit for the circuit for the winning side.

Assuming an early lead the Bell-Sargent "rock breakers" experienced little difficulty in downing the weakened Corbins outfit, who were minus several of their regular players owing to their having to work. Graham, Corbin pitcher, shared the hurling labours for the Corbin nine.

Three games are scheduled in the local Industrial Softball League on Monday night with Class resting, Bell-Sargent at the College Field, Belmonds and West End clashing at the Yeomans St. grounds and Corbins meeting the Optical at the Cricket Field.

The line-ups—Bell-Sargent—McDonald, Anderson, Darrah, Hughes, Martin, Bushell, Robinson, F. McGuire, Westfall, C. McGuire and T. Hughes. Corbins—Sirven, Smith, Graham, Jenkinson, Allen, Thompson, Samain, Jenkinson and F. Graham.

Chuck Klein, Phillies—Had homer, double and single, batting in five runs in 10-3 win over Brooklyn.

Dixy Dean, Cardinals—Drove in winning run and pitched shutout ball in relief role as Pirates were defeated 8-7.

Curt Davis, Cubs—Had Chicago scout with Cubs by night pitching in 5-1 victory over Reds.

From chef's tall hat to the stills out of a racing jockey is the story of Tryus Meloche, of Windsor, Ont., who is riding on American tracks this season. Meloche was signed as a physician to try a new occupation but he would retain his health, Malochs tossed up his restaurant job in Windsor and went a-riding. From scarcity by no race ridin' was the next step—result, a consultation and one of the turf's most promising hooters.

BUFFALO BISONS FULL GAME AHEAD OF NEWARK BEARS

Rose Leafs in Night Game While Bears Lose to Orioles

GMIEFS WIN GAME

"Beauty" McGowan Hits Homer, Double, Single Against Leafs

An unexpected reversal of homerun form is threatening to give Newark Bears some trouble in their duel with Buffalo Bisons. During the first week home stands Bisons were almost unbeatable, but since their return from the north in the middle of May they haven't been able to hold the same pace against the cellar second division clubs.

As a result the Bears are a full game behind the Bisons, who apparently won't be halted for any reason at all. After losing two out of three games to Baltimore, the Bears took the road for a while, then returned home for a short session to the up-and-coming Baltimore Orioles.

A 6-3 setback yesterday, coupled with Buffalo's 13-4 rout of Toronto Maple Leafs at Island, looks a virtual tie for the lead. The only other game was the last inning Syracuse Chiefs, Newark's next opponent affair in Baltimore, which went extra-zesty to life and why Albany Senators 9-3 under the floodlights. Jersey City Giants, Newark, the Bears took the road for a while, then returned home for a short session to the up-and-coming Baltimore Orioles.

In spite of the fact it being too chilly for good sound performances both Wilkins and Ashley turned in good games. Wilkins turned eight batters back on the strikeout route and didn't issue a single free ticket while Ashley whiffed five and walked only one.

In the first Bud Johnston singled after two were out but was left stranded when E. Ketcheson flied to left. In Canniffon's half Empson walked, stole second, Blakey to Stewart, Moens bunted and was safe when Ashley threw late to first in a third inning to get Empson. Moens stole second and Blakey retired following the socks. Empson was forced at the plate on Gray's tap to Johnston. Moens scored on Wilkins' single. This ended Canniffon's hitting with the exception of F. Murray's double in the fourth.

Foxboro scored twice in the fourth when E. Ketcheson and Blakey singled in succession, advancing on a wild pitch by Wilkins. Johnston scored on H. Ketcheson's single, Blakey taking third and scoring after Gray's fly-out to left.

E. Ketcheson, Blakey and Ashley led off for Foxboro in the seventh, having three put-outs in left and Johnston, Ketcheson and Gray each at first. Both these boys hit well also, getting a brace of hits apiece.

F. Murray, Canniffon's first sack, went getting a homer and a double while Empson, Moens and Moens got two apiece accounting for all of Canniffon's hits and runs.

Mail replaced Johnston in the fourth going to centre field, Guay behind third. Harry Ketcheson replaced Stewart at first when Stewart suddenly grew ill and left the game and was ejected from the game.

ALBERT LIMITED TO 2 HITS BY AMO

St. Mikes' Softball Squad Win First Game Of Playoffs

Behind two hit pitching by Stan Amo, St. Michael's College softballers drew first blood in the senior intercholastic softball finals when they defeated Albert College 4 runs to 11 to 1 on the home grounds yesterday afternoon.

Amo was in rare form, allowing only two safeties, one from the pellet of B. Clouse and the other collected by McDonald. Although Amo issued five free passes and was touched for seven hits, the Albert crew could not knock the ball out of the infield, Amo fanning seven batters. The pitcher air-tight support. The "Irish" touched "Rocky" Albert's moundsman, for six hits, one being a home run, which landed the ball for three miscues. Albert's lone run was scored, however, O'Neil Peets and Hughes were the heavy wielders for the Albert College crew.

The play-off series in the senior intercholastic softball league is of the two out of three series, the second game of the schedule being scheduled to be played at Albert College on Monday afternoon.

The box score:

St. Michael's — Giffin, Amo, O'Neil, Peets, Healey, Brown, Burns, Lawton, Barry and J. Peets.

CURRENT SPORT

DAN BY DAN

The bulk of today's column will be devoted to some comments on the informal outlining of the baseball scoring rules generally recognized by big league, and most little league, scorers. Inasmuch as we are daily confronted with the task of trying to decipher score cards, sent in to us and from which are expected to paint a glowing word-picture of the sport's results, we intend to skip lightly over the fundamental rules of scoring. The following scoring rules, or shorthand devices employed by many scorers, may be interesting to the fans, but we hope more particularly to aspiring local scorers.

x x x

The whole system is based upon the numbering of the nine positions on the team from 1 to 9. As regards baseball, the pitcher is No. 1, the catcher is No. 2, the baseman is No. 3, the baseman is No. 4, the baseman is No. 5, the baseman is No. 6, the baseman is No. 7, the baseman is No. 8, the baseman is No. 9. Now, when a batter hits a ball to the baseman who is numbered 3, he is credited with that in addition to the time he is marked down as an assist, and the baseman the putout. If the first baseman had retired the batter on an infield fly, merely the number 3 would have told the story. And if the first baseman had received the batter by scooping up a ground ball near the bag and touching the runner on first, we would mark down 3a to indicate that the fielder had scored his own assist. Therefore, it was not a fly ball. He does not receive credit for the assist in the box score but it helps you tell your story later. And if there is a 7 in the box score, you know that the first-baseman ran back off the diamond and made a fly catch. The same goes for the catcher and the third baseman. Supposing you saw the number 1-4-3 in a scorebook.

x x x

The whole picture is before you instantly. The batter stopped a pitcher at the plate who would start his injured hand (if he is a right-hander) to his mouth to warm and deflected the ball, killing its speed, to the second baseman who ran over and touched it with his foot. The mysterious combination is 1-4-3 in your score sheet. The hand is grounder which pulled the first baseman off his bag fielding it cleanly, and the pitcher covered the bag and took the throw.

x x x

But, what if the batter gets a hit? Or if safe on an error, or forces a man at second, or walks, or is hit by the pitched ball, retires out? Ah, now the symbolism becomes a little more complicated. Each indicates a strikeout, and it is usually written K3 to indicate that the batter struck out swinging. A K3 in the lower right hand corner indicates the man reached first on a walk. An "E" at the top of the frame would tell us the stole second. If the shortstop pobbles a grounder and your batting is each, "BB" is the lower right hand corner records that tragedy for all posterity. An "F" in the same spot would indicate that the batter is on first only by virtue of forcing a comrade at second, the runny. And "FO" in the same spot is your old friend Fielder's choice.

x x x

Next baseball reporters will have another set of scoring rules, for the simplest is a single straight line, standing for a hit. In the center of the hit, two lines for a double, three for a triple, and four for the sensational home run. If the home run, with a little dot at the end of the line, indicating that it was scored. A wavy line indicates a beat, or an infield hit, and a broken line, a fielder's choice. Put a number, also, to indicate the baseman who handled the ball, and you have before you a complete picture of the game. Also, to notate "PH" beneath the number of his debut.

x x x

There are a few more symbols in the list for scorers to learn. A wild pitch, and "WPB," hit by batsmen, and "HBP," a passed ball, to remember, "PB." If you follow the batter round the diamond, A single is right to first, a double is right to second, a triple is right to third, a home run is right to the plate. Finally, a man who has been safely in the batter-of a scoring play, standing for "run batted in." Yes, to notate "RBI" beneath the number of his debut.

Although the game may not be a too detailed description of how to score a ball game, it will show in a general idea of how it is made possible to check-back and follow the various plays that are made during the game. The main points are hoped to bring before inexperienced scorers are the proper methods to record hits and outs' playper numbers, etc., on the score card. At least we hope the above is worded plainly enough to be understood by all. Maybe today's column should have carried the heading—"Baseball Scoring Simplified."

Peterboro—One of the local seniors pushed off for the Little City this afternoon, where they will shortly before noon today. Although it is a splendid practice last night and Manager Weir was unable to get Bill Bennett, Ed Louis right back, or start Rusk Smith on the hilltop today against Simon Johnson's Petes.

As upon interscholastic field day and track meet is being held in Peterboro today. Many Trenton scholastic scholars from the O.S.D., St. Michael's and the Collegiate Institute have journeyed in some of the events. Ron Doyle, Tom Lloyd and Frank Lagroix are among the contingent from St. Mike's. Incidentally, the annual "Field Day" of the Belleville Collegiate is slated for Saturday, May 30th at Trenton.

Plenty of softball was on the books last evening locally. First, St. Michael's Academy won the initial game of the new senior intercholastic softball play-offs to followed by the Belleville Y.M.C.A.-Y.W.C.A. League "mushball". Later the Industrial Softball leaguers assumed the limelight with two games. Belleville-Sargent clubs are now out in front of the city with wins and no defeats in their credit. Some real snappy games of softball are being staged and the interest which is attracting more attention as the league schedule advances.

DRIVERS EXPECT TO BREAK RECORD IN INDIANAPOLIS RACE

Indianapolis, Ind., May 30 (AP)—With motors roaring, 33 of the fastest race drivers in the United States lined up their tiny streamlined cars three abreast today awaiting the explosion of a bomb at 10 a.m. C.A.S. (11 o'clock, eastern standard time) to start the 500-mile automobile race over the Indianapolis motor speedway.

The field was the fastest ever to roll up to the starting line in America's speed classic.

Not one of the 33 racing cars failed to qualify in the 10-mile qualifying test at less than 111 miles an hour. As a result of this terrific speed, records for the race were in danger.

Officials were hopeful also of breaking the record 1935 crowd of 140,000 at the recently rebuilt and remodeled speedway.

Prize money totaling $100,000 dangled before the speeding drivers with $30,000 going to the winner.

Drivers assumed starting starting positions in recognition of past performances. Starting in front row: Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis; Louis Schneider, Indianapolis; Peter Kreis, Indianapolis; Freddie Frame, Los Angeles; Babe Stapp, Los Angeles; Chet Miller, Anderson, Ind.; Ralph Hepburn, Los Angeles and Marvin Rose, Dayton, O.

Each driver's qualifying record was spent on the course this spring in practice runs, and in the qualifying and tragic deaths. In the 23 years of racing, more than 25 drivers have lost as accidents in the turns around which the drivers speed at 110 miles an hour have been resurfaced with a composition which covers the great expanse of brick pavement. Instead of American motor car development, the drivers were compelled to use the high octane type of gasoline for the full 500 miles. Last year, the average 13.33 miles per gallon.

Australia and U. S. Launch Tennis Finals

Philadelphia, May 30 (AP)—Australia and the United States, who have fought many friendly battles on the tennis courts, will resume their private rivalry today when they launch the finals of the Davis Cup tennis final.

The opening singles matches, which comprise the first day's program, sent Wilmer Allison, the Texas ace, against Adrian Quist, the Australian thirty-year-old veteran, and Bryan Budge of Oakland, Calif., against the veteran Jack Crawford, captain of the invaders.

The one doubles match will be played Saturday and Allison and the strapping Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, meet Quist and Crawford and Quist.

The grey, pitting Allison against Quist in the curtain-raiser, was regarded as a "break" for the Australian captain, who is given the assurance that he will hit his stride immediately. Allison is held to be in the role of underdog.

Ottawa Senators Still On Top Can-Am.Loop

The Canadian American Baseball League moved to the United States in toto for a double-bill schedule, but Ottawa Senators still remain at the standing after their 3-0 defeat at the hands of Utica.

Three passes gave the Senators victory with Lefty Carr pitching masterful ball for Ottawa. Darkness halted the game at seven innings. Senators scored all three runs in the first inning and from that time on Carr was master in pitchers' duel between Carr and Al Moran.

Cold gloved the play and kept the crowd down to a few at Perth while Ogdensburg's game at Cowpox was postponed on account of wet grounds.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, May 30 (CP)—Trading was slow on the Toronto mining market today with prices holding fairly steady.

Falconbridge ¾. Pickle Crow gained 15. Buffalo Ankerite advanced nearly 40 and gains of about 3 cents were boarded for Red Lake, Siscoe, Central Patricia, Canadian Malartic and Bidgood. Reed Exploration a gain of about 10 and Preston was up about 10. Pamour advanced 30 and Thompson-Lundmark added about 7.

Noranda changed hands at $7, its high price of the year and up 14 for the day. Hollinger was slightly stronger and Sherritt a bit easy.

A few penny issues moved up 1 to 3 cents including Kirkland Lake, Howey, Goldale, Moneta and Greene Stabler.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS CLOSE

Toronto, May 30—The Toronto industrial share market finished the month in a display of mild weakness.

Canadian Industrial Alcohol A lost the minimum fraction and the other liquor leaders were steady and quiet. Nickel and Smelters were unchanged to slightly lower and Brazilian Traction and Ford A closed unchanged. C.P.R. slipped a minor fraction.

Oil issues showed more strength than other groups, British American, Imperial and International Petroleum all closing with gains of ¼ to ⅛. Pantepec was steady. In the utilities the Gordon Power stocks ruled weak and Bell Telephone firmed a fraction.

The banks posted gains of a point or two each, changes in base building and industrials ran up size and higher prices for the Weston issue featured the food group. Gains elsewhere included fractions for International Metals, Imperial Tobacco, the Steel of Canada stocks and Moore Corporation.

Cheese Board

A total of 1478 while and 39 colored cheese offered on Saturday's regular Cheese Board commanded a price of 17-8 cents, the highest bid of the year. Buyers present were Messrs. Taylor, Hart, Hunter, McCreary, Cook, Morton, Hill, Murphy and Oatpon. Bidding opened at 11 1-4 cents. The following factories were represented:

Shannonville 53; Bronk 44; Harold 57; Moneymore 41; Silver Springs 43; Union 36; Eclipse 39; Eclipse Sidney 25; Acme 48; Wooler 42; Sidney 71; H. 43; Maple Leaf 34; Cloverdale 47; Huntingdon 16; Melrose 94; Glen 60; East Hastings 28; Monteagle 46; Mountain View 32; Rising 26; Victoria 21; Roblig 40; Glen 31; Beulah 23; Deseronto 43; Plum Grove 16; Wauper 45 colored; Black River 30; Alexander 63; Spring Hill 31.

JUTLAND STILL INDECISIVE BATTLE, 20 YEARS AFTER

On May 31, 1916, the greatest naval battle of history was fought when the British and German high seas fleets met in the battle of Jutland, off the coast of Denmark, during the world war. The result, indecisive at the time, is still a subject of hot debate, though Britain lost more ships and men, the German fleet never again ventured from port to give battle. At Jut-land, and the Germans, 11 ships and land, Britain's fleet under Admiral 2,545 men. The engagement started John Jellicoe, consisted of 28 battle- when the British and German high ships, seven battle- cruisers, plus seas fleets met in the battle of Jut- cruisers, light cruisers and destroyers, and the German fleet, under Admiral Reinhardt Von Scheer had 22 battleships, five battle cruisers and about 70 destroyers.

The British lost 14 ships and 6,097

Board Room Gossip

As supplied to Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

A Pleasant Surprise.

The Noranda dividend announcement of $1.25 a share for the first six months of the year came as a real surprise as it had been generally anticipated that the regular dividend of $1.00 a share would be declared in view of Mr. Murdoch's recent statement "of a pleasant surprise at the end of the year." It now appears quite likely that a larger dividend will be declared at the end of the year and it is possible that total disbursements for the year may amount to $2.75 per share.

With interest mainly maintained in the mining issues, the Industrial market is being neglected, despite the fact that some issues in that section have declined to some attractive levels, from an appreciation and income standpoint. In time, public interest will again veer towards the major board, but in the meantime the vogue is entirely for the mines.

The declaration of $1.25 a share on Noranda for the half-year was not surprising and in all probability shareholders will receive about $2.75 this year. This security is very highly regarded in many investment quarters and the recent buying in it has been of an excellent character.

Copper Improves

Further improvement in the copper situation is shown by April 30 figures, both world and United States stocks of the red metal declined, and consumption increased. In the United States, stocks at the end of April stood at 233,600 tons, down 25,001 tons in the month; consumption there increased 3,282 tons to a total of 59,700 tons. Thus at present rates, United States stocks amount to less than four months' supply, an amount which is not particularly burdensome. World stocks are sufficient for less than 3½ months' demand at the present consuming rate.

The American Liquor Companies

Stimulated by seasonal factors and by a generally lower price level, sales of liquor across the line, are currently running as much as 35% above last year, according to unofficial estimates. Withdrawals of domestic distilled spirits for the first three months of this year were 32% above the 1935 quarter and 120% above 1934 and are the wider gap for May because of the further wave of price-cutting and the settlement of the problems in Pennsylvania.

The reduction in the tax on Canadian imports has not greatly affected the industry as a whole. Most of the distillers report that upwards of 80% of their output is in the cheaper blends which have not been affected by price reductions in the higher and medium priced whiskeys. And since many distillers use Canadian whiskeys as a base for blending, the reduction in the tariff has had its beneficial aspects.

Earnings of the leading domestic factors in the distilling end of the industry have been averaging well above last year in reflection of the increased consumption. Price cutting has been going on irregularly, but thus far the periodic waves of extreme competition have been largely at the sacrifice of the profit margins of the distributors or retailers. It is hinted that the recent price war in New York City was caused by the action of a leading distiller discontinuing independent distributors with the manufacturing company planning to deal directly with the retailer in the future. The report lacks official confirmation, but doubtless the industry has given serious thought to the discontinuance of the middleman and quite possibly the price war was designed to bring other distillers into line as a means of lowering retail prices. On the other hand, it is generally believed that prices are bound to be gradually lowered as the supply of bonded spirits increases and that from now on the distillers will be forced to bear the larger share of any wide scale reduction.

SYNOPSIS

Aboard the S. S. "Navarre," bound for America, Michael Lanyard, reformed "Lone Wolf" of London, is reunited with his son whom he thought dead. Lanyard is disappointed to learn that the boy, travelling under the name of Maurice Parry," is a thief; but he hopes his son's love for Penno Cromer, lovely daughter of the wealthy Mrs. Cromer, will prove a good influence. Maurice steals from Mrs. Cromer's friend, Mrs. Amos Hasbrug, some costly counterfeit. Lanyard takes the blame for Fay. In a bridge game Lanyard exposes two gamblers, "Jack Ember" and "Count" Ireland Archie," for cheating his son. Detective Wanz swears revenge against their revenge. Soon the scandals are linked again and Lanyard is suspected when he refuses to name the thief. Mr. and Mrs. French detective and Captain Pascal are confident of Lanyard's guilt when the "proof" is found in the latter's trunk, only to learn that they are the prisoners. They finally say that she gave the stolen (fake gems) to Lanyard for safekeeping. Lanyard is puzzled, for he had returned them to Maurice. Just as the arrested Lanyard is confined in his cabin until he reveals the stones, Mrs. Cromer appears with the genuine necklace, which she had never misplaced and left on his desk with instructions that they be deposited in the safe. Maurice, to disprove her faith in Lanyard, Fay says that he and Lanyard gave them to the purser. Embarrassed the captain orders the prisoner undress with Pinn. Despite the evidence Lanyard remains certain Maurice is among the strong in his trunk. During lunch with his son Lanyard is summoned aboard. He is astounded when Maurice surprises and disappears climbing the ensuing Lanyard's cabin after letting a parcel to him. To save his father, Maurice had replaced the jewels with the stones.

"Listen, mug: if I was doin' my jewel, I wouldn't be on this side of the boat; I'd be on the other side, up The Boyce." The voice nanned one of the members of the passenger-list, a lady internationally famous for the ropes of pearls which had accumulated in the course of her cosmopolitan person as souvenirs of her matrimonial excursions in the Near-East range. "Maybe you didn't lamp the man tonight, but you could tell that she was bewidged with the weight of it! Hah, nah, I jus' dropped in to be sociable like, and I'm glad I did, fair!"

"I still think you've called at the wrong address. I'm quite certain I don't know you."

"You ain't goin' to, natther, next time you meet me up on deck or anywhere."

"Don't be too sure. My nose is very sensitive. Would you mind shifting back a bit? I'm unarmed."

"Pinny ain't, neither. Well, all right, only don't be as comical as you can, or maybe you'll find out my first finger's on the trigger as well as your nose is."

"Very well," Lanyard sighed. "It is true that when it comes to repartee you have me at a decided disadvantage. And now would you mind coming to the point?"

"I should've thought bright guy like you would've tumbled already. You don't need to be told you're in a jam, I know you're a pest!"

"To what extent, precisely?"

"Buttin' into friendly games of cards, for instance, and breakin' 'em up with your fancy work."

"It was stupid of me not to have guessed. Only a month ago I should've called once today to square that account by you, Mr. Ember, a jewel-thief. What new move is this? Do I get—as I believe you say—bumped off by a bullet?"

"I'll say, anyway, you've got your nerve with you."

Chapter XVII

"And now that is settled, can we get on with our business?"

"You ain't got no business with me. I am, bo. I'm just here to tell you that we're on."

"On to what, pray?"

"The way you've broke in this son of yours into the ink o' the Wolf stuff while you keep the highhat lyrah for yourself, that's how we're in for a fifty-fifty cut on anything you come across."

"But who, please, are 'we'?"

Mis and Ma and I work with—"

"Jack-knife Anderson and Count Ish Archie?"

"Ain't so dumb as you let on, are you? And that works both ways; I mean this fifty-fifty cut goes on anything you and the punk get away with that we don't lay off to, see? these emeralds, now. When you turn them over, you got your full fifty."

"Your intelligence isn't functioning any too well, if you don't know they're with the purser."

"You won't get an awful lot on squibbing we don't know about. We been on the lines of taking the Cromer dame for them jewels before they've been put through the customs."

"We mean you will, for we, I'm, too easy for you two, with the old girl as easy as you are, you and the Cromer kid sweet on the punk."

"Jack and I, we, if my son and I, refuse—steal them!"

Ember's face darkened into a grunt and was for a moment silent as he struggled to some noise in the passageway. The pistol remained firmly planted, but Lanyard could see the blood vaguely silhouetted against the window-port of Ember's cabin. The latter's habit of position enabled him to see more than this; the face was cropped with a close fringe of beard. But what the noises that had alarmed the gunman could not be guessed. He repeated, His head swung back to Lanyard.

"You ain't goin' to refuse, feisty-like, to come in? For if you did do anything foolish like that—"

"Why, you're dumb, either! You don't know you're dippy about the punk and Fay, to Fay to far back on us, and right in the jam with us, on the spot, too!"

Fay because he was acquainted with the grisly significance of the chloroform bottle. Fay, he thought, Lanyard slowly repeated: "On the spot."

In the same breath he was aware that the noises had again begun to agitate, his alarm this time so far aroused that he could not keep the pistol an inch or so from its first position. Ember's head swung back together, Lanyard prepared in anticipation of movements to throw himself to one side or the other. He was alone.

Before he could put this intention into execution, however, the door of the passageway opened; and the gunman, disappearing with a jerk made to rise—and finding Lanyard on his feet—in the next instant, knocked, lost balance, fell, and went to the floor under his assailant's knee, pinioned by one arm, blind and frantic scrambling for-ward with the other for the pistol exploded. And as if that shot had been a signal, the room was all at once drenched in light.

Fives hurld with excitement in a dozen languages and their look to the tableau on the floor; then the light was switched off at the door and an ear to the door. Turning from the light in a voice at once tense and confident:

"Up—get up, and let him up! Quick, I'll have you shown to your cabin!"

But Lanyard, transferring his hold to the gunman's collar, rose and hauled him to his feet. Marion stood in the doorway, a wicked right to the fellow's jaw. His head lolled limply, but he rallied just till only their bloodshot white showed, and struggled with his assailant's weight. Still moving with the most extraordinary quickness and economy, Maurice closed in and caught the body, swung it toward the far end of the cabin, and with a shove that thrust a hand into one of the post lights, sent it flying. Then he put his might.

There was now a rumor of feet and voices in the passageway and Lanyard heard the still shadowy of he had worn over his face fall and carefully licked it under the light. The effect of his change of jacket together, and had time to don the dark one he was wearing when before the door was unceremoniously battered in. Lanyard was left in with one at his heels whom Lanyard recognized as the first officer, and every man of the crew and officers for backing.

In the next minute late, master, Maurice forestalled the officer's questions with a cry: "The bandit you see on the floor there is the one who shot at me. I had to attend to his case in point of self-protection."

Pinn comprehended the huddled body and goggled at it, his jaw dropping. The first officer asked for information.

"It is Macdonnicelle Boyce who has just been robbed of a priceless necklace," he announced. "Inform the captain at once," he commanded the first officer. "Let her have the attention of the stewards on night duty. They will be responsible for this gentleman and dart up this passage . . . There is no time to lose!"

"Sharp work!" Maurice applauded. Pinn, the father and son chatting when he broke in like a bombshell and threatened us with his pistol. It was plain that the was feasible himself with terror—I hated not to have my camera, mesters—take him."

"Yes, I see," Pinn was spacing. Procured to the unconscious Ember and knelt to reassure his clothing. As Maurice finished, the detective fished from one coat pocket a rope and pocket.

Chapter XVIII

When the dinner-hour in the table-a-manger drew to its close, the first officer, Pinn, and Lanyard, seated at the continued failure of Maurice to appear, caused the chief engineer's table, Lanyard was somewhat relieved countenance to find Fennno Crozier seated there.

"If it's just paternal solicitude that makes you so remote tonight, Mr. Lanyard," he began, "I beg you will no use your keeping an eye on the compassionate; your hand is mixing with the people this evening."

"No? Where, then—since you apparently know—is that innocent straying?"

"Straying?" Penno put a crinkle in her nose quizzically. "That's not bad, you know—the characterization you didn't know considered. Maurice is the boy's name, isn't it? Has been with Tom Boyce and her gang. Just think of Maurice straying—to please his honor, for saving her pearls from the sea. Really!"

"Indeed?" Lanyard smiled against the grain; say what you would, the sheer impudence of the example so cropping such a testimonial was irresistible. "Gratitude," he presently submitted, to cover his thoughtful hesitation, "is not customarily a virtue of the young."

"You don't think so? Not really?"

"But think what obligations it imposes on the elderly!"

"Oh, I shouldn't fret about that young man. If I were his father, I fancy you'll find he knows his way about."

"I will believe you," Lanyard solemnly agreed. "Then too—even if the boy's father is not present—at the moment—a winner of the Cabot Medal for Valor is in a fair class among her guns."

"Oh, I say!" Penno with fine inconsistency confessed her feelings. "The boy is sweet, you know."

"It takes more than personal charm to win the Cabot accolade at Cartier's."

"But even the hard-boiled have their captors, monsieur!"

"Not the old pearls, I grant you. But assuming Maurice's motive to settle down and turn his gifts to account—"

"He will. He's clever."

"Then the pearls—the pearls of the next several years would impede his way for the least of Madame Boyce's necklaces. Don't you think?"

"Honest, monsieur?"

"Honest monsieur from such windfalls as a lucky sweepstake. Don't you think?"

Fay Crozier here rose to the lure of a fish-story by an ear-catalyst.

"I think you know how happy I would be to believe that what you say—"

"You may, monsieur." Penno put up his napkin to signals Pinn to get jewel robbery a good press agent. "Do you expect to find him on deck, or—"

"Her last was a flop; that's a fact. But you expect to find him on deck, gratitude in the open air?"

"Figure to yourself that one has yet to learn the experience of the sea!"

Lanyard stared.

"Do you mean to tell me she isn't on deck tonight?"

"She might have been, madame, but she isn't her forte. She approached us in a state that was the younger Delibes. I believe Penno plans to put on a concert. The pianos plain enough and must be in the music-room, for the time. The current fiance half as much again as the last, and twice as much as the last privately to her, and agree to buy back everything on demand at a profit. She was with difficulty persuaded that the idea was not a wise one, and took her custom, with the pianos, elsewhere."

"It sounds lifelike." Fay Crozier made a scandalized face. "The things they tell about that one! I'm thankful my sons are her brother. One has heard enough from other quarters to make him blush forever without detailed substantiation."

"Then of course everybody knows what the woman is. I only hope Maurice hasn't any more books in-to that fine boy of yours."

"I had already occurred to me to breathe a word of caution — and Lanyard, reflecting that youth are prone to resent being talked to-for their own good, thought better—furthermore, hasn't any name for setting time on small fry.

Still, and for all that, the newfound father in Lanyard fretted, and his mind was not at rest with attention. It wasn't enough that he should have Maurice's gay repudiation of his guidance to discourage; Maurice's infatuation with a rogue's life and contempt of all consequences, his delight in such company, his pleasure in the life of ample, turned his light squeak of the night into a coup-de-grace. Now Lanyard had to be reminded that the society of Penno Cromer and her circle was the worst in the world for a man of Maurice's youngness.

And nothing to be done about it, unless, perhaps, by means so subtle that he, Lanyard, should be unaware of his father's hand in them.

Lanyard sighed, blanched at this question, and then, thoughtlessly, put it to Fay Crozier.

"I plously trust never to be so with none. That would be supplication, monsieur," Fay replied with Pinn.

Lanyard conduct on the part of any suspect is suspicious." Pinn less acidulously observed, and made the opportunity to be sententious.

"One is to infer, then, that one has the distinction to be on the list of eight a suspect?"

"That is what gave a snort: "Do you take me for a fool?"

"It is not my fault, monsieur, if there is a problem on my hands."

"Monsieur is too amiable to praise his fine facility to the tenets of my profession."

"Not 'praise' monsieur-le-commissaire. Rather, I prefer a policeman to a policeman."

"Like you! Yet no more so than a crook reformed is merely a crook in reform."

Lanyard patiently let the creature have his crucible out.

"Accept felicitations on your brilliant dialectics," he at length remarked, "and let me have all respect if the display has perhaps been wasted. Monsieur, I have told just now admitted by implication you did not look me up tonight without a purpose. Let me help you, can that be if not to persuade me to tell you something which you do not know but assume I do, something striking to you have not yet confided in reading out about last night's affair? The inference is that you consider me in some way responsible for making his crime with the affair of Miss. Crozier's emeralds, and nonsidering me responsible, I am willing too late, my good Pinn, that you have had only to ask me to tell you."

"Undoubtedly yourself, monsieur." Pinn was frankly unruffled. "On the contrary, I had little difficulty ascertaining much to my purpose. Philadelphia Jack Anderson I found and put his back to the rail, the better to cross the Pyrenees with a most admirable. "You have detained the gentleman's identity, then?"

"Not as to that. There was never any question. It so happens that I have him at sight: one Etienne Carrel, a Parisian Apache and his mother an American, you will be interested to learn, who put it!"—equally at home in either country.

"Parbleu!" Lanyard cried, "speaking the thieves' cant of his native Paris with the perfect ease of late years to New York. Where protection is always to be had for the asking, and the key to the American mobs, travelling under the name of Lanyard and a alias of Edward Parrel; known to the police of both cities as Lone Wolf."

"Nothing to be gained by pretending to be unaware of the reputation formerly enjoyed by him to cabin; Lanyard, his brows at a mildly apprehensive frown, his eyes upon a mouth pulled down in depression, his head shaking in dismay.

It was not for him, however, to stop the flow of Pinn's words, stooping toward him through the passageway.

"A low tone of laughter the van of the party turned the abouter of the passageway, and the first officer and sprightly figure detached, lowering himself to the floor, and Lanyard a hand crossed with jewels.

"You mustn't mind my foolishness, M. Lanyard," was born Penno's voice, "if I am the last to confess it. I've been a fool about men; and I spend my eyes and my money on them, and I'm always making my dressing-table, where I'd left a lot of this junk, look like a five-and-ten. I'm sure, I couldn't believe my eyes—it seemed so cheeky, you know, to have left them there, but I'm for a moment, though—only till he explained that he'd found them, and meant—he seemed I'd wanted them, I guess, though I hadn't missed it—to give them to me himself. I'm afraid I've been a horrid beast to you, because he didn't stop a second to explain, but I was so shocked that I did not look it on the lam. And then I was—"

"You were able to identify the prisoner, then?"

"Why, I saw that wicked to Lanyard's awe almost too guileless. "Of course I recognized him with the goods on. I'd never've believed it of him, but there he was."

"I see; he declared the room too quickly."

"Not quick that I didn't get a snapshot of a man a head taller, and I think I'd've got a better one your son helped pinch. Putting that down, Maurice didn't make such a difference, you see—it was so dim and the room so bright. I know what I mean, between the two lights, and I'm sure I'd've got a good picture."

"Then you have your own?" Why, if it hadn't turned out the way it did, if they'd left it to me to pick out a photograph, I'd've had my pick of pictures. I'd have let my left hand know what my right hand was about, but going on the way he was."

"Then he is in possession?"

"I was about to mean." The woman at a sudden shocked realization of the words, and her face, in the shadow and gave out wicked glimmer. "Monsieur Lanyard, you tried to tie you to identify the thief."

"Sure would. He just don't know his father is a pretty good photographer, if you know what I mean. Why, they're just everything I've been wanting to get of Maurice, by, these pearls, and some fancy work I've been doing on the sweet faded old always."

The thin sarcastic lips of Mr. Inquiry were pressed tight, and he sat back, writhed in mild anguish; and Lanyard, watching him, was moved to gusty mirth.

Penno joined the first excuse he could, with good grace, to withdraw his person as well as his mirth from the table, but Lanyard was not so out of sight, laughth leaned his head against the back of his chair.

"Holy work, kid." he breathed when he could speak. "I'll say you got the wind up the old fox was good, and I'll say you're a good girl; don't let him forget a minute he's sitting on powder-magazine, and you're very much like to play him off against the punk and get away with it. Leave it to your son, him and his wheely light to get the pearls back to the right owner."

Penno looked at him with a twinkle, he noted through the pansies in bowl where they were standing, and a pretty picture they made, too, against the mahogany, but the mere distraction of the voice outside somewhat disconcerted him. He was not sure he drew the bolt. A grin of speculation curved the pipe in Carrel's teeth as he entered.

"Don't mind me out for rubber, your night's not to be beaten, and I'm—shot the bolt himself as I can—not to be trusted. I'll bet you figured I'd better give you this break to get rid of the pearls, and you're wrong; but if I'm right, the less confabulatin' and you do behind-the-hand work from now on, the better."

"Figure to yourself that I have very confidence in you, Michael yourself as sane, my friend, even when the spirit moves you, most lucid."

"I only want to know what you know. If anything. Crane dropped himself on the foot of the bed and lamped his pipe with a vague gaze which Lanyard took to accept as observation. "About this kid of yours and the Boyce outfit. What's the lay? Is he on the level or is he makin' over him?"

"I don't honestly know. I am sure, about the service Maurice did Penno—"

"Yeah. I heard about it. I'm sure the number of cooperators nobody ever tells me anything—"

"But you have been invisible all day, Michael, and presumably; one has had no chance to—"

"O, K. But it's hard to forget old habits. I can't seem to break myself of plotting with anybody people leave about. Careless-like, and then fishin' them together. It's got a pretty good idea of what happened to the pearls, and I'll bet you a dime I think about it." Crane with his gravity professed. "I bust right in laughing."

"Laughing?"

"Ah! the idea of a lad barely out of his teens tackling a tough egg like Ember, and the old man—you'll be a fool and flattin' a mess of stolen pearls out of his poke."

"Then you think it a good thing, Penno who found them—"

"Sure, I think it's swell." Crane with ambiguous readiness agreed. "He has to find 'em, anyway, because I'm not himself, and I'm not going to cop himself a piece of credit. Then French dicks are the hottest ever, and I'm sure they'll be tickled to have looked right to let an some of the credit for any right side of the picture."

"You do not like M. Pinn, I believe?"

"I don't think as much of him as Penno does. I'm sure he'll be the Dubkis of me is nobody's bear cub."

"You are—if the question is not indiscreet—professionally at odds with him?"

"It isn't that, so much. Crane and Lanyard at each open face. "But that he'd thank me to 'tend to my own business, and I'm afraid that night wouldn't have come off if he hadn't been so busy with the Cromer dame. I tried to wise Miss Jack-knife and Eagles Archie probably had some kind of a hunch something was in the air, but he wouldn't listen. That Ember would be the one to get it was admitted, on an American ship or maybe in Paris, but not here. I reckon that were legally entitled to the sacred act of the—"

"Monsieur Lanyard!" Penno's caline was pleased to be comical."

The Missing Man

-:- by -:-

Mary R. P. Hatch

"A curious letter," said the detective, staring blankly at the Sitting.

"Yes, he must have seen the newspapers," returned Hamilton.

"Probably thought the affair of the disputed note hadn't come to light yet."

"That is what I thought," said the president.

"But he is right about the possibility that the letter may be all correct, the commissioner says. The letter says Osborn is as tanned as the day and yet Mrs. Hamilton C. client has failed to make proper entries he knows nothing about it."

"So he does! I never thought of that. Osborn would make the entries if Hamilton was not in, and Hamilton was seldom at the bank more than two hours a day. What does the letter mean, do you think?"

"There seem to be two meanings, and which flatly contradict each other. He himself speaks on October, and yet says he is as tanned as the day. If there is any complicit on the clerk's part, it would be for Hamilton's interest to have him thought innocent. On the other hand, they seem at odds. Hamilton looks at others, and Osborn states that he saw Hamilton enter the bank on the night of the twenty-second."

"True," said President Hamilton, looking puzzled. "It is a strange case, taken in all its aspects, I wish it could be discovered that the cashier is an honest man. It injures trust in human nature to find one whom we have put full confidence we have been deceived.

"Mr. Hamilton was, I hear, a man much respected."

"He was, and his wife still has implicit trust in him."

Remembering Mrs. Hamilton's manner, Mr. Bruce could not perfectly agree with him, but said nothing.

"You are in her employ, are you not?" said the president.

"I am. I reported to her this morning."

"Did she show you her advertisement of the reward she offers for information of her husband's—"

"No, perhaps she thought I had seen it."

The prudent handed him a journal and pointed to the notice, saying as he did so:

"She came to me and together we wrote it. It was before developments about the changed amount of the note." The detective read:

$500 Reward.—Vans C. Hamilton, of Greenville, N.H., has been missing since May 16th, unless, he is stated by one person, he was at the savings bank the twenty-second. Mr. Hamilton is thirty-five years of age; five feet ten inches in height; weighs about one hundred and fifty pounds; has a slight swinging gait, light brown hair, dark brown eyes; has no beard but a heavy mustache. When he left home was dressed in a gray tweed suit with dark coat, a light black overcoat, and black derby hat. The above amount will be paid to any one through whose efforts he is returned to Greenville.

MRS. V. C. HAMILTON.

Correspondence should be addressed to Mr. Vans Hamilton, President, Crowdale Savings Bank.

"Has this advertisement resulted in any correspondence yet?" asked the detective.

"A letter from conductor Libby reached me this morning."

It lay on the desk and he handed it to the detective, who read it attentively.

"There seems to have been a woman with him, you see," said the president.

"Yes; and the conductor says that Hamilton acted strangely, almost as if he did not recognize him, though they have known each other for years."

"Libby knows everybody—has been on the train thirty years," said Mr. Hastings.

"What about this woman? If it was an elopement, of course, Hamilton would fight shy of recognition."

"But was it? I confess that puzzles me most of all, for Hamilton seemed thoroughly devoted to his wife, and she is a good woman. But it appears this Mrs. Anderson, or whatever her name may be, met him the an old acquaintance, and after stating at the hotel that she was on her way to Caribou, P.Q., went the next morning south instead of north. In the same train with Hamilton. Read what Libby says about it."

"They sat together and the woman was talkative but Hamilton did not say much. As I passed them, she bought a ticket on the train to Rockland, but I did not notice her when I went my last rounds. The last I saw of Hamilton was at Portland depot. He did not appear to notice me, though I looked him full in the face."

"Where was the woman, I wonder?" asked Mr. Hastings, after listening to the extract.

"That may or may not be difficult to learn," said the detective, rising to leave, Mr. Hastings arose also.

"Mr. Bruce" said he, "the notice as it reads now offers but five hundred reward, but I am empowered to offer a thousand more, making the sum fifteen hundred. Though for the present no change will be made in the wording, unless you advise it."

"I do not advise it. A change would alarm Hamilton, showing that suspicions had been awakened. At present, the notice reads simply as if it were believed he was missing, or detained against his will, or as if it were feared harm had come to him. To show that he is thought to have absconded with funds of the bank would alarm him directly and put him beyond our reach. But he might even return if he thought nothing was suspected, if it should be authentically stated by you, for instance, that upon examination everything had been found correct. Still he must know the affair of the altered note would leak out some time."

"Yes, and there may be others of still larger amount, Mr. Bruce."

"True. One thing more I wish to ask you. Who presented the note and received the money at the Boston bank?"

"Mr. Hamilton himself."

"Are you sure?"

"I have the written word of Simon Low, the cashier of the bank. Low has been here more than once. He knows Hamilton nearly as well as I do."

"How did he come to write you?"

"He saw in the papers that Hamilton had disappeared, or rather did not return, as was expected, and so wrote to me that he saw Hamilton on the twenty-eighth; that he deposited a note then as collateral for money which was paid to him on the spot. Therefore, Hamilton was all right at that date, I immediately telegraphed to know amount of note, if it was payable to this bank, and by whom it was given. In less than an hour the reply came. It was payable here, the note was for $5,000, and Bowles and Estes were the makers of the note. Of course I knew Bowles and Estes' note was for five hundred, and so it came out, doubtless much sooner than Hamilton expected."

"A dark look!"

"Couldn't look much blacker, boy!"

"No; but I am sorry for his wife," said the detective. "It will be a heavy weight hunting him up."

"I am afraid so. I should say I never wish to see his face again if it was not for his bondsmen."

"Can it be they believe him innocent?"

"Not now. They did until today." Mr. Bruce took his departure shortly afterward, musing deeply over the present developments of this mysterious affair, for exceedingly mysterious it seemed to him. In the whole course of his calling he had known of nothing like it, so puzzling and complicated. But what appeared to be such adverse matters.

Here was a man universally esteemed, who for years had been guilty of nothing worse than mysterious yearly journeys (yet which were supposed to be known enough until now); a devoted husband and father; a member of the Congregational Church, of which he was deacon, though young in the position; cashier of the savings bank where the poor people who invested at his mill deposited their earnings—this man, it seemed, was a defaulter, a forger, the deserter of his wife and family. Worse yet, it appeared also that he had left his wife and gone away in company with another woman, though this did not seem quite so evident.

Confirmation, alight though it might be, was waiting at the corner of the street in the person of Miss Talbert.

"I saw you," she began directly, "when you left the bank, and as I had given you a wrong idea I felt bound to set it right at once."

"Thank you for coming to me. About the handkerchief, Mary, our chambermaid, came in soon after you left and asked if she might have it, as it was marked with her name, and she was the only Mary in the house.

"I suppose you might as well have it, then," I said; 'but how did you happen to know about it?' 'Oh,' said Mary, 'I handed it to Mrs. Anderson when she first came. She was continually dropping things, and I noticed the name. She asked me what it was, and I told her, Mary. She said she did not notice that it had a name on it when she bought it. Before she thought, Mary asked her if it wasn't her name, then, and she said no, her name was Lenox."

The detective was startled out of his general immobility by the infernal workings of the matter. A development like that was startling, when he would have seemed so much more likely to have never come to the surface. But he managed to thank Miss Talbert for her information and to say, "No wonder she did not recognize the name herself. It looked quite as much like a ripsaw as a wheel-barrow. You gave the handkerchief to Mary, I conclude; Mary—what?"

"Mary O'Neil. Yes, I gave it to her."

With excited cries Beach clamored at the gates of the village of his people.

"Open!" he demanded. "Open! Open!" he monotoned him!

Even before the chains of the gates could be loosened the news flew on winged tongues until the village was in an uproar.

Dick and Doc heard the clamor, and they now knew enough of the language to comprehend the reason why Beach was not upon their ears: "Tarman is dead! Tarman killed him!"

Dudah killed him!" The Tarzan Twins were filled with dismay. "It was our fault—all our fault," Doc groaned miserably.

"Yes." Dick agreed; "if we hadn't been foolish enough to get lost in the jungle, none of this would have happened. I suppose this is the end of us, too." Even his usually optimistic face was void of encouragement now. The news of Tarzan had cast a pall over him.

Soon the boys were dragged once again before the cannibal chief, and in their prsence Galla Galla addressed Beach: "It was you who led Tarman to his death. Your reward shall be the choicest morsels at our feast."

Beach looked at the boys and smacked his thick, ugly lips!

The gathering was marred by clashing between the Heimwehrer, supporting Prince von Starhemberg and the Freiheitsbund.

HON. EARL ROWE ELECTED ONTARIO CONSERVATIVE CHIEFTAIN

Great joy reigned in the camp of the Ontario Conservative convention at Toronto after Hon. Earl Rowe was elected to head the provincial party. Mr. Rowe, who is a member for Dufferin-Simcoe in the federal House, must find a seat in the provincial legislature, just as Premier Mitchell Hepburn, the Liberal leader, the new Conservative leader is shown in the above picture being "chaired" by admirers after the election result was announced. He won over Col. Geo Drew after the second ballot. W. J. Stewart and Leopold Macaulay also ran.

A strange sight that attracted much attention in Los Angeles, was the above pictured three-wheeled auto owned by Jack Boothe of Vancouver, B.C., who is making a vacation tour of the southland with his wife, also shown. Boothe, a cartoonist, explained that his car which is quin the rage in England, is a model constructed to get around the heavy English taxes on four-wheeled vehicles. Weighing 950 pounds, the car uses one gallon of gasoline in 60 miles and turns up a speed of 70 miles an hour.
